The Turned-Down Corners

Here and there in the Ledger of Life you have turned down the corner of a page for remembrance sake—you'd forget something if the turned-down corner wasn't there.

To-day, turn down a corner deep and wide to remember this one sure fact : "Quality is remembered long after price is forgotten." Every time you come to that particular page—remember. Every time you try to sell inferior quality, think of the turned-down corner—what it stands for, and what it really means to your success.

Taylor's Candied and Drained Peels

Made in England from the best Corsican peels only. Prepared from finest selected whole fruits—not from fruit skins from which the essential oil has been extracted. Highest quality. Always the same.

"Cox's" Gelatine

Four Reasons why INVICTUS FIBRE is the BEST FIBRE PAPER on the Market

1. Invictus Fibre is made from personally selected pulp wood cut on our own limits.
2. This special pulp wood is again rigidly culled on arrival at our mills
3. The pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made is manufactured in our own pulp mill and transferred at once to the paper mill, avoiding all drawbacks of transportation.
4. Invictus Fibre will increase in strength and not grow hard and brittle as does fibre made from sulphite pulp. This is a quality of the peculiar and selected pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made.

A trial order will convince you that we are correct. See that each package bears the words "Invictus Fibre." Every ream contains 480 sheets wouldn't be considered very profitable by the farmers, yet thousands of merchants are cultivating the weeds of business by continuing the Old Style pass book—errors every day. Forgotten charges. Hundreds of little things make a big aggregate amount. Adopt the modern ALLISON COUPON SYSTEM and throw away your time wasting devices. Look here—

Cultivating Weeds

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? Read What an Expert Says:

"SUGAR IS ALWAYS SUGAR"

Sigmund Stein, English sugar expert at the International Congress of Applied Chemistry at Rome, said; "One often distinguishes between different kinds of sugar, but in fact the product is one and the same. Sugar is sugar from whatever source or raw material it may be manufactured, but the public distinguishes different kinds and varieties, and are lead to this belief by announcements, which I am sorry to say, are circulated for trade purposes, and which advertise the superiority of one type over another. Canada, following the wise lead of the United States, is doing everything she can to encourage a home beet industry."

Mr. Stein did not mean that sugar was not of varying quality. His object was, evidently, to correct the wrong impression that sugar from beet was essentially different from sugar, the product of cane.

Why I Order Southwell's Jams and Marmalades

By HENRY BOLTON

HINT No. 5

I came to the conclusion if so many grocers knew the "so many" good points of Southwell's Jams and Marmalades then my duty plainly was to stock up and see for myself.

I found that when I had the goods the enquiries kept right up, and that on the whole they kept pace with all my enquiries for Canada-made goods.

I found, too, that the people who bought "Southwell's" were always good pay, so I never lost a cent on debts.

TRAVELLERS AND THEIR SPARE TIME

Some Suggestions for the Improvement of it—The Note Book—Learning Languages—Savings Bank for the Small Change of Time.

"The first thing a commercial traveller should do is get the confidence of the people he wants to sell to. If he can do that the orders will come all right."

This was told the Grocer by one of the most successful grocery travellers operating out of Toronto, A. J. Chalue of H. P. Eckardt & Co. For the benefit of the men starting on the road it is given here, and some of the "hogs" may find it good to ruminate on between stations.

The profitable use of spare time is a subject of interest to every one ambitious of success. Calvin D. Wilson, writing in The Sample Case, says of it :

The commercial traveler's leisure differs from that of men located at home. He who lives in one place has the evenings in his house or in his office ; he has hours that he can count on. The travelling man's unoccupied seasons are in small change, waiting for trains, or on railroad rides or buggy trips across country or in his hotel room.

Yet he has many unemployed minutes, which in a week make hours, as dimes and quarters make dollars. What can he do with these that they may count for something in his success ? He can do many things, according to his temperament, health, stage of culture and circumstances. No detailed rules will suit everyone, but general suggestions may prove helpful and each can pick and choose according to his situation. If one does not have a surplus of energy if he has to save up his vital forces in order to concentrate them when in action, it behooves him to seize the idle moments for rest, to sit still in the depot, to doze on the cars, to retire early to his hotel room. Yet even many of the less well-equipped men physically might be benefited by change of mental occupation, according to the present belief that what we often need is not so much repose as the exercise of another set of faculties.

The men with reserves of energy may again be divided into two classes, those who learn chiefly through their senses and such as learn partly by means of reading. The man with a markedly objective mind, who reads principally in the book of men and nature might be diverted from his proper method by advice to become a reader of books and a student.

We have the impression that traveling men, as well as many others, lose much by often failing to have in their pockets notebooks for ideas, suggestions, plans. Oliver Wendell Holmes said : "No man ever yet caught the reins of a thought save as it galloped by him." It is an invaluable practice to have at hand blank book and pencil, and to get into the habit of seizing the reins of thought as they gallop by. Many of these, perhaps most of them, may prove worthless or impracticable, but in any case you have the ideas written down for examination and scrutiny at leisure. The man with the notebook will soon find he is having more bright ideas than came to him formerly. Then he preserves the facts that come to him by the eye or ear for inspection ; he is not trusting to memory which may fail to bring back accurately what he wants when he wants it. The notebook habit causes him to put his ideas into somewhat better shape than if he leaves them unformulated and floating in his mind. The notebook helps him to learn the value of his own thoughts. It gives him a record also of his own ponderings and experiences that may have in the future a larger value than he now perceives. If he saves his thoughts thus, records his observations, while waiting for trains or shut in his hotel room and studies these jottings, he will probably find some diamonds among the pebbles. He may have jotted down in two minutes the idea that proves the germ of a larger future. In times when no new ideas come, the moments may be well spent in looking over the notes already made. Such a course soon comes to have an interest of its own and is a pleasant occupation. It takes away the feeling of wasting time and the spirit of impatience at delays.

There is another line of mental effort, for which odd moments may be utilized, the result of which may be of especial value to traveling men who are able to follow it. This is the learning of a new language. No one needs to be more than reminded that in such a country as ours with its mixed population the knowledge of other languages than English is of every-day value. This is true particularly of traveling men, many of whom are carried by their business into communities where German is commonly spoken. One may be sent by his firm into the French-speaking portion of Canada or Louisiana. His employers may require a man who can talk with the Mexicans in their own tongue, or go into the settlements of the Swedes or Norwegians. His house may have extensive plans that reach out over Europe. In any of these cases the man who is already equipped with a working knowledge of German, French or Spanish may get the plum of the mission. Being able to do what the majority cannot do, he gets a better salary, and if sent abroad gets foreign travel thrown in Spare minutes tell wonderfully in the acquiring of a new language. The mind comes to it as a change and so with fresh interest. The little learned in a fragmentary way gets in time to be fixed in the memory. Of course some men have no faculty at all for new languages and such, after a fair trial, will have to limit their sphere of business to the people who talk their native tongue. But after all, most men can do far better in learning another language than they think at first thought. Nearly any one can get a speaking acquaintance with German, French or Spanish, if he sets himself about it in the right way. A beginning can be made by the use of such little books as are to be gotten in almost any book store. These appear under some such titles as "How to Speak German Without a Teacher." Any librarian or book dealer can give the information. Something at least may be acquired in this manner and such a book may be carried about and conned anywhere at odd times. A few weeks of this study will bring a man along to a point where he will see what further help he needs. If he can be in one place long enough to get the assistance of a teacher, so much the better. He may in some cases be able to get in touch with night schools or the classes in languages in the Y.M.C.A. Presently he will be reading German or French books on his journeys and talking in these languages on his travels to any who understand them. In due time through use of spare time, he will be equipped for a wide field of employment.

The ambitious traveling man who has gotten a working knowledge of one foreign language will not be likely to stop there. It is a general experience that the learning of other languages becomes much easier after the first one. As is well known, all classes of people in Europe think little of knowing several languages beside their own ; of course they often have the advantage of hearing these spoken around about them. Yet what is done by unschooled European peasants ought to prove simple for as bright men as American commercial travelers commonly are.

Reading with a purpose, for some definite end, is of course, a universally desirable use of spare time. This may or may not be apparently of immediately available import, yet may further us greatly. President Roosevelt has stated that he is fond of reading in his leisure hours the history of the dismemberment of the empire of Alexander the Great. This seems a rather remote subject from American politics ; and yet the completed record of the causes and changes that disintegrated one of the greatest empires of ancient times afford a picture in which to study the perils of modern society. The statesman who is familiar with these stories of the past is better able to understand and forestall the dangers of America. Cecil Rhodes, the great empire builder of South Africa, was a constant reader of Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," and doubtless thereby had his mind enlarged to understand the scope of the problems of the British Empire.

The intellectual horizon of the traveling man, whose actual business of selling goods may seem quite disconnected from general knowledge, will unquestionably be widened by the reading of history, for example. The wider and stronger his mind, provided he does not sink into a book worm, the better he can do business. He will have a clearer and saner judgment. When reading is connected with daily activity there is little peril of its making men impractical. Roosevelt is one of the best read men of the day and his scholarship has not impaired his practical judgment. The traveling man might well read all American history to advantage. He might take up an elaborate history of business from its beginning to its present developments. Still better, if he aims at culture, would it be to plan a course of reading such as would cover all the most important subjects, history, ethics, political economy, finance and so on. At the end of a few years, by use of spare time alone, he would have furnished himself with all the general facts that any man in any occupation may have gained. He surely should guard against feeding his mind exclusively with the very interesting but scrappy information to be gotten from newspapers and magazines; such reading will at most afford but a superficial knowledge of anything.

If one has a particular bent, he should follow it if it is along lines that promise development. The man of inventive turn may, in his odd moments, note and work out some needed invention. The man of mechanical mind certainly might find pleasure and profit by searching the world as he goes about for the things that are needed or that can be improved. Another man has a turn for mathematics; if he has, he possessses a gift that, worked constantly and to its utmost, may at any time bring forth fruit to his great advantage. We are told that Mr. Hughes, the governor-elect of New York, takes with him on his vacations books on mathematics and such works as Kant's Philosophy. When he had the investigation of insurance matters on his hands, his great skill in mathematics served him well. It seems a long way about for a lawyer to spend time on mathematics and philosophy; yet mathematics in this case, as in many another, worked directly into his practice and Kant's Philosophy doubtless kept him in touch with noble views of human life, and with processes of pure reason. Likewise, the commercial traveler may find any real study while in his leisure. The improvement of mind will certainly serve him and the particular knowledge may at any time fit into a place in his work.

There are still other men who are travelers who have in them, perhaps in an undeveloped state, the gift of writing for the press. The leisure of such may be well employed by writing of their interesting or unusual experiences for the newspapers or magazines, or preparing material for a book, a story, a novel, or a volume on business or on their particular kind of work. Many writers would think they had a gold mine if they were in possession of the impressions and experiences of such commercial travelers as have long made their rounds over a great scope of country.

Reading for relaxation has its fit place and seasons and the commercial traveler requires, at least at times, to get away from the actual world into the realm of romance and of poetry and he does well to permit himself the privilege within reason. He surely ought besides to equip himself with some of the vital books that impress the principles of sound faith and wise living. He cannot afford to be without a strong grasp on the truth and his spititual relations and duties. Otherwise, the spare moments will be the seasons of depression and of darkness. The man who is brave in the actual contact with men and with business is apt to feel unnerved and cheerless in the idle hours.

" 'Tis not in the battle nor in the strife
We feel benumbed and wish to be no more
But in the after silence on the shore
When all is lost us but a little life."

In the lonely times, in the lull of the battle, we need anchorage and hope and faith. He is wise who, at such times, has in his grip a book that will rekindle his soul and show him the great truths that remain and are the same both when we are glad and busy and when we are listless and solitary.

The opportunities for exercise and improvement of health in odd moments should not be overlooked. On journeys Talmage used to get off the train during its stops and walk briskly up and down the platform for a few minutes. When he was lecturing, he would take a street car line from his hotel to the country and treat himself to a five or ten minutes' run. The commercial traveler who has ten minutes wait at the depot can step out into the open and fill his lungs with fresh air or snatch a brief walk for a few squares. The spare minutes of each day will do much to invigorate him if he seizes them.

BUSINESS MEN IN MUNICIPAL LIFE

No. 7

J. T. Goldthorpe, better known in Huron County as "Joe" Goldthorpe, is proprietor of the fine brick grocery store in Saltford, just across the Maitland River from Goderich. He has been doing business here now for fifteen years, supplying the bulk of the village requirements and doing a first-class farm trade. Since the C.P.R. contractors have been operating at this end of the Guelph & Goderich, large gangs of workmen are generally quartered in Saltford, and some of this trade comes the way of Mrf Goldthorpe. Some years ago the establishment was destroyed by fire, with little or no insurance, a shock from which few men would have been energetic enough to recover completely so soon. At that time the present brick store and residence was built, and it is now quite equal to most of those found in large towns.

J. T. Goldthrope, Goderich.

Mr. Goldthorpe was elected in January last to a position at the Council Board of the town of Goderich, although really a non-resident, and needless to say, he is "one of the best." He has built a large number of houses in Goderich; there was a time when some people gave their address as "Goldthorpe's Row," but nowadays nobody would know just which "Row." J. T. is Vice-President of the Goderich Planing Mills Co., Limited.

Mr. Goldthorpe was for several years collector for Colborne Township, and is still Treasurer of that municipality. As Manager of the Point Farm Summer Resort, he is well known to a large clientele of visitors from points near and far-off. Councillor Goldthorpe is General Manager of the Maitland River Power Co., a company who purpose harnessing the Maitland River, and whose bonds were on July 7th of this year guaranteed by the town of Goderich to the amount of $150,000. This concern is closely connected with the Ontario West Shore Electric Railway Company who hold a charter for the construction of an electric road from Sarnia to Owen Sound, with a belt line around most of the important Huron County points. Several citizens are interested in both companies, and it is obvious that their interests are closely connected. Mr. Goldthorpe, with others, is convinced of the great possibilities and ultimate success of this project, and indeed the future prosperity of Goderich is bound up in their success in no little measure.

As another evidence of public spirit, Mr. Goldthorpe has just been putting his shoulder to the wheel in aid of the Goderich Wheel Rigs Co. and the Jackson Mfg. Co., two new Goderich industries which the townspeople almost unanimously voted to aid, on Saturday, Nov. 10th.

With all these varied interests, Mr. Goldthorpe finds it necessary to be frequently absent for long periods from his store, but he has a capable manager in the person of his daughter, Miss Alma, who has long been the buyer of the establishment. It is worthy of notice that the younger commercial men never shirk the long walk to Saltford over the Goderich hill.

A DAINTY GREETING.

D. J. Rattray, of D. J. Rattray & Sons, Montreal, sent to his friends a very pretty Christmas greeting in the form of a card brochure. The front bears the word "Greeting" in gold and mother-of-pearl, framed in gold and suspended from it by gold chains the letters, also in gold, "XMAS." An initial "R" in gold at the right hand corner and two diminutive bows of blue ribbon completed the decorations. The interior inscription was

With Best Wishes for A Happy Christmas.

HAMILTON'S PRIDE.

Probably the finest window display ever seen in Hamilton was that made by Bain & Adams, the leading King St. E. grocers. In their two large show windows were most temptingly displayed seasonable fruits and table delicacies, the large space above being completely filled with artificial grape-vines hung with luscious looking bunches of grapes, illuminated with tiny electric bulbs. Bain & Adams conduct a model grocery and cater to the finest trade in the city.

TRAVELLERS' BANQUET BOARD

Canadian Association Members Sit in for a Jolly Time—Some Inspiring Speeches—How a Traveller May Improve His Time.

The Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada held a banquet on Wednesday, 26th December, in the Temple Building, Toronto. About 250 sat down to enjoy the good things provided. President Thos. McQuillan, than whom no more popular presiding officer ever graced the chair, officiated. The entertainment was one gotten up by a special committee under the charge of W. J. Hopgood, the mover of this special exclusively travelers banquet, and he and his fellow workers are deserving of the highest praise for their work and the success of the first really travelers' banquet.

J. W. Wood

President McQuillan proposed the toast of The King, which was drunk with enthusiasm, and the rendering of the national anthem demonstrated that the travelers were not only loyal citizens, but possessors of magnificent voices. The leading Toronto choirs could be materially strengthened by the acquisition of some of them.

A song by Mr. Beatty, "Rule Brittannia," preceded the second toast of "Canada," to which Mr. Hopgood responded. This gentleman is one of the best known travelers and workers for everything that is good for the association, is a fluent and eloquent speaker and did his subject and himself credit.

The Man With the Wad.

After the rendering of The Maple Leaf and a song by Mr. Brownell, the toast of "The Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada" was replied to by E. Fielding, treasurer. The boys apparently appreciate the services rendered to the association by Mr. Fielding as he was received with cheers and flattering remarks referring to the fact that "He was a Daisy." Briefly, but clearly and convincingly he referred to the splendid position occupied by the C.T.A. to-day. He brought out the fact that the death rate of the C.T.A. was lower than that of any straight line insurance company in Canada. During the past seven years, they, the travelers, had paid out to the widows and orphans of their fellow travelers, $246,127 besides expending $6,097 out of the special relief fund. His recital of several instances where unfortunate travelers and their families had been relieved from want and distress, impressed those present feelingly, and his appeal to the boys for their individual dollars towards the fund will no doubt be productive of more material for relieving suffering.

A song by Mr. Barnard, "The Sea is my Sweetheart," was well rendered. Ald. Joseph Oliver proposed the toast of "The Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Association of Canada," coupling the names of S. R. Wickett and Harry Goodman and president Jos. Taylor with it. These gentlemen all did justice to their subject and as all of them had been active and energetic workers in the C.T.M.B.A., they were able to give their fellow travelers important and satisfactory news and statistics. The popular, big and jovial Solly Walters rendered a song "Love's Magic Spell" so satisfactorily that an encore was demanded. This response was the favorite ballad, "On the Kankakee and the Kokomo."

The toast of "The Wholesale and Manufacturing Interests" was proposed by President McQuillan and responded to by J. N. Woods, managing director of Gordon Mackay & Co., Limited, wholesale dry goods, and Thos. Kinnear, of T. Kinnear & Co., wholesale grocers, and John F. Ellis, of Barber & Ellis Co., Limited. The replies of these gentlemen were punctuated with a cornet solo by Mr. Jenner, song by Mr. McGregor, "El Pandelero," and "The Dear Little Shamrock," and character songs by Will White.

A Time Saver.

Mr. Woods' remarks were of a character to impress every traveler present with the dignity of his calling and the great possibilities for advancement of the commercial interests of our great country. He impressed upon every traveler the necessity of occupying his many enforced hours of idleness through delayed trains, waiting around for customers to view samples, long railway and water trips, the long between-seasons warehouse hours, etc., taking a course of study of good reading, etc., and in every way to study all things pertaining to his business. As an instance of how much time a traveler has for such improvement he mentioned that he had crossed the Atlantic on buying trips ninety times and a calculation showed him that he had in these trips spent about three years of his life, as long as a graduate of a university spends in securing his degree.

Mr. Woods was pleased to see so many young faces among the travelers. This was the day of the young men and he impressed upon them the importance of the great opportunities presented to them in every branch of trade and commerce. The history of the world shows nothing greater in the way of progress and development than that which is going on in Canada to-day. He also advised against the "get-rich-quick" policy, gambling in stocks, mining shares, etc., and urged them to study the great responsibilities of their day and time, and asked them not to forget that times of great opportunities were times of great responsibilities. "Our country is in the very flood tide of prosperity, but the higher that tide rises the greater will be the amount of commercial wreckage left in its wake when it recedes." It was his opinion that the Boards of Trade and the Commercial Travelers' Associations could work hand in hand on many matters of mutual interest. The transportation question was one that should be taken hold of by them in conjunction with the Boards of Trade, as it affected them mutually. Fire insurance was another subject every traveler could use for the good of his customers and employers by offering suggestions as to protecting himself and his employers' interests at the same time. Mr. Woods' address was the feature of the evening and coming as it did from one who had worked his way up by hard work through all the stages of good and bad times, on the road, and in the warehouse, until he had reached the eminent position he occupied to-day in one of Canada's greatest dry goods houses, was a visible and living example of what a young man and traveler can do in this country.

Tell the Truth, Boys.

Mr. Kinnear endorsed Mr. Woods' remarks in toto, emphasizing the importance of a traveler telling the truth about the goods he sells. "It pays in the long run," he said, "and you may lose an order now and again, but the loss is only a temporary one. Your customer will come back when he finds out that you have dealt honestly with him. Learn to know your goods, study them thoroughly so that you can speak emphatically and authoritatively when selling. If you are thoroughly posted on your goods no competitor can draw a herring across the track and kill your sale." Mr. Kinnear also laid stress upon the improvement in the system of selling goods. It was different now to thirty years ago when it was the almost unbreakable custom to take your customer out for a drink, before making a sale. The reverse is now the case—it seemed to him that this was nothing more or less than buying trade. He didn't believe in buying trade, it was not necessary. Superior knowledge on the part of the traveler, properly conveyed to his customer, will win out in the end.

Mr. Ellis spoke for the manufacturing interests and as a life-long member of the C.T.A. and one of the charter members of the association he was always heart and hand with them in the work they were doing.

Mr. Rice rendered a sea song very acceptably, after which Ed. Burns and his troupe of professional musicians, recruited from the ranks of the travelers presented in character the rock and soul moving, "The leader of the German Band." This was the "piece de resistance" of the evening and thunders of applause greeted the talented leader and his assistant artists.

To the Sisters.

The toast of the "Sister Societies" was responded to by Mr. J. H. Morin, of the Dominion Travelers' Association, Montreal. W. H. Gray, of the Western Association (London, Ont.). Mr. Morin conveyed to those present the pleasing news that Premier Gouin, of Quebec, had promised to repeal the objectionable Travelers' Tax in that province. "The Ladies," responded to by R. L. Baker and Mr. Charles, both eloquently as became the subject. "The Press" was briefly replied to by W. H. Seyler, business manager Canadian Grocer, representing The MacLean Publishing Co., Limited, publishers of trade journals, and Mr. Briggs, of the new travelers' magazine, "On the Road."

Excess Baggage Checks.

Harry Goodman's little story of the Ottawa young lady visiting in Toronto was much enjoyed. The young lady in question attended a society ball in Toronto, and was there introduced to a gentleman, a commercial traveller, a fine, polished man of the road. During one of the pauses of the dance the young lady asked him what his profession or business was, she, from his appearance and style, judged him to be a banker or lawyer. He said, "I am a commercial traveller." Oh, dear, she exclaimed, quite shocked, "Why in Ottawa they do not allow commercial travellers in the best society." "Well, neither do they here," he answered.

The number of bald young men at the feast was a noticeable feature. The worries of business and the strenuous times are very trying.

It was the first Travellers' Banquet, travellers as speakers and entertainers, and being unique by the absence of imported politicians and professional after-dinner speakers, established a happy precedent. The speaking was of a high order and purely "among the boys."

E. Fielding—the Man With the Wealth.

Mr. J. W. Woods' speech was a masterly effort and delivered in a manner that could not fail to impress all. As a post prandial speaker, he should certainly be classed in the front rank of Toronto's best.

It was with regret that the travellers learned of the illness of Lewis Howard, President elect for 1907.

Solly Walters and "Marguerite" were popular among the boys. Solly's beaming countenance and deep, strong voice made the affair additionally enjoyable.

The idea of Fielding being "a Daisy," seemed to tickle a few of the end table guests. They couldn't stop singing it.

"Next year this hall won't hold the boys at the banquet," remarked a number of travellers. Hopgood is a hustler, and he struck the right men to work with.

Dip down for that Dollar for Fielding's Relief Fund, boys. You'll never miss it, and your brother's family will thank you.

Advice to the Committee for next year's banquet "Don't forget the Trade Press," it works for you and with you. It is always talking business, so are you."

Happy New Year.

EFFECTIVE WINDOW DRESSING

What Can be Done With a Package Tea—The Art of Sign Writing—Some Arguments in Favor of the Use of Cards.

MODEL TEA DISPLAY.

Whitehead & Huether, Walkerton, are the proprietors of the window shown in the accompanying illustration and if anyone wants our candid opinion we would say it's a pretty nifty window. This picture is not used to advertise Ludella tea but to show what a neat and attractive display can be made in using a single window with a single line. The lattice work background which has much to do with the general effect is made of white tape. The tea table, the two plants, everything seems to just fit. The card too is right. It says just enough and is neat as a pin. The man who dressed the window has ideas and we would like to have his name to give it here. He deserves credit. We should have had the name, too, but the photograph was handed to the Grocer by John Chanes, president of the Drummers' Snack, and these exalted personages are so apt to forget some things.

ON THE ART OF TALKING BY CARDS.

In the writing of price-tickets and window-cards, proportion is a point of great importance. A scantily-filled window space, and a card of gigantic size drawing attention to it, is, to say the least, poor policy and in bad taste. Even in a well-filled window a large card is very often out of place. In the first case the card is making a splurge about nothing, and in the second it is crowding the display, or unnecessarily repeating statements which the goods are placed on view to make for themselves. A large card, jammed with wise remarks, and cataloguing the goods displayed, may in some cases prove effective, but much oftener a card bearing on it some short, striking fact, is the one which should be used.

Along certain lines generosity is a good point in a card. A proper allowance of margin is essential to a good appearance. A card recently displayed in the window of a large city store had all the final letters cut off by the right hand edge of the pasteboard. This might not necessarily typify meanness in the character of the proprietor, but it shows at least a carelessness which the consumer does not like to see in the man who handles the greater part of his food supply.

There is reason in all things. You don't want a card which is so much in evidence that it spoils the display; nevertheless you want one of such size that the wording upon it will not look crowded. In other words, don't try to say too much and the card will not need to be over large.

SOME SIGN ARGUMENTS.

Here are some good arguments for the use of signs, from a folder issued by the Martel-Stewart Co., Montreal:

Signs say something.

If they are good signs, made in the right way and placed where they will do most good, they tell their message to receptive minds.

To be good, a sign must be neat and attractive.

It need not be elaborate, in fact the most simple signs are usually the most effective. The people who pass your door or stand before your counter may or may not have time to admire art. But they will certainly take time to read terse, pointed, pithy words of wisdom presented by a clean-cut sign.

Signs pay because they say something, and say it in the most direct and forcible way.

Whether it is a bevelled plate glass sign, suspended by gilt chains in a window; or a dignified and prosperous looking brass sign; or an enamelled sign, or an electric sign, if it tells its message plainly and is clean and attractive in design and execution, it will pay.

People want to know things. If they see a window display of goods, with no sign describing or pricing them, they feel that they have been defrauded of their just dues,

It pays to put prices on all goods displayed, and to exhibit a small sign telling something about the goods.

It pays to tell the public about your business —repeatedly, persistently —by signs.

If yours is a "money-back" store, say so just as frequently as possible—by signs.

If your policy includes this or that or any other commendable principle, come right out and proclaim it by a sign. It always pays.

If you are conducting a sale, tell the reasons, tell the prices, tell everything —by signs.

An Artistic Tea Window.

Signs make the difference between business success and business failure. A professional man without a fitting and appropriate sign beside his door is seriously handicapped. A merchant without the right kind of signs outside and inside his store is doomed to disappointment—if not disaster.

Signs pay because they are the most direct medium of thought transferrence.

You must tell people about your business. You must show them that you are alive and on the lookout for new ideas, that you are doing your level best to serve them well.

Signs will do this.

Business Management

By HOWARD R. WELLINGTON.

This Closes the Series of Articles on the Subject of Book-keeping.

In order to show how the surplus in the business is made up, a statement of Assets and Liabilities is shown herewith. It would be interesting for the merchant to have the items on these statements arranged in the same order for each year or period and comparisons could then be made periodically with previous years to ascertain the condition of the business from time to time.

As previously stated, when an account has a debit balance it must be one of two things—an Asset to the business or a Loss. When there is a balance at the credit of an account, it must be a Liability or a Gain.

Cash, accounts receivable, merchandise on hand, expense items prepaid, also coal and wood on hand, bills receivable, equipment, etc., are all Assets of the business, while accounts payable, bills payable, amount due bank, etc., are all Liabilities.

In addition to the above mentioned Assets and Liabilities is the proprietor's capital account, which is treated as a Liability. J. M. Russill, personally, and his business are not the same, that is, J. M. Russill has invested money in a business and the business owes him, therefore, the capital account of his business is a Liability of the business.

This is the last of the series on book-keeping for the retail merchant. There are, of course, more elaborate systems than those outlined in these articles, and slight changes are invariably necessary to fit in with the particular business, but in a general way we have endeavored to give those interested a fair idea of how to run a set of books, using double entry. The various methods and the books and forms may look cumbersome at first sight, but will be found very practical when used.

WHAT TO DO THIS MONTH

Some Suggestions for the Grocer at the Beginning of a New Year—Ways and Means of Improving Business.—By R.E. C.D.

What should a grocer do this month? You ask a wholesaler that and he'll answer right off the reel "Pay his debts."

I asked a man who learned the retail grocery business in the old country and has followed it many years in Canada, and his reply was, "Take stock, find where he stands, clean up his store, get rid of his stale stuff and begin the year with fresh, good goods."

I asked an old traveler and the first thing he said was "Take stock."

"How many grocers do take stock?" I asked.

"About one in fifty," was his surprising reply.

Surely he was exaggerating! Can it be possible that so few grocers in Canada are observing the first principles of the systematic conduct of business. January is a quiet month; the merchant will have time and to spare. Every grocery store in the Dominion should know to a bar of soap or a lampwick just what he has got.

This done, the grocer, if he has a system of bookkeeping worth the name, can quickly ascertain where he stands and how much he has made in the year. But observation has led me to the belief that a great many grocers have no such system of bookkeeping. A little while ago the Grocer published a story about a mighty bright and progressive firm of grocers whose only bookkeeping aside from their bank book was the keeping of the accounts of their customers. Next week the Grocer will contain an address delivered by an expert accountant, Fred C. Gilbert, before the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association. Every grocer in the country should read it. I should think natural curiosity would prompt every man to keep such a written record of his business as would enable him at any time to know what he was doing. The merchant who can get along without it must have a fine faith in Providence or a great conceit in himself.

Just here it is worth while suggesting that the grocery clerk who has any ambition for his business or any faith in his future will do well to expend a lot of effort and venture upon some expense to acquire a knowledge of the principles of bookkeeping.

To take stock and get a balance sheet of his business is, then, every grocer's first duty in January. When he is about it he should find out what it cost him to do business during the year just past. This will be possible only if he has kept his books properly. But it is absolutely essential if he is not going to do business with his eyes blindfolded.

Suppose a case. A grocer did a business of $12,000 last year. In selling he had reckoned on a profit of 20 per cent. Therefore his goods cost him $10,000. It cost him to do business, rent, fuel, light, taxes, wages, interest, bad debts and all the rest of it $2,000. And that's a low estimate; it probably cost more. The result is he hasn't made a cent. His expenses were 16 2-3 per cent. of his turn over, or 20 per cent. on the cost of his goods. The lack of this knowledge of the cost of doing business is the most fruitful cause of bankruptcy.

With stock-taking, the grocer should combine two other processes, cleaning up and sorting out the stale and damaged goods to be got rid of. Cleaning up means at least the moving of everything in the store and the emptying of every shelf. Michie & Co., Toronto, employ a man whose principal duty it is to keep going over the stock, cleaning and dusting. In that way everything is gone over at least once a month. There are stores that are never cleaned thoroughly and they smell like it. They are not the stores where particular people like to deal.

The Canadian Grocer is not an advocate of price cutting under any circumstances. But if salt hath lost its savor wherewith shall it be salted? If goods have become stale or shopworn, they are no longer worth the price and the progressive grocer cannot afford to keep offering them at the price. He should get rid of them for what he can get and he should not forget to charge up the loss to the cost of doing business.

Why shouldn't the grocer make a few resolutions to keep the rest of the world company? The usual New Year resolution is for the improvement of morals; the grocer's will be for the improvement of business. Cleanliness is next to success in the grocery business. Let the grocer resolve to remember he is handling food stuffs.

A gentleman already quoted in this article told me he was waiting not long ago in front of a grocery into which his wife had gone to buy some things. The grocer came out to show a lady some cranberries that were standing on the sidewalk and while thus engaged turned half round and blew his nose through his fingers. This isn't fit to print, but it was an actual occurrence. But think of a man like that handling food stuffs.

Clean aprons and clean white linen coats for the men behind a grocery counter are excellent investments, and advertisements.

Modern store fittings are a great aid to business. Many of them will more than return their cost in a year by economy or increased sales and they all make a store more attractive. Instead of fighting shy of every aid to business the grocer should be looking for them. Whether he buys or not he should know what is doing in his own trade. Take the smallest example I know of. The Star egg carrier is the simplest, safest, handiest and cheapest method yet devised for the delivery of eggs. Yet the selling agents for Canada tell us it is uphill work introducing them. They find it hard to get the advantages of the carrier properly explained to and understood by the grocer. This would not be the case if the average grocer were looking for improvements instead of regarding every new thing with suspicion.

This suggests that grocers should watch carefully the advertising pages of the Canadian Grocer. That's where he will learn of the improvements that are worth while. And there's a lot more than that to be got from the advertising pages of the trade paper. The live wholesaler has something to say to the retailer every week. The keen buyer wants to know what it is.

A gentleman of long experience deeply versed in the mysteries of the grocery trade, with whom we discussed this question of what a grocer should do this month, strongly urged that he should make a beginning at weighing everything he bought.

"Package goods, too?" I asked.

"Yes, package goods too. The grocer stands between the consumer and manufacturer and he should know the net weight of everything he sells."

He urged also that grocers should be much more careful about weighing out their goods. The other day he weighed three parcels just arrived from the store and found two of them an ounce and a half short and the other as much over.

These are only a few suggestions as to what a grocer should be doing in January. Any live merchant can think of many more ways of improving his business.

DEATH OF R. G. EVANS.

The death of R. G. Evans, Pittsburg, Pa., last Sunday, Dec. 30th, removes from the commercial arena of the United States a man whose future augered bright and whose activity during his life assisted materially in developing one of the largest, if not the largest food industries of the world, the H. J. Heinz Co.

Mr. Evans was only 47 years of age, but had been connected with the business for about 25 years. He started as shipping clerk in the Kansas City branch of the Heinz Co. and later was removed to the head office at Pittsburg, where through his energy and keen business knowledge he rose to be a partner nad at the time of his death was the general manager of the company.

Mr. Evans was popular with the entire staff but just and upright in all his transactions and treatment of the trade. It was with extreme regret that the late annual gathering of the traveling staff at Pittsburg had to be conducted without him, he having taken a severe cold and being confined to the house with pneumonia, to which illness he succumbed after a five day's illness.

The funeral was held on New Years day to Homewood Cemetery, and was very largely attended, and the enormous quantity of flowers and tokens sent expressed in their gentle way the great esteem and popularity in which Mr. Evans was held. Among the Canadian visitors were: H. P. Eckardt, of H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, and Mr. Stewart the Quebec representative of the Heinz Co.

CLERK WANTED.

Grocery trade in Canada was larger in volume last year than ever before. Profits were large, too, because business was transacted on a steadily advancing market. That the net per cent. profit was large, too, does not necessarily follow for the cost of doing business must have largely increased. Now that the year is past how many grocers can take stock and sit down with their books and as certain the net result of their year's labor. How many can read from their books their total volume of business for the year and the exact amount it cost them to do that business? The grocer who can't do these things should bo looking about for a hand and effective system of bookkeeping and for a clerk who knows how to do it.

PREMIUM PHENOMENON.

A grocer in Suburban New York conducts a coffee and tea store one block from his grocery. At the tea store he gives premiums of china, glassware, pitchers, etc., with all purchases of teas and coffees. In the grocery store he obtains the same prices for tea and coffee without premiums that he does in the tea store. The two stores are conducted under the same name, and are one block apart and all his trade understands that they both belong to the same person. In the tea store Mocha and Java coffee is 29c a pound, with a premium; in the grocery store it is 29c without the premium. The trade is about evenly divided, the grocery store doing as much coffee and tea business without primiums as the tea store does with premiums.

CANNED TOMATOES.

With dried fruits off the active list canned tomatoes promise to be the feature of the grocery markets for a while. The accepted barometer of the situation is the fact that the Canadian canners were able to fill only 80 per cent. of their orders while last year they filled 90 per cent. But that does not indicate consumption which is the prime question, nor does it indicate the independent pack which is also an important feature. It does not even mean that the wholesalers in whose hands the bulk of the pack now is, are short of their requirements. A wholesaler told the Grocer this week he had 10,000 cases in excess of his own trade needs. Last season tomatoes reached $1.30. Had there been 5,000 cases fewer on the market, it is said they would have reached $1.40. Western consumption this year is regarded as a considerable factor in the final outcome. But consumption everywhere appears to be heavy. It looks like a good time to buy tomatoes, but the advice the Grocer would offer is to repeat the remark of a wholesaler recently in regard to sugar: "The man who buys only for his requirements is the man who stays longest in business."

DELAYS OF FREIGHT.

The ordinary time required for a carload of fruit to arrive in Toronto from California is ten days. It has been done in nine. This fall the average time is about twenty-three days. This will give some idea of the disability under which trade is being carried on as a result of the car shortage. Shipments of oranges have been two weeks on the road from Florida and three weeks from Boston. A Toronto wholesaler has prunes ordered which should have left California not later than Nov. 15 and they are not yet started. Not only is it very difficult to get a car in which to start a shipment but it is liable after getting under way to be side tracked at a junction point and left there for weeks. It is said that outside of Montreal there is a freight blockade of 3000 cars. Only this week a carload of horses was lost in the yards at Toronto and was not discovered for five days. All that time the poor beasts were without food or drink. They had pawed nearly through the floor of the car and it was the noise they were making that lead to their discovery. The annoyance and inconvenience extends to the retailer through the jobber. Someone says: "What's the use of kicking?" One thing is certain, if no one kicks improvement will stay a long way off. What is needed is a mule's kick that will make the railways sit up and take notice of their duties as public carriers and have an eye to their responsibilities as well as to dividends.

KEEPING SALESMEN WAITING.

A St. Paul traveling man recently stated that a good buyer never keeps a salesman waiting if it is possible not to, and yet it is true that every salesman losses on an average of two and a half hours each day waiting on buyers. The cost of selling goods is figured in making the selling price and buyers have to pay for it, so that if a salesman's time is lost some one has to stand the loss, and although most buyers would be very much surprised to hear that they pay for it, it is nevertheless true. There are over 100,000 salesmen on the road, whose salary and expense average $10 per day, and their lost time is therefore valued at least at $250,000 a day, which enormous sum must be paid by the buyers, although they get absolutely nothing for it.

The assignee often takes stock for the merchant who does not take stock for himself.

"As the season draws on for cider making I would again call the attention of our cider makers to the large export trade which can be done with this country," writes P. B. Ball, Canadian commercial agent at Birmingham. "In my district only one Canadian firm seems to have thoroughly gone into the matter, and with the exception of a few barrels which became ropey, the trade has been a thoroughly satisfactory one, at least so far as the quality of the article and the sale are concerned. Canadian cider has made a good name."

GROCER, STATESMAN, GOVERNOR

Sir W. P. Howland Died on New Year's Morning—One of the Fathers of Confederation—Held many important Posts.

Sir William Pearce Howland, almost the last of the Fathers of Confederation, and for many years a notable figure in Canadian public life, died at his home, Bloor Street East, Toronto, in the early hours of New Year's morning.

In 1864, Sir. W. P. Howland, then Mr. W. P. Howland, was senior partner in the wholesale grocery firm of Howland & Fitch, 25-27 Church Street, Toronto. His partner being Mr. J. C. Fitch. At this time he was also interested in the firm of W. P. Howland & Company, millers at Lambton, Ontario. The firm consisting of his three brothers and himself. A very large export business was done by the firm, as well as being large buyers and sellers of flours locally.

Sir W. P. Howland
A Grocer who became Lieut.-Governor of Ontario.

J. F. Eby, of the wholesale grocery house of Eby, Blain & Company, Limited, was an employee of Howland & Fitch at that time, and on retirement of Sir William Howland in 1871, the firm became known at Fitch & Eby. In conversation with Mr. Eby, he expressed great admiration for Sir Wm. Howland's executive ability, and his promptness in sizing up opportunities and taking advantage of them.

The late Hon. Sir Wiliam Pearce Howland was of English descent, his American progenitor being John Howland, a Quaker, who came to New England in 1620. Sir William was born in Paulings, N.Y., May 29, 1811. He was educated at Kinderhook Academy, and came to Canada in 1830. In 1840 he purchased from the late William Falls the Lambton Mills, on the Humber—the same being still in active operation—and soon afterwards engaged in the wholesale grocery trade in Toronto. He entered Parliament as member for West York in 1857, and was a member of the House of Commons after the union of 1867, till July, 1868, when he became Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. This office he vacated November, 1873. He had previously held office in successive administrations as Finance Minister, Receiver-General, Postmaster-General, Minister of Finance a second time, and Minister of Internal Revenue. He was delegate to Washington respecting reciprocal trade, 1866, and to the London Colonial Conference, to complete terms of union of British North American Provinces, thus becoming one of the "Fathers of the Confederation." Sir William withdrew from business in 1894. He was for some years President of the Ontario Bank and also of the Board of Trade. He was President of the Gold and Silver Mines Developing Company, President of the London and Canadian Loan Agency Company, and President of the Confederation Life Assurance Company. In 1880 he headed a syndicate for the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway. For his services on behalf of confederation he was created a C.B. in 1867, and in 1879, as a further mark of royal approval, he was appointed a K.C.M.G. In politics he was a Liberal, and in religious belief a member of the Church of England.

He married first in 1843 Mrs. Webb, who died 1849; second, in 1866, Susannah Julia, widow of Captain Hunt of the Military Stores Department. She died in 1886. In 1895 he married Elizabeth Mary Rattray, widow of James Bethune, Q.C. Sir William was a brother of the late H. S. Howland.

Two of Sir William Howland's sons were prominent citizens of Toronto, taking active interest in civic affairs and both rising to the position of Mayor of the city, W. H. Howland and Oliver A. Howland, both of whom predeceased their distinguished parent.

TO CELEBRATE HIS WEDDING.

Friends of Hugh Blain Dine Him at the National Club.

To celebrate his recent marriage, about 30 of his friends tendered Hugh Blain, of the Eby, Blain Co., a banquet at the National Club, Toronto, on Wednesday evening last. The arrangements were a complete surprise to Mr. Blain, who, on the invitation of the committee in charge, prepared to do honor to another member of the club mentioned by them. The decorations were splendidly carried out, and a neat menu card made a fitting souvenir to the occasion.

W. K. George, president of the National Club, presided, and Frank Arnoldi, K.C., on behalf of the subscribers, presented Mr. Blain with a case of table cutlery and silverware.

Those present included Senator Jaffray, Col. Denison, J. F. Eby, W. K. McNaught, Noel Marshall, M. McLaughlin, W. S. McMurrich, J. S. Willison, and J. W. Curry, K.C.

GROCERY TRAVELER DEAD.

W. B. Smith, of Davidson & Hay Died Suddenly Wednesday Evening.

Wm. Binkley Smith, one of the oldest and best known grocery travelers in Canada, died suddenly at his home, 135 Avenue Road, Toronto, on Wednesday evening. Mr. Smith was a member of the Davidson & Hay staff for 13 years and represented the firm in the Niagara peninsula and on the Grand Trunk main line west.

News of his death will come as a shock to a host of friends in the grocery trade. He was enjoying his usual robust health a few days ago. He felt unwell New Year's day with what he supposed was indigestion. Wednesday he called a doctor but he was not thought to be seriously ill. That evening he took a sudden turn for the worse and passed away about half-past nine. Death was due to enlargement of the liver and acute indigestion.

Mr. Smith was 64 years of age and had passed his entire business life in the wholesale grocery trade, most of the time as a traveler. For many years he was with Wm. Ramsay & Co. in their day one of the largest firms in Toronto. He left them to travel for T. Kinnear & Co., and eight years later entered the service of Sloan & Crowther. Thirteen years ago he joined the traveling staff of Davidson & Hay.

Mr. Smith was a splendid salesman and one of the most popular travelers on the road. He was a Mason and a staunch Liberal. Mr. Smith was successful in business ventures on his own account, and at his death was vice-president of the Cowan Co.

He is survived by Mrs. Smith, a daughter, and two sons, Herbert, secretary-treasurer of the Cowan Co., and Elmer, buyer for the millinery department of the T. Eaton Co.

John McKergow, of A. A. Ayer & Company, is in the Southern States at present.

Touchette Le France Co., general store, St. Pierre, N.W.T., have dissolved.

Harry G. Nivin, of Wm. Nivin & Son, Montreal, has left for the West, where he will spend some time.

G. D. Warrington, the William Street produce man, of Montreal, has left for the Old Country on his annual trip.

Mr. Smith, manager for Canada, of Mills & Sparrow, Montreal, was laid up with the grippe during the week.

The popular wholesale tobacco firm of Jos. Cote, Quebec, takes the opportunity of thanking its many customers and friends for the liberal support that they have been giving him during the past year and solicits their esteemed patronage for the year 1907. This firm wishes all its customers a prosperous and happy New Year.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS.—
Fish—Revised.
Evaporated apples—Advanced.
Beans—Decline.

Montreal, January 3, 1907.

Owing to the holidays there has not been very much activity in the grocery markets during the past week. Business transacted has been very limited in most quarters, although some houses are fairly busy. The general opinion in jobbing circles is that there will be good business within the next two weeks. Grocers, while stocking up heavily for the holiday trade, are now without large stocks, having been pretty well sold out. The general markets are without feature of note this week. There is nothing going on in canned goods or sugar. There is some little interest in teas. The market for this line is firmer this year end, than it has been for a long time past. Coffees, spices and molasses, present no new features of interest. In dried fruits there is a scarcity of seeded raisins, but otherwise there is nothing new. Evaporated apples are higher again this week. Beans are offering at slightly lower prices.

CANNED GOODS.—There is practically nothing doing in canned goods this week. Some houses have been receiving a few lots of late arriving salmon, shipment having been delayed, but otherwise, there appears to be absolutely no movement in this line.

SUGAR.—Sugar is unchanged since last report. Business being transacted, owing to the holidays, is very limited.

TEAS.—All teas continue very firm, in fact the market is firmer this year than it has been towards the end of the month of December for some years. Usually there is rather an easy feeling at this season, and holders are often willing to let go their stocks in some lines at the buyers' own figure, but this year anybody desiring to purchase tea must pay the price for the line, or do without it. In New York there is some excitement owing to a report that has got abroad to the effect that green teas in the United States are some ten million pounds short of last year's amount. This would be a serious state of affairs if true, but nowhere are large stocks held. Some Montreal houses have been looking for American business since this report was made public.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS.—
Tomatoes.—Very strong.
Peas and Corn.—Firm.
Beans.—Firmer.
Hides.—Lower.

Toronto, Jan. 3, 1907.

Business is naturally a little quiet after the holiday but it is picking up very quickly. The feature of the market for the immediate future will be canned goods. Anything in a can is regarded as a "good bug" at the present moment. Tomatoes are especially costly but corn and peas are also looked to do a little on their own account. The bean market is said to have touched bottom. Sugar is the same price today it was a year ago and if it takes the same course as last year it will keep the trade guessing. Dried fruits are still very firm and prices continue to advance.

CANNED GOODS.—No changes in prices are yet quotable but it is expected tomatoes will advance shortly. Practically the entire pack is said to be in second hands. A wholesaler said to-day, "Last year there were 5,000 cases too many or the price would have gone to $1.40. Last year the canners made 90 per cent deliveries, this year 80 per cent. The West is said to be about cleaned up and to be paying $1.10 f.o.b., Ontario.

SUGAR.—The market seems to be quiet. Prices are what they were a year ago; $4.40 for Standard granulated. Last February it had got down to $4.10 and September it was back to $4.40.

The raw markets are quiet. In New York last week the equalizing of spot quotations to futures, caused a sudden change in spot quotations from 3.875c. the week before to 3.58c. last week, without any intermediate sales, and has no special significance. For Cuba Centrifugals 2 3-16c. per lb. c. and f. for January shipment (equal to 3.55c. landed), basis of 96 degree test, is still maintained as the firm basis, and, inasmuch, as, at this price the Cuban planter is selling at 32c. per 100 below the parity of beet sugars, he is virtually giving away the entire reciprocity advantage. Willett & Gray say: "It would seem that our local markets should remain steady for the immediate future unless European markets weaken." They predict a rather higher average price for centrifugals this year than last.

Willett & Gray's review of raw sugar prices at New York for 1906 follows:

The year opened with Centrifugal sugar 96 degree test basis (the standard for raw sugar) at 3.625c. per lb.; declining in January to 3.56c. per lb., (average for January 3.64c.). February further declined to 3.36c. at end of month (average 3.395c.). March advanced from 3.39c. to 3.56c. (average 3.482c.). April fluctuated slightly (average 3.456c.).May steady (average 3.45c.). June advanced from 3.47c. to 3.61c. (average 3.52c.). July steady (average 3.735c.). August advanced to 4c. (average 3.989c.). September steady at 4c. to 4.125c. (average 4.069c.). October steady at 4c. (average 4.00c.). November 3.81c. to 3.84c. (average 3.83c.). December 3.875c. to the close at 3.58c. (average 3.795c.).

The lowest point of the year was 3.36c. on February 8 and the highest points of the year was 4.125c. September 20. The average price of Centrifugals for 1906 is 3.686c. per lb. against 4.278c. per lb. in 1905; 3.974c. in 1904; 3.72c. in 1903; 3.542c. in 1902; 4.047c. in 1901; 4.566c. in 1900; 4.419c. in 1899. The average for ten years is 4.00c. per lb. duty paid.

The highest price for raw sugars since July, 1897, was 5.125c. on March 1, 1905, and the lowest price 3.25c. in June, 1902, duty paid.

Since July, 1897, the full duty on sugar has been 1.685c. per lb. for 96 degree test. Since December 27, 1903, all sugars produced in Cuba paid 1.348c. per lb. duty on 96 degree test. Sugar from the Hawaiian Islands and from Porto Rico comes into the United States free of all duty. Sugar from the Phillipine Islands has 25 per cent. reduction from full duty rates, and the average grade produced in the island of 84 degrees test pays .949c. per lb. less .022 cents export duty paid on shipments from the Islands.

All other sugars imported into the United States in 1906 paid 1.685c. per lb. duty for 96 test basis, and the same duties will apply for 1907.

TEA.—All markets are very firm. A London mail despatch says: "During the first six months of the season, imports of all tea, as shown by Customs figures are nearly 3 million pounds below the corresponding period last year. Although there has been an increase of 4½ millions from India, there has been a falling off of nearly 6 millions from Ceylon and nearly 2 millions from China. The total re-exports are nearly 10 millions ahead." Another says: "The past six months have on the whole proved a distinctly satisfactory period for all branches of the industry. The free supplies and abnormally large deliveries which took place earlier in the year stimulated trade to such a degree that importers at the close find themselves in a stronger position than for a long time past. One feature of the period just elapsed has been the rapidity with which the market has responded to the visible supplies."

LAST MINUTE PROVISION MARKETS.

Montreal, Thursday, Jan. 3, 1907.

BUTTER—Firm feeling. Local demand fairly good.

CHEESE—Market dull.

EGGS — Nothing new in local situation. Prices expected to be higher shortly.

PROVISIONS — Tone of market firm, but nothing new in situation. Abattoir dressed hogs quoted $9.25 to $9.50 per 100 lbs.

COFFEE.—Willett & Gray say of New York options: "The feature of the greatest importance now is the great disparity in coffee prices. As everybody in the trade knows the New York coffee options are the cheapest coffee in the world. They do not even represent the value of spot coffee as the most undesirable goods to be found on this market can be sold at a premium over the option basis, and according to the selections from spot stocks larger premiums are paid. Not only so, to replace spot coffees, another premium must be paid to obtain fresh supplies in Brazil. It is therefore patent to everybody that coffee options are unnaturally depressed chiefly owing to professional manipulation, and that a point is reached with decreasing receipts and continued heavy consumption when a great change is due."

DRIED FRUITS.—The markets are all firm and the tendency is to advance. Cable advices this week show another advance of 1-6 in Sultanas and report the crop nearly exhausted.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 3, 1907.)

With the passing of Christmas the local jobbing trade has been quiet, though for most staple lines the demand holds steady at unchanged prices. The trade the past week or two has been the heaviest in the history of the West. Sugar holds at the advance of a week ago at 10 cents increase for refined, following the increase in the duty on the raw article. Evaporated apples are also firmer at 10½c. for 50 lb. boxes and 10½ cents for 25's. Peanuts are now 11½ cents and Jumbos 13½ cents. The congestion in freight which has greatly handicapped the trade all the past Fall was particularly felt at the Christmas time and many firms failed to get in their Christmas lines in sufficient quantities to meet the demand.

N. B. MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 31, 1906.

Business is quiet. In spite of the cold weather and snow which came with the first days of December we had a comparatively green Christmas. The cold weather breaking up some few days before the holiday. However, the retailers report particularly good business. The past week shows few changes, sales being very light there is nothing to make a market.

OIL.—In burning oil sales continue large at even prices. Lubricating oils are quiet, this is the off season. Paint oils have very little consumptive demand but the jobbing trade are interested, particularly in linseed oil, as present prices largely rule the coming season. The outlook is for full figures, turpentine continues high. Cod oil has little interest, it has been a quiet season.

SALT.—The position in Liverpool salt is of considerable interest. In fine salt, market is bare and prices on the other side are reported too high to import. In coarse salt stocks are light, steamers are asking high freights and price on the other side is also higher. Spot prices not yet changed but higher values will have to rule.

CANNED GOODS.—Sales are light. Vegetables, particularly. Tomatoes, firmly held. Fruits unchanged, supplies not large, particularly in strawberries. Gallon apples tend higher. Salmon firm. Lobsters extreme. Oysters scarce and high. Meats, small business, prices firm. In domestic fish, sales light.

GREEN FRUIT.—This is a quiet line, the retail trade always carry over stock from the holidays. In oranges a good variety offered at reasonable figures. Apples are firmly held. Lemons unchanged. Grapes are firm. The holidays caused some demand for cranberries, even at the high prices.

DRIED FRUIT.—This is another line in which retailers carry over stock from the holidays. Raisins are very firm and higher prices will rule, stocks not large. About the only line in stock is seeded and even here quantity not large. Currants are rather easier. No direct shipments yet received. Stocks are light. Dates are firmer. Figs and peels have but a limited sale after the holidays. Evaporated apples are very firm at higher prices. Onions are still low and but a fair sale. Peanuts high.

SUGAR.—While market is fairly firm and unchanged, little interest is taken.

MOLASSES.—Fancy Baradoes is held very firm at the higher price. Stock is light. Choice Barbados quite freely offered. Porto Rico unchanged.

FISH.—In fresh fish prices are well maintained, supply light. Weather is against good business. In dry, pickled and smoked fish market rather easy, demand light. It is thought Lent coming early will mean improved conditions, haddies are high. Some fine Newfoundland kippers and bloaters offered.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL.—In flour a fair business at even figures. Feed scarce and high. Oats and oatmeal firmly held. Cornmeal unchanged. Beans are rather firmer but some quite low prices still quoted. Yellow eyes higher.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

BRANTFORD.

Elliott Bros., the Colborne St. grocers, have been "painting things red" and a greatly improved interior to this well conducted store is the result. Elliott Bros. have in less than a year transformed a dull business into one of the brightest and busiest grocery stands in the city.

KINGSTON.

The dying of the old year brings up memories of the past. Many old familiar faces have disappeared and cause pangs of regret in the philanthropic merchant's heart. Between the merchant and traveler especially a friendship springs up that is akin to brotherhood. Like the great generals in hard-fought battles, travelers come and go, and new ones appear as the old ones wear out. Who does not remember with kindly feelings Dalley's once popular traveler, Vert, the great exponent of Hirst's Pain Killer, always jolly and full of life, and a good salesman. His sudden demise caused deep regret wherever he was known. No merchant ever hid behind a sugar barrel when he saw Vert coming with his grip.

The municipal elections are on and excitement is at fever heat, but will go down to zero in some cases after it is over. Three candidates for Mayor are being trotted out. The present Mayor, Mr. Mowat, is one of them, and seems to be the favorite, as he is popular with all classes. Ald. Hoag is working hard for the chair and expects to occupy it. Dr. Richardson is the independent candidate brought out by the labor unions, and feels confident he will come under the wire first. He is an eloquent speaker and would make a representative in Parliament any city would be proud of. Bert Robertson, commercial traveler for Geo. Robertson & Sons, is out as a candidate for Aldermanic honors, and I hope he will head the poll. He is a hustler. Alderman Dan Cooper is urged to come out again, but cannot find time to run a store and a city too. The new regulations come into force in 1907. The Alderman who gets most votes is in for a three-year term.

A lot of sales have been lost through delay in arrival of fruits, such as prunes, figs, etc. The figs are very poor, especially some of the natural figs. They are very immature, black, ill-shaped and unpleasant to look at, and retailers are refusing to handle them. A lot of them no doubt will find their way to the jam kettle to be used in biscuits.

John Everett, Christie, Brown & Co.'s traveler, is a monthly visitor and always welcome. He is commanding in appearance, looks like a Senator, dresses in black, but is very fond of checks (cheques), Jim the grocer always greets him with the remark: "Christie's biscuits ever 'et. Ha, ha, ha."

KINGSTON.

(From last week.)

Christmas is over and many a tired clerk, driver and merchant is resting his weary bones. The rush came on so quickly and the flow of business was greater than for many years past. Calendars were the popular gifts and were much appreciated. They are getting handsomer each succeeding year. On account of Xmas coming on Tuesday very few stores opened up as usual on Xmas morning to cater to the forgetful housekeepers who are always short of something. If merchants were a unit on closing on holidays it would educate people to think and the merchant to get a whole day instead of a piece. Merchants work and worry too much for the accumulating of dollars and cents.

It is a pity, considering the high price of tomatoes that they are being retailed at 10c a tin or 1 corn, peas and tomatoes for 25c, one or two merchants are to blame for this. Just think of selling a whole case of tomatoes considering what go in the combination of corn, peas and tomatoes, for 10c, but as Jim said, taking all things together there is very little price cutting in Kingston. People are fast becoming acquainted with the fact that price cutters handle inferior and unhealthy goods.

CHATHAM.

As predicted, the grocery and provision interests are well represented in this year's race for municipal honors. At the nominations on Monday, Ex-Trustee, John McCorvie and E. A. Mounteer, the well-known confectioner, were nominated for the Board of Education, both being looked on as among the strongest candidates in a list of fifteen. For the City Council, Alderman Potter, Thompson, Massey and Edmondson, members of 1906 council, and more or less associated with the trade, were all re-nominated for 1907.

Cecil Moore, for the past four years the popular head salesman in Alderman Massey's grocery, has left to take up his new duties as traveller for D. S. Perrin & Company, of London. He will travel between London and Niagara Falls. His many local friends gave him an appropriate send-off.

NOTES FROM YE OLDEST COLONY.

C. F. Taylor who has been in New York for the past few weeks, returned by the Express on Tuesday. Mr. Taylor looks fine and hearty after his trip.

Alf. Davis has taken over the Grocery Department of R. Rutherford & Company, Harbor Grace, and has removed to the west end premises. Alf. is very popular and will, without doubt, continue the successful grocery business the firm has always enjoyed.

Willis Davis, the manager, will now confine himself more to the coal and lumber business, which business has now grown to such proportions that it needs his whole attention.

H. McConbrey, manager of the Standard Manufacturing Company, has returned from a business trip to New York.

There is a large falling off this year in the importation of black oats. Owing to the shortage on Prince Edward Island, a large quantity of Ontario white and mixed oats have been imported.

The Modus Vivendi has been a great disturber of the serenity of some of our politicians. Just who will eventually come out on top remains to be seen. Newfoundland fishermen want the money the Americans leave for herring: the Government says they cannot have it. Mr. Duff, of the Atlantic Fish Company, Halifax, offers to buy all the herring they can catch, so there you are.

Hon. Geo. Knowling's windows are showing a fine display of seasonable goods, which are artistically arranged.

ST. CATHARINES.

A Happy New Year to the "Canadian Grocer" and to the trade throughout Canada.

The past twelve months have been marked as prosperous in St. Catharines and in this district generally. Prices have kept well up, and all branches of business have passed through a successful year.

The past week, though not so marked as the one before Christmas, was a very busy one. Better prices were secured for turkeys by three cents per pound, and other fowls and meats were quoted at regular prices. Vegetables, celery and other kitchen commodities were in greater demand than before Christmas.

The municipal elections have mainly settled on the Mayoralty contest. Mayor Riddell and ex-Mayor Burgoyne are the contestants and the election will be a spirited one. Ald. Joseph Hodgins, fish and poultry dealer, has retired, after a number of years' service.

The Toronto branch of Red Rose Tea is assuming larger proportions in the concern and hereafter all T. H. Estabrook's Ontario business will be conducted from Toronto. Pursuant to this change Charles Smith of the St. John office has been transferred to Toronto.

A few reasons why Ozo Jams should be and are considerably better than any others now being made in Canada:

As Montreal is by far the largest buying centre in the country, enormous quantities of all kinds of fruit are sent to be marketed here, and as ripe fruit has to be disposed of within 24 hours of arrival a glut is sure to occur in some fruit every day—it might be peaches to-day, or strawberries to-morrow—some fruit is sure to be over-shipped, which we can buy at a price averaging as low as what it would pay to grow it at; and buying fruit at this price naturally we can afford to use more of it.

Our Jam plant is the largest in Canada, contains the finest, cleanest and most modern equipment, which enables us not only to turn out an enormous quantity but give far better quality as well.

We can buy sugar on the wharf at a great saving over what it would cost if freighted west, and consequently are enabled to put in a much larger proportion in the cheaper qualities.

Having the turnover, we are able to purchase our packages at the very lowest price.

As we believed that these natural advantages would enable us to take the lead in the Jam business, we sent to England for the most expert Jam cook we could find. As money was no object, we got him and placed him in charge of our Jam Department, where his 28 years of practical experience are enabling him to turn out goods which are a revelation to the trade, and are causing a large increase in sales in this line with the people who are handling them.

Notwithstanding our ability to turn out a product equal to any made in the country at a lower price, our aim is to put this saving in the cost of production into bettering the quality of the goods, thus putting purchasers of our goods beyond the reach of competition.

With this information at hand you can readily see why so many of the largest wholesalers have placed their Jam contracts with us, and we think you will quickly see that it will be to your advantage, and that of your customers, to place your Jam business with us.

We quote Standard Brand Jam
in 7-lb., 14-lb. and 30-lb. Pails, 6c. F.O.B.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

A slight improvement is noticeable in the cheese market since last report. Speaking generally, however, there was not much interest displayed last week, the feeling being one of quietness rather than anything else, owing to the holidays. Very little trading was done during the week, the market being noticeably free from activity of an interesting description.

It is expected that there will be a little more interest taken in the situation now that the holidays are over. Local houses are not doing very much at present, although some of them have been turning over small lots. As stated in the Grocer before, stocks in Canada are mostly held in Montreal. Outside holdings are variously estimated, but the fair average estimate is that outside stocks would not total up to more than a quarter of what is held in Montreal. It is said that holders outside the city are mostly west of Toronto. In Montreal, holders appear to be clinging to their stock, large or small, in the hopes of higher prices, and from present indications it would seem that they are likely to obtain higher figures if they wait a sufficient length of time.

Inquiries from the other side are still coming in. Late November make, or "Tail-ends," as they are called, are requested, since these goods are selling at lower prices. The late make, however, is very low in stock, and it is improbable that cheese men on this side will be able to accept many more orders for this article.

The butter market presents few new features of interest. The present trade, what there is of it, is purely local. As was the case with cheese so was it also with butter during the holidays. There was not much doing. Butter which has been coming from England for the last month or so, being bought back, or consigned by English houses, is not coming forward so frequently now. Quite a few lots were consigned by English butter men, who were attracted by the high prices ruling in the Canadian market. Stocks of Canadian butter now held in England cannot be very large, as an evidence of which shipments have not, as already stated, been so large as formerly.

According to figures compiled by the Montreal Board of Trade, receipts of butter for the week ending December 29, were 1,815 packages, and of cheese, 739 boxes. Receipts of butter from May 1, to the end of this week, were 598,684 packages, and of cheese, 2,347,464 boxes.

PROVISION SITUATION.

There's not much to be said for the past week's provision markets. The Ontario farmer is greatly independent these days and can afford to enjoy himself over the Christmas holidays. Last week one big Toronto packer didn't get a hog and another that usually takes eight or ten thousand got eight hundred. The price being paid this week is a little higher, $6.15 f.o.b. country, which means $6 to the farmer. Some, however, are still quoting $5.90, the same as last week. Pretty free deliveries are looked for during the rest of the month. Views of packers regarding the number of hogs in the country seem to be moderating somewhat and it is thought by some of them that prices won't go much below 6c. for some time. This means that prices for hog products in the domestic market are not likely to recede much from the present level. For the time being demand is very limited.

There is a little better market in the Old Country this week due to snow storms in Denmark preventing marketing of hogs. The improvement is about 2s. and naturally the packers in Canada hope this will hold though they are not very sanguine.

There has been an active speculation the past week in future hog products says the New York Journal of Commerce advancing quite sharply early on the covering of shorts and reports of outside buying for long account, which latter have been hardly credited, at the record high prices of the season; but after midweek there was a decided tendency to take profits by the longs, with pretty free selling by packers supposed to be short, in anticipation of better receipts of hogs in the near future and lower prices. Packing at western points for the week has shown an increase over last year for the first time this season, and it is believed that there will be a moderate increase in stocks of products on the first of January at Chicago and still greater at other points.

AGAIN IN SHAPE.

The Mokara Mills Company, who were burnt out by a disastrous fire on the morning of Sunday, Dec. 16th, have got things in shape for business again with commendable promptitude. They expect to have the factory in full operation again by Jan. 15th, and in the meantime the stock and shipping rooms are taking care of all orders promptly and satisfactorily. The firm, notwithstanding their set back, are looking forward to an even more prosperous new year, for, with the installation of new machinery, they will be in a still better position to improve the quantity and quality of their noted brands.

Three Important Points

The Trade worth building up—
The Trade worth holding—
The Trade that pays—

All come easier to the grocer who remembers to carry a good supply of "McIntosh's Big Three."

McIntosh's Cereals rank first in Quantity, Quality and Demand.

"Swiss Food"---an old favorite of twenty years' standing.

"Beaver Oats"---the cereal of proven superiority. The Big premium goes with this brand (766).

"McIntosh's Crown Brand Rolled Oats"---this brand has been enthroned king of all cereals by popular demand.

Markets Continue Quiet But Revival of Business is Looked for With the Turn of the Year—Wheat Slightly Lower—May Advance.

The grain market has been waiting for the New Year and merchants will be disappointed if business doesn't liven up from now on. Fluctuations in prices at present are merely the rise and fall of the water in the steam gauge of the speculative boiler.

Flour markets are very quiet and the price for export in Ontario from 78 per cent. points is $2.60. Demand is expected to look up somewhat from now.

Reviewing last week's breadstuffs markets in the States, the New York Journal of Commerce says:

"The grain markets the past week have been without important feature or changes, though generally somewhat depressed by the December liquidation, aided by moderate raiding by December shorts, who were careful, however, to sell only small lots when small holdings of long grain were coming on the market. But no important lines have been liquidated so far as reported and the markets have been too dull to permit of it. Notwithstanding this there has been a growing feeling that prices were low enough, if not too low, for the statistical position of the markets, and that there will be better prices after the first of the year, as cash demand has been holding off, as usual, until that time and enabled the speculators to depress prices, whereas any improvement in the cash demand for any of these staples with the moderate offerings that have been coming out would result in enhancing prices.

GOOD TIMES IN NOVA SCOTIA

Review of the Past Year by Principal of the Provincial Agricultural College—Effect of the Exodus to the West.

(Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer)

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 1, 1907.

Principal Cummings of the Government Agricultural College, in a review of the year just closed, says :—

The year 1906 has been one of the good ones for the progressive farmers of Nova Scotia. Markets have ruled unusually high during the whole season and farmers had no difficulty in disposing of all their produce at most remunerative prices. Partially because the Western exodus has reduced the number of producers, and, still more, because our growing industries are affording improved markets, the supply of farm products has been much below the demand. Especially has this been the case with wool, mutton and lamb, with cows and dairy produce, with poultry and eggs, with horses of all kinds and with potatoes and garden truck. For hay, apples and other products of the orchard and field prices have been fully up to the average.

Crops, however, have scarcely been up to the mark—apples, grains, potatoes and roots having fallen from 20 to 30 per cent. below the average and hay about 5 per cent. below. The official returns give the following estimates of the staple crops figured in comparison with an average crop of 100 :

	Per Cent.
Hay	96
Oats	80
Wheat	83
Barley	81
Turnips and Mangels	85
Potatoes	70
Apples	75

However, the returns from different farmers are very variable, some reporting crops consderably above and others reporting them far below average. When farming has been carried on with a view to maintenance of soil fertility, the returns have been good, but farmers, whose fields are run out, have in some cases had little more than half a crop.

Fruit Growing.

The passing years are marked by an increasing interest in fruit-growing. True the summer of 1906 could not be considered up to the average, the total amount of export fruit being about 325,000 barrels, as compared with 350,000 the year before and larger amounts than that in other years. Still almost every farmer, in the fruit sections, is setting out new trees and it cannot be long before a large number of these new orchards must come into bearing and bring up the number of export barrels to at least the million mark. Never have our fruit men been more troubled with fungus and insect pests than during last summer. As a result, the early promise of an abundant crop was far from being fulfilled. Our experts, however, consider that such a season has not been without its benefits for never have there been more clear demonstrations of the advantages of intelligent, systematic cultivation and spraying. As with farm crops, the yields have been extremely variable, running all the way from 25 per cent. to a full average yield of 100 per cent., the general estimate being about 75 per cent.

A gratifying feature, in connection with fruit growing, is that the area is being extended beyond the famous Annapolis Valley, and that a more general interest is being taken all over the Province. North Queens and Lunenburg have produced marketable quantities of fruit that, in quality, and color, rival the Valley fruit. In addition, there are men in many countries, even as far East as Cape Breton, who are successfully catering to their local markets. In the development of this phase of the industry, the model orchards set out by the Local Government are giving splendid demonstration and are already proving the means of interesting many farmers in fruit culture.

Except for a few weeks in the late summer and early fall, pastures were unusually good and as a result stock has gone into winter quarters in better condition than for some years past. Moreover the numbers of live stock have considerably increased, although not yet sufficiently to make up for the slump of two years ago. Quality, too, is receiving more than its usual attention, especially from those farmers who realize the value of stock and the adaptability of Nova Scotia to stock husbandry.

Poultry in Demand.

Prices for poultry and eggs continue to advance. Eighteen, twenty and even more cents per pound for dressed birds and anywhere from 20 to 50 cents per dozen for eggs have been no unusual prices. With such possibilities for marketery, it is no wonder that the industry is growing. Twelve hundred entries, as compared with eight hundred the year before, at the Amherst Fat Stock Show is a criterion of the advancement. At the same time, we look for the greatest profits to be made not from the large chicken raising establishments but from the small flocks on every farm which can get a large share of their maintenance from waste products on the farm. The cost of grains and meals is altogether too high to make poultry raising by itself remunerative.

The one who reviews all these events must see that, while nothing of a startling character has occurred to greatly affect the industry of agriculture, yet there has been progress along various lines. The year 1906 will pass into history as one of the good agricultural years and has already given an impetus to improved methods in agriculture, the influence of which will be more manifest in succeeding years.

Peter Dill, Seaforth, suffered a sad loss reecntly in the death on the same day of two of his children, J. McDonald, aged 2, and Flora, aged nine months. The double funeral took place on October 12. Mr. Dill had four children. He has been in business in Seaforth ten years and he and Mrs. Dill have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their bereavement.

PROSPERITY IN THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW

Some Views and Interviews

Some expressions of opinion or feeling by men doing business throughout Canada are not out of place at the start of a new year.

Geo. E. Bristol, Hamilton, writes:

"Last year was a very satisfactory one in the grocery business. The markets have been firm and in most lines steadily advancing. It is much easier for both wholesaler and retailer to get a profit under such conditions than when the market is wavering or actually drifting backward. The raisin and currant situation has been extraordinary and the sale of these articles has been much curtailed by the high prices.

"The most annoying feature of the year's business was the unprecedented delay by the railways in the forwarding of goods. The delay has often been serious and affected both the arrival and departure of goods inconveniencing wholesaler and retailer alike. I understand, however, that the railways are making every endeavor to overcome the difficulty and that next year we shall not have the same trouble.

"With regard to the future, we look forward to a year of great business activity and success. Ontario is very prosperous and the opening of Northern Ontario and the rapid development of the Canadian West, in which we all must share, will increase that prosperity."

President of the Guild.

Albert Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal, said: "The year 1906 has been very good for us in a business way. Our only real trouble of magnitude was the congestion of traffic on the railways. This bothered us a great deal and interfered with smoothly running business. Especially did it hurt the Christmas rush. Goods harvested in September and October are not obtainable at any other season, and so we could take no precautions. The result was that many houses lost money through not being able to obtain their goods in time for the holiday trade. Otherwise everything during the year was most satisfactory. As far as I can see there is every prospect of continued good trade in 1907. Business is very sound now and I see no reason why it should not continue so."

Some Things to Fight.

George Forbes, Montreal: "The turnover was larger than last year, but prices have been cut below market value and while there was an excellent chance for the retailer and the jobber to make money, they were prevented from doing so by this price cutting. Then again, there was constant duplication of standard goods, which was very nasty for the trade. An article was put on the market, and would in no time be duplicated by another firm, the only difference between the two being in the style of package. I think, however, that 1907 will prove a good year to the trade. It would certainly be a blessing if we could find a remedy for these existing evils."

Here's Good Advice.

Wm. Dobie, general manager and treasurer of the E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd.:

"Speaking generally, in regard to business of this company may say it could not be in a more satisfactory or flourishing condition. The year just about ended, from present indications, will to be by far the best in the history of this business in Canada. All Canadians have a great deal to be thankful for and we like all others are hoping that the good times will continue for many years yet. To make a real success, all business concerns connected in any way with the grocery line should by all means advertise in "THE CANADIAN GROCER.

"We wish yourselves, your advertisers, subscribers and everyone a Happy and Prosperous New Year."

Be Cautious and All's Well.

L. E. Geffrion, manager, L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal:

"Business has been very satisfactory with us, and we have every reason to believe that 1907 will be equally as good. There may be some little reaction in prices, some may be a little lower, while again they may be higher in other lines. The great thing is to be cautious, in fact it is one of the keynotes of success in business. For the present we see no reason why we should not make a successful year of 1907."

Situation in a Nutshell.

S. J. Mathewson, of Mathewsons Sons, Montreal:

"We will see higher prices for tea in the early part of 1907, of that I am morally certain. Dried fruits are likely to be steady in price. Sugars are likely to go up. I think there will be a good sale for syrups and molasses owing to the fact that butter and lard are selling well. Cheap jams are likely to be much in request also. All lines of canned fruits will, in my estimation, sell at very fancy prices.

"As for the past year, I will sum it up in a nutshell for you—'The man who had the goods made the money.'"

Fruit as a Food.

W. H. Despard, manager White & Co., Toronto and Hamilton, writes:

"That fruit is no longer a luxury is evident by the magnitude to which the business has attained in the past few years, showing plainly that every day consumption is becoming general. Science in producing and good transportation have combined to regulate constant supply throughout the year. Perhaps the greatest factor in producing good results is the private car lines, refrigerator cars owned and operated by the Armour people, Santa Fe Railroad and others less important, and while it has become a monopoly practically, and for that reason very much condemned, yet the wholesale importing fruit trade owes its successful existence to this service.

"These cars are specially built to resist heat or cold and convey fruit in either Winter or Summer from coast to coast, and lay it down at our doors in perfect condition. In Summer, icing stations are maintained at various points and cars are kept constantly charged with ice. For this icing service an additional charge of about $80 per car is levied on cars from California, bringing the total freight and icing charges on a single car of oranges to about $400. One has to look back but a few years in Toronto to see a car of bananas last the city a week, while now during the summer season forty cars per week are often imported. The steady increase in the population is assisting largely in the increased consumption, and while the more staple lines such as oranges, lemons and bananas have increased largely, yet the public are clamoring for other and more delicate lines, such as grape fruit, grapes from Spain, tangerines, pineapples, tomatoes cantaloupes, California peaches, pears and strawberries.

"The first mentioned perhaps deserves comment, the classification under the tariff being "Shaddock." The term "grape fruit" is a misnomer. It is derived from the manner of growth on the tree, the fruit hanging in clusters of eight or ten fruit, resembling a huge bunch of grapes. Occasionally shippers very kindly enclose branches from the trees of "grape fruit" and tangerine oranges, which convey a splendid idea of their natural growth on the trees. The grape fruit is universally a breakfast fruit. It has a slightly bitter taste, but when one becomes accustomed to it he is a confirmed user. Its medical qualities are very great.

"The future of the fruit and produce business is very bright. Unlimited capital, and the best brains on the continent are allying themselves in its development. In other words it promises in the near future to supplant meat products to a large extent as the every day food of the masses, which will produce a healthier and sturdier race.

"We must not overlook the large and growing fruit interests. At our own doors rapid strides are being made in the right direction, and our own orchards and vineyards, growing and marketing large quantities of the finest, most perfectly-flavored fruits, will in a few years be able to completely supply the home markets, during their season, which we regret is only too short."

Economic Value of Cocoa and Chocolate

Jno. W. Cowan, president of the Cowan Co. writes:—

"Although many people are somewhat familiar with both cocoa and chocolate, as it is in almost daily use in one form or another, very few people are aware of its great economic value and how important it is as a food product, in our daily life. There is also a great confusion of ideas as to what cocoa and chocolate really are, many people thinking that they are a product of the cocoanut. Cocoa is an entirely different article, but like the cocoanut, is grown in nearly all tropical countries. The richness of the bean making it one of the most nutritious foods known in the whole dietary list. Nothing can describe this better than the following quotation from Baron von Liebig, one of the greatest authorities on dieteties in the world, he says:

'It is a perfect food, as wholesome as delicious, a beneficent restorer or exhausted power; but its quality must be good, and it must be carefully prepared. It is highly nourishing and easily digested, and is fitted to repair wasted strength, preserve health and prolong life. It agrees with dry temperaments and convalescents; with mothers who nurse their children; with those whose occupations oblige them to undergo severe mental strains; with public speakers, and with all those who give to work a portion of the time needed for sleep. It soothes both stomach and brain, and for this reason as well as for others, it is the best friend of those engaged in literary pursuits.' ''

Better Pork Products Wanted.

F. W. Fearman Co., Hamilton:—

"Trade during the closing year has been marked by a distinct increase in the Canadian home trade, and especially for the higher class of goods manufactured by this firm; including hams, bacon, and lard. Some lines of meats that were in general use a few years ago are now altogether uncalled for, and other lines that were in very little demand are now very much asked for.

"There is also an increasing demand for lard put up in package form, and which we think is a very desirable means for transmitting the goods from the manufacturer to the house of the consumer.

"We are pleased to see the bright face of the Canadian Grocer every week in our office, and wish you all the compliments of the season."

Major Sloan.

occasion of some oratorical outbursts that surprised even the genial and self-possessed head of the firm. Those present were: Major John Sloan, Chas. Parsons, F. M. Tait, J. B. Mayled, W. H. Maxwell, H. Brett, P. H. Brown, F. Bone, F. M. Sloan, A. Armstrong, Geo. Sanderson, W. M. Cole, J. H. Burton, H. G. Elliott, J. R. Smith, John Hayden.

The company sat at a round table, so that there was no head or foot. Major Sloan told how the year's business had been the largest in the firm's history, and paid a high tribute to the efficiency of the men who sold the goods. The chair was filled by Chas. Parsons, whose services with the firm have extended over 25 years. A feature of the occasion was a presentation to Frank Sloan of a silk umbrella by the travelling staff. Mr. Sloan replied in fitting terms.

DRUMMERS' SNACK CLUB.

An Evening of Business and Pleasure Arranging Summer Picnic.

The annual general meeting of the Drummers' Snack Club was held on President, J. W. Charles.

Thursday last, Dec. 27, at the King Edward Hotel. John W. Charles, president, was in the chair, and a representative body of members was on hand.

The main subject for deliberation was the regular summer outing at Alton, to be held on July 27 and 28, and plans were discussed for making the meeting bigger and better than ever.

When it was felt that the serious part of the programme had occupied enough consideration, the drummers turned their attention to other matters, and a generally enjoyable time was the result.

The officers present, in addition to the president, were Charles Irvine, treasurer; Dr. Algie, home secretary, Alton; M. P. Malone, Hamilton secretary; F. C. Hunt, Toronto secretary. Among the members were B. R. Bowles, Col. Stoneman, Will G. White, Peter Smith, Wm. White, Wm. Colville, Sol. Walters, E. R. Bowles, James Hooper, Charles Smith, Bay Hill, Wm. Meen and Ernie Clark.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

New Messina Lemons in Great Demand—Storms Damage Jamaica Bananas—Best Christmas Fruit Trade in Years, Say Dealers.

Reports from Palermo, Sicily, state that the first cargo of this season's crop of lemons for America left there on Dec. 18. The crop will be double that of last year, but prices are expected to be about 30 per cent. higher, as large sales have already taken place. The fruit is especially in demand among the manufacturers of citric acid. Many recent orders have been only partially filled. Storms in Jamaica have caused serious damage in the banana districts of the island and it is probable that deliveries of this fruit also will be affected.

"The best Christmas fruit business in recent years" is the verdict of both wholesalers and retailers concerning the season just past. Oranges were the main feature. Dealers who ordered stock intended to cover both Christmas and New Year's trade were compelled to repeat in order to meet the demand for fruit for the second holiday.

The Christmas vegetable trade was entirely satisfactory, but the demand for January 1st was none too good.

In the fish market reports from the east, especially Newfoundland, indicate that the prevalent mild weather makes the outlook for frozen herring somewhat unfavorable.

With the exception of fruit, prices are little changed.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Activity in this market is limited now that the holidays are over. Some business is being done, but not very much. Oranges and lemons are in good demand at current prices. Bananas are in good request, but supplies are short.

VEGETABLES—Several new lines are quoted this week, including green peppers, which are again on the market, this time in crates instead of half barrel baskets as a couple of months ago. Dealers ask $6 a crate. There is very little new in the market. New potatoes are quoted 6c. a pound, or $8.50 a barrel. Florida tomatoes are offering at $6 a crate. Spinach is advancing week by week, $5 now being obtainable. It is said that the crop in the States was frozen, which will have the effect of sending up prices, if true.

FISH—There has been no change in fish prices since last week. Business is fair to medium, the holidays having the effect of keeping down trade more or less. Oysters are selling well at prices quoted, while demand for other lines is sufficient to keep fish merchants from being altogether idle.

GOOD THINGS FOR GILLETT STAFF.

A feature of the Christmas holidays with E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd., Toronto, was the presentation of a gold piece to every employe. The value varied according to the length of service and position held by the employe. The pleasant innovation was much appreciated by the recipients.

On Friday last Mr. Wm. Dobie, General Manager and Treasurer, entertained the travelers and office staff with a dinner at the King Edward Hotel and afterwards to a theatrical treat at Sheas —The Grocer was kindly included among the guests and appreciated as did all present, the enjoyable entertainment. It has been Mr. Dobie's custom annually to bring "the boys" together for an evening's outing. May the precedent be maintained.

Over 35,000 turkeys will be shipped to the West from London this season, giving that city second place to Montreal as a distributing centre for poultry in the Dominion.

INSPECTION OF CANNED APPLES

Glasgow Correspondent says Governm ent Supervision is Necessary in the Interest of the Trade—Canada the Orch ard of the Empire.

George Guest of Glasgow, dealer in American and French food stuffs, inclosing an article from the Glasgow Record headed, "Orchard of the Empire, the Boom in Canadian Apples," writes to the editor of the Canadian Grocer:

The writer of this article attaches considerable importance to the way in which the grading and shipping of fresh apples has been supervised by the Canadian Government, and as stated in the article, any barrel which does not conform to the brand is not allowed out of the country.' Now, what about canned apples? There is no uniformity about the gallon cans of apples shipped from Canada, and it appears to be no one's business to look after the grading and packing of these. During last season, I imported from Canada, 15,000 cases of gallon tins and more than 10 per cent. were of very poor average quality, and 1,500 or 2,000 cases were light weight, averaging about 3 3-4 or less of apples per gallon tin, while United States apples average 4 1-2 lbs. per gallon can.

In the interest of the trade with this country, the Government should control the shipping of canned apples as well as of fresh apples in barrels. Two shipments of gallon tins arrived at this port, the quality of which was so bad, owing to blown and defective tins, that a large proportion of the shipment was carted away by the sanitary officials as unfit for food.

As the packing season is now approaching, it would be in the packers' interest to give this matter attention.

Yours, etc.
George Guest.

The Orchard of the Empire.

The article from the Glasgow Record follows:

Canada has long been known as the "Granary of the Empire;" and the vast Dominion is quickly justifying its claim to be designated also as the "Orchard of the Empire."

At present the demand for the apples of Canada is so great that the Anchor, Allan, and Donaldson Lines of steamships cannot bring over the fruit quickly enough.

Glasgow is, of course, the distributing apple centre for all Scotland and the North of England. Only the other day a Newcastle firm purchased no fewer than 10,000 barrels, and the demand for supplies from other quarters was so great that the prices jumped up on an average from 4s. to 6s. per barrel. Greenings, which could be purchased on Monday at 12s. the barrel, went up to 16s. on Tuesday, and the other qualities rose in proportion.

"The growth and development of the Canadian apple trade," said Mr. Malcolm Campbell, of the well-known Glasgow firm of that name, to a representative of The Daily Record and Mail, is perhaps one of the most surprising features in connection with our relations with the Dominion. Of course there is nothing like the money in apples that there is in grain. But certain it is that the apple industry is showing more rapid strides than any other in the Dominion."

Phenomenal Growth.

Mr. Campbell could not quite account for the phenomenally rapid development made by the trade in recent years, but he expressed the opinion that the adoption of a trade mark by the Canadian Government had had not a little to do with it.

"The head officials of the Agricultural Department not only watch the growth but the export of the fruit," he said. "When I paid a visit to Ottawa, the officials of the Department took me round the farms, showed me how the apples were picked and packed, and the result of what I saw then convinced me that we in this country owe much to the Government for the excellent condition in which the fruit arrives.

"Years ago we could not depend on what we were getting, though the apples at the top of the barrel were according to the quality demanded but now they are all of the same quality, and we receive a guarantee to that effect for every barrel which reads:—

"'This barrel of apples is not topped, but is genuinely packed from top to bottom by our own growers.'

"The officials at the ports act the part of policemen, and any barrel which does not conform to the brand is not allowed out of the country."

Finally, Mr. Campbell gave the interesting information that, although the crop in the United States this year is exceptionally heavy, British importers will have nothing to do with the States article. "All are tumbling over one another in their anxiety to secure Canadians."

Handling the Crop.

Latest mail advices show that the shipments of apples from the port of Montreal for the first week of October, were as follows:—

To	Barrels.
Bristol	1,264
Glasgow	16,585
Liverpool	17,168
London	1,860
Manchester	2,046

It seems that there is need for improvement in the marketing of the crop to the best advantage. There are hundreds of apple growers, says Professor Hutt of the Ontario Agricultural College, who can grow first-class fruit to every one who can place it on the market when and where it will bring the best price.

The remedy for this state of affairs, and what is going to put the apple trade on a better business basis, says the Professor, is for the growers in each apple growing section to unite and form a co-operative association through which the grading, packing and marketing of the fruit may be accomplished.

During the past year a number of these associations have been formed in various parts of the Province, and the prices obtained by some of them for last year's apples have made the growers enthusiastic over this method of handling the crop.

Through such an organization, boxes and barrels can be purchased wholesale to better advantage than they can be obtained by single individuals; the grower can devote his whole attention to gathering the crop at the proper season and delivering it in good condition at the central packing house; the association relieves him of all care and responsibility in grading, packing, and marketing; and with this work in the hands of expert packers, the grade of fruit can be made uniform, and the packing can be done properly, which, in time, inspires confidence in the purchasing public.

In short, the co-operative system of handling the apple crop, under proper management, assures the consumer of a better product, and realises to the grower a greater profit.

GOLD STANDARD BONUS.

"The smile that won't come off" is illuminating the countenances of the employes of the Codville-Georgeson Co., Ltd., the Winnipeg wholesale grocers and manufacturers of Gold Standard goods, Winnipeg. The smile emanates from the fact that the firm this year distributed between $4,000 and $5,000 amongst its numerous employes in the form of bonus based on the yearly salary. In all, about 150 employes were made happy and everyone connected with the firm for the past three months or more was remembered. Each one was handed an envelope which contained a cheque and a gracious letter thanking them for their hearty co-operation in bringing an exceptionally successful year's business to a satisfactory ending.

The firm did not overlook the many people employed on its factory staff, where Gold Standard teas, coffees, baking powders, jelly powders, extracts, spices, etc., are manufactured and packed. A unique leature of the plan was the setting of a maximum bonus which granted the smaller salaried employes a larger amount proportionately than their more fortunate fellow workers.

S -D. Stewart, Montreal, Quebec, representative of the Heinz Co., Pittsburg, Pa., was a caller on The Grocer, Toronto, this week. Mr. Stewart was vention of the Heinz Company's travelon his way home from the annual coning staff. The Quebec trade for Heinz shows a very satisfactory increase and a steady growth.

REASONS FOR SUCCESS

There are always good substantial reasons for success and lots of Grocers attribute their success to the attention they have paid to their cigar counter.

If a Grocer features good cigars it's about as certain as anything can be in this world that he will build up a select and paying trade.
It would certainly astonish you if we gave you the big list of Grocers who feature cigars and it would astonish you more if we could print the nice things they say about them.

PHARAOH AND PEBBLE

The Pebble is the best 5c. cigar ever sold in Canada. It is a high-grade, Havana-filled cigar and some Grocers sell it at 10c.

The Pharaoh is made from personally selected tobaccos. I guarantee it, and smokers say that this cigar is peerless.

I have a special help-the-Grocer Plan. Do you know about it?

THIS FIRM IS GETTING AHEAD.

Among the letters patent recently granted at Ottawa was one incorporating the Commission Export and Import firm of D. Rattray & Sons into a Limited Company, capitalized at $500,000.

The firm of D. Rattray & Sons was organized in Quebec as a commission and war?housing firm in 1890. Their business developed so rapidly in its various lines that in 1903 it was deemed necessary to open an office in Montreal under the management of D. J. Rattray. The growth of the business since its Montreal office was opened has been phenomenal not only all over Canada, but the United States and Europe.

The firm act as sole Canadian representative of some of the most important European shippers of dried fruits, nuts, sugars, etc., and also handle the eastern Canadian business of Armour & Company, Chicago; DaCosta & Co., Barbados, for sugar, molasses, etc., and are large shippers to Europe and the United States of fish, oils, maple sugac, etc.

The firm has an office of its own in Montreal, Quebec, and Ottawa, and special representatives in practically every important centre in Canada, the United States, and Europe.

We commend the firm on their enterprise, and wish it continued success.

A PRESENTATION.

Before departing for their several homes for the Xmas holidays, the travelers and members of the office and warehouse staff of the Red Rose Tea branch, presented Manager Campbell with a handsome writing desk and chair (in mission oak) accompanied by a short address, to which Mr. Campbell responded most happily.

Mr. Campbell wasn't getting married; he attended to that long ago. The desk and chair were an expression of the hearty good will existing between the manager and the travelling staff.

This presentation was followed by another, in which Mr. Miller, on behalf of the travellers and office staff presented Miss Stevenson and Miss Tweedie, two popular members of the "Red Rose" office staff, each with a gold brooch.

TRADE NOTES.

The stores and offices of L. Chaput Fils & Cie., Montreal, were closed from December 29th until Wednesday morning, January 2nd.

George Small, of the Canada Maple Exchange, donated three hundred pounds of candy to the dinner being given by the Boys' Sunshine Club, of Montreal, to the newsboys.

Messrs. Connor Bros., fish dealers of Blacks Harbor, New Brunswick, are sending their customers and friends a very tasty calendar for Christmas, "The Bride" on her Honeymoon.

Hill & Berman, a couple of progressive young Montrealers, have opened a grocery store in the Montreal annex and are already beginning to make their presence felt in that part af the city.

Word has been received by the vice-president of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, F. W. Thompson, that all the machinery in the company's mill at Fort William had stood severe tests admirably.

Mrs. Jennie M. Isard, wife of E. A. Isard, manager of the Hamilton Vinegar Works Co., died at her home in Hamilton on Saturday evening, Dec. 22, in her 42nd year, and about twenty minutes after her father-in-law, John Isard, died at his home in the same city, in his 77th year. Mr. Isard was a native of Kent, England, and came to Canada about 50 years ago.

A very handy and neatly gotten up reduction table, to facilitate the reckoning in Canadian currency the cost of articles quoted in English shillings, has been sent out to many business men recently with the compliments of C. A. Chouillou & Co. Mr. Chouillou deserves credit for the manner in which the table is arranged. Among other things the card gives the correct pronunciation of the firm's name, "Shoeyou."

THE RETAIL MAIL ORDER PROBLEM

Into many branches of the retail business the mail order problem is obtruding itself with an emphasis that cannot be ignored; in fact, the stage has been reached where a check must be put upon it if it is not to continue feeding upon business which logically belongs to the local merchant, until it first menaces the volume of profit which he should reasonably be able to count upon, and then claims and is accorded by the consumer a settled position in every local field throughout the country.

The retailer must face the matter squarely and studiously. He knows that mail order business is hurting him, and that it is backed by publicity methods which give the consumer, wherever he may be, every opportunity to know the prices quoted, and the advantages which are claimed for the system. On application catalogues, printed at great expense, are sent to any address. This is supplemented by periodical circulars calculated to hold and develop the interest which the catalogue aims to create.

Day by day and week by week the mail order houses are conducting a campaign to educate the buying public to the view that goods can be purchased at much better prices from them than from the local retailer. This movement is directed by expert advertising men, and is as convincing as it is possible to make it. Each merchant knows, or should know, just how well the scheme is succeeding in his individual territory.

A Campaign of Education.

All the while that a systematic, skillful attempt is being made to cut into his business, by persistently telling the people that they can save money through purchasing from catalogue, what is the merchant doing to protect the place that rightfully belongs to him? It is obvious to any one who has followed the progress of the mail order houses across the line that the question is one calling for action, prompt and unanimous.

Unquestionably the mail order system is straight business, if the goods delivered are of the quality advertised. Admit that they are, and the problem must be approached as legitimate competition, which, like all competitive inroads into a firm's sales, must be eliminated as far as possible. Added to this are distinctive features which furnish the main ground upon which effective combative tactics can be based.

First of all stands the fact that the local merchant is the man on the spot; he has behind him the prestige of personal acquaintanceship with a great many of his customers, and his goods are there to be examined thoroughly before being purchased. In this is embodied, then, the fundamental principles from which to evolve a plan of attack.

Here we come to the very evident fact that individually merchants cannot pursue a policy that will work a great deal of good. They all have a common interest in the matter, and, therefore, association of ideas in formulating lines on which the campaign shall be operated, and co-operation in carrying it out, is the logical procedure. In many towns and cities the retailers have been organized for the promotion of better local conditions, with a central body to deal with questions of wider scope. There is, perhaps, no problem of more lively importance, upon which the attention of the whole organization can be focused at the present time, than that relating to mail order competition.

The objective point would be the education of the consumer to patronize the home market in purchasing all classes of commodities.

Printed Page the Best Weapon.

The claims of the mail order houses are represented by the advertising matter which they distribute. The only way in which the local merchants can reach all consumers is by printed matter also. This would not be in the nature of catalogues or circulars, however, but well-written literature, setting down in direct, convincing terms the desirability of trading at home: the extent to which the prosperity of a community—and, consequently, of everyone resident in that community—is dependant upon the money earned there being circulated locally. Arguments along this line might take the form of simple lessons in economics. The scheme of business life is the interchange of values, and just as the activity in a given territory increases or decreases will the standing of the territory and the individual and collective prosperity of the populace rise or fall.

The scope for enlarging arguments in this direction is not by any means limited. Real good matter could be compiled, and with whatever form of follow-up literature might be decided upon, good results should accrue. Then the assistance of the newspapers might be enlisted. With the facts before him the local editor would willingly devote a good deal of editorial and news space to the publication of helpful items. Here, again, is illustrated the necessity for combined action, for where an organization could secure valuable and extensive co-operation from the papers the individual could not.

Organized Action Necessary.

The development of the subject should be handled systematically. In this way a public sentiment along the desired lines could be aroused and maintained. It would be better that the direct object of the campaign should not appear, for that would make the mail order system more conspicious, and lead public thought into controversial channels. This is not desirable, and the greater aspect of independence borne by the movement the better. If such a course were decided upon the work would be directed by each retail association, or from the central body, and the expenses met by special assessment.

But the campaign must be carried much farther than that. Each merchant must conduct one within the confines of his own business, and endeavor to bring his facilities up to the very best degree of efficiency. Doing so, he may prepare a situation that will justify the claims made through the literature distributed.

The merchant should study how he is going to buy to better advantage than he has been doing. The saving that he can accomplish means cheaper prices to his customers, and greater attraction to the home market. Cash discounts point out a way in which a good deal can be done. Many merchants will find that it pays them to borrow money from the bank to secure the discounts. This depends a good deal on how often stocks can be turned in the year. Merchants' associations should go into the matter exhaustively.

Personal influence is not to be ignored. The merchant will find it a great help in fighting mail order houses for him to know as many of his customers personally as possible. He should make his own prestige, and that of his store, stronger at every opportunity.

The question is a large one, and there are many points that would be revealed in discussion. The urgency of action must be apparent to every merchant who knows his field as he should, and in the meantime let each one give some serious thought to it, and find out just how far the mail order business has advanced in his district.—T. M. W.

VENTILATION OF SHOPS.

The proper ventilation of a grocer's store, or one where a miscellaneous stock is kept, is of the highest importance, and yet very little attention is paid to the subject. Show windows are filled with costly goods and then tightly closed, not a particle of air being allowed to circulate. Modern stores are, however, doing away with the enclosed windows, and thus getting rid of a great deal of trouble, besides saving a loss from the exposure of choice merchandise to the bad influence of confined air heavily laden with the evaporation from articles of different flavor. No small amount of damage is done to the stock by the store being closely shut at night. In the Summer the air is close and heated, while in the Winter time a furnace or stove is kept burning throughout the night, thus keeping the temperature to a high point. Fresh air is indispensable to the proper preservation of stock, as articles such as tea, salt, coffee, butter, etc., are extremely susceptible to foreign flavors. The confined air of the store is vitiated by the heat and the emanations that arise from a stock of vegetable matter, provisions of various sorts, dried fruits, etc. From eight to ten hours the store is closed, and merchandise subjected to damage from want of proper ventilation. If the store is not tidily kept, and refuse matter is allowed to accumulate, the danger of loss is enhanced. Cellars are still more subject to neglect, and where they are damp and the space well occupied, and no sunlight can enter or fresh air circulate, the liability to damage is very great. Aside from a pecuniary loss likely to be sustained by a lack of proper ventilation, some consideration is due to the health of those employed in the store. In the Summer season store doors are generally left standing open, and the store is fairly ventilated, but during the Winter months the opposite is the case. Almost every person accustomed to opening the store knows how stifling and offensive the air is upon entering in the morning where there has been no ventilation. Fresh air is a necessity, and every merchant should see to it that every part of his place of business is thoroughly ventilated. Have flues in the shop windows if they are enclosed. Have the cellar opened frequently, and so arrange it that at all times there is a free circulation of air; whitewash it at least twice a year; look out for damp spots; do not allow piles of rubbish to accumulate; the germs of disease will gather about potato and other bins unless all decayed matter is kept removed. Wherever mold or dampness is found there lurks danger to health. The store should be scrubbed at least once a month; a large ventilator should be placed over the front door, and flues constructed leading from the inside of the store to the roof and opening into the air. Arrange the modes of ventilation so as to secure throughout the night a free circulation of out-of-door air. A few dollars judiciously spent will secure this, and save hundreds of times over the cost in the better preservation of the stock.—American Grocer.

The Right Way Pays

Take a trip through Western Ontario any sunny day in September and on the undulating grazing lands lush with the growth of rich, succulent, grasses, you can see the herds of shorthorns and Jerseys which contribute their quota to the cream from which is produced

No better cream than we use for our raw material is produced anywhere in the world, but in nature there is nothing more delicate, and to preserve its flavor, to guard it from contamination, to retain its sweetness, the utmost skill and cleanliness are essential. The conversion of this cream of creams to the ideal cheese is an exact science—every step in the process of manufacture is taken with care and precision.

From this it is quite evident why MacLaren's Imperial Cheese is different from ordinary cheese--why the quality of it is invariably, unalterably, the same—why it scored perfection (100 points) at the World's Fair. This absolute certainty about the quality will appeal to your best customers as it appeals to discriminating consumers the world over.

From The Profit Point of View

your margin is just as invariable as the quality,—no loss in weight, nor waste, no deterioration from dust or germs. No question of loss—a sure profit on every pot.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH AND SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH

Large Advertising

Goods with merit have a claim upon the progressive grocer's attention, but when that merit is exploited by the manufacturer with such liberal methods of advertising as we pursue with our well-known and deservingly popular RISING SUN Stove Polish in cakes and SUN PASTE Stove Polish in Tins, the real live dealer must recognize the help we give him in selling the right stove polish. Largely increased sales support our policy of merit backed by extensive advertising.

HELP WANTED

To double the already enormous sales of our famous during 1907. It can be done.

WOOD'S COFFEES

The process is simple: Every grocer who has not done so should give his patrons a chance to test their quality and virtues. That will settle it.

Don't Be Caught

like many canners were this year—with a short supply of cans and a large pack of fruits and vegetables ready for canning.

It is poor policy to put off ordering your cans until the last minute, when chances are that the manufacturers cannot guarantee to supply the goods.

Acme Cans are Good Cans

Four Reasons why INVICTUS FIBRE is the BEST FIBRE PAPER on the Market

1. Invictus Fibre is made from personally selected pulp wood cut on our own limits.
2. This special pulp wood is again rigidly culled on arrival at our mills
3. The pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made is manufactured in our own pulp mill and transferred at once to the paper mill, avoiding all drawbacks of transportation.
4. Invictus Fibre will increase in strength and not grow hard and brittle as does fibre made from sulphite pulp. This is a quality of the peculiar and selected pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made.

A trial order will convince you that we are correct. See that each package bears the words "Invictus Fibre." Every ream contains 480 sheets

They Cost Something, Of Course.

But enough Allison Coupon Books to last a year won't cost as much as the amount you will lose by the carelessness of your clerks in forgetting to "charge up" numerous small purchases; and disputed pass-book entries, where you have to allow your customer's kick or lose him.

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? Hamilton, January 3rd, 1907

Dear Sir:—One of our wholesale customers called us up on the 'phone the other day, and mentioned that one of his country customers had sent some Poultry for our Aylmer factory in his care, and that the price was to be 10c. per lb. "I had no idea," said he, "that your "people pay such high prices for your Poultry. Some "retailers and consumers seem to have the impression "that all Canned Poultry is made up of all kinds of scrap "meat, and if they were acquainted with the facts that you "pay such high prices for your Poultry, and insist on the very best quality, "it would increase the consumption very much." We assured our esteemed customer that our Canned Poultry was absolutely guaranteed to be exactly what it is represented to be, and that taking into consideration the trouble in cleaning Poultry, waste of bone, etc., our Canned Poultry is very much better and cheaper than Poultry in its fresh state.

Aylmer Poultry is especially recommended for invalids, as owing to being thoroughly sterilized there is no danger of any bacterial trouble of any kind, as with Poultry not canned. Aylmer Chicken Soup is recommended by physicians from coast to coast. Every retail grocer in the country should keep these high-grade products in stock, and should lose no opportunity to place their merits before his customers.

Yours faithfully,

CANADIAN CANNERS,
LIMITED

A few reasons why Ozo Jams should be and are considerably better than any others now being made in Canada :

1. As Montreal is by far the largest buying centre in the country, enormous quantities of all kinds of fruit are sent to be marketed here, and as ripe fruit has to be disposed of within 24 hours of arrival a glut is sure to occur in some fruit every day—it might be peaches to-day, or strawberries to-morrow—some fruit is sure to be over-shipped, which we can buy at a price averaging as low as what it would pay to grow it; and buying fruit at this price naturally we can afford to use more of it.

2. Our Jam plant is the largest in Canada, contains the finest, cleanest and most modern equipment, which enables us not only to turn out an enormous quantity but give far better quality as well.

3. We can buy sugar on the wharf at a great saving over what it would cost if freighted west, and consequently are enabled to put in a much larger proportion in the cheaper qualities.

4. Having the turnover, we are able to purchase our packages at the very lowest price.

5. As we believed that these natural advantages would enable us to take the lead in the Jam business, we sent to England for the most expert Jam cook we could find. As money was no object, we got him and placed him in charge of our Jam Department, where his 28 years of practical experience are enabling him to turn out goods which are a revelation to the trade, and are causing a large increase in sales in this line with the people who are handling them.

6. Notwithstanding our ability to turn out a product equal to any made in the country at a lower price, our aim is to put this saving in the cost of production into bettering the quality of the goods, thus putting purchasers of our goods beyond the reach of competition.

With this information at hand you can readily see why so many of the largest wholesalers have placed their Jam contracts with us, and we think you will also see that it will be to your advantage, and that of your customers, to place your Jam business with us.

We quote Standard Brand Jam

It is indeed white as snow. It is true in flavor. It is fine and even in the cut. It is pleasing in taste. It does not grow rancid quickly like poorly made cocoanut. It is made to satisfy the most exacting.
An important point, too, is that it costs you no more than inferior stuff—perhaps not as much. Then, too, our WHITE SWAN guarantee is behind every pound.

ACCOUNT KEEPING

FOR THE

RETAIL GROCER

An address by Fred C. Gilbert, C.A., before the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association.

I felt flattered when I was requested to come before you and give a talk on Business Systems Suitable for the Retail Trade, because the citizens of Ottawa recognize that the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association is a very live and progressive organization. What I have to say to your association this evening must be purely from the standpoint of an accountant who is an outsider so far as practical acquaintance with the retail grocery business is concerned. On this account some details of my remarks may be subject to correction; but because the same general principles of book-keeping apply to all businesses, I may venture to hope that something of what is said may be of some practical value to you.

Book-keeping has been defined as "the science of recording business transactions in such a manner that a clear and correct statement of affairs is always shown."

The elaborate system of the most extensive wholesale or manufacturing concern can show no more—the system of any dealer in the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association should, I think, be arranged to show no less.

Most retail dealers cannot afford an extended book-keeping system—it has to be as simple as possible in design and occupy as little time as possible. This end may be secured and yet a complete record be kept from which a correct statement of affairs may be shown at any time.

It is sometimes considered that the main, if not the only purpose of keeping books is to secure a record of what customers owe, and to enable the book-keeper or proprietor to render accounts.

What is owing to the wholesaler is left for him to look after,; except to, perhaps, keep unpaid accounts on one file and paid ones to another. Notes and acceptances are in like manner sometimes very loosely looked after or kept track of roughly in such a way as to ensure a knowledge of their being met when due, but not in an orderly manner. I have known many thoroughly honest dealers simply neglect their paper through lack of system and thus cause annoyance to the creditors and depreciation of their own credit.

Where wholesale accounts and bills payable are not accurately recorded, there is necessarily a lack of record of the other items that are required to make double entry book-keeping possible—the only system by which it is possible to record business transactions so that a correct statement of affairs may be obtained at any time.

Only One Rule.

Double entry book-keeping is not necessarily complicated, though it often appears so to the uninitiated. Only one rule has to be borne in mind. For every debit there must be a corresponding credit and conversely for every credit there must be a corresponding debit.

I will now proceed to deal with the various transactions that occur in a retail dealer's business and show how, in the recording of them this rule may be carried out in a manner that is at the same time simple and complete.

We naturally turn first to the transactions with customers—goods sold on credit or for cash and payments on account. Returns of goods hardly need be dealt with as they are usually simply deducted from the customer's account—we will deal with the net amount.

The system of charging goods by a duplicating process with the use of carbon paper, so that one writing marks the bill and the entry, has been one of the great boons of this busy age, and to none is the advantage greater than the grocer whose transactions are so numerous and require the least possible time spent upon them.

The old style order-book, day-book and customers pass-book may have some advantages; but to the writer's mind they are obsolete methods and should be discarded by the modern business man. The counter check-book and the loose leaf monthly account systems ensure accuracy, saving of time, satisfaction to customer and prompt rendering of accounts. This last is most necessary in a business dealing largely with the perishible necessities of life—such accounts grow quickly and require close watching, which can be done much more readily by this system than in the old way. Then prompt rendering of accounts means prompt settlement almost invariably and the sooner you get your money the sooner you can use it over again.

Suppose a Case.

Let us suppose a month's transactions closed, you have charged your customers with the goods purchased on credit and their accounts are rendered. You remove the duplicate sheets from the current binder to the day-book or transfer binder, then on a recapitulation sheet enter the totals of each account, the grand total of this sheet gives the credit sales for month, which is entered in bulk on the credit side of your merchandise account and you have a credit for every customer's debit for the period covered. The cash sales for each day are entered on the debit side of the cash book. It will pay to keep a separate column for this purpose and the totals of this is also posted to credit of merchandise account and with the total charges shows your transactions in the way of sales for the month.

The cash received on account from customers should also have a separate column in the cash book, the total of which for the month gives what has been paid in by the customers. By comparing this amount with the total charges it is seen at a glance whether your outstanding accounts are less or greater than they were a month previous. Also by this method the total amount owing by customers may be ascertained in a few minutes, if at stock-taking time, they have been inventoried. To the amount of them at that time add each month's total of charges since then and deduct the totals of amounts paid on account each month. The net result is the total outstanding. You may find it is too heavy and requires looking into to ascertain who are slow in their settlements.

Example of a Monthly Account—Minus the Heading.

you buy, and the treatment is similar but reversed. You buy as you sell, both for cash and on credit and I would therefore have two columns on the credit side of cash books, one for payments for goods bought without being charged to you and one for payments on account to creditors—the total of the former being posted to the debit side of merchandise account.

I approach the subject of treatment of invoices from wholesale houses with a little diffidence. Naturally my theory is that they should all go through a journal or invoice register and be posted to the credits of the various concerns; but I think very many consider this takes up altogether too much time of the ordinary retailer and that something simpler must be adopted. I am of the opinion that many keep invoices or accounts without any entry until they are paid, which is generally at short dates, and then simply charge them as cash purchases through the cash book. This, however, does not enable you to get your financial position at any period required, besides which some are settled by note or acceptance, and such can be more readily recorded through a ledger account.

Reserve a part of your ledger for wholesale accounts—if your business is not large enough to allow of a separate book—and post once a month direct to the ledger from the invoices the amounts of same, not necessarily allowing a line for each one, but putting date below and amount above the line, extending the totals to credit of the accounts. Post the totals of all invoices to debit of merchandise account and this amount added to the cash payments for same for the month referred to above gives cost of purchases for the month.

At Stock-taking.

At stock-taking time, inventory of goods on hand deducted from total of purchases for each month since last stock-taking and amount of last inventory shows cost of goods sold for the period and the credit side of merchandise for same period shows selling price of the same goods, and the difference is your gross gain. From this deduct your running expenses, salaries, taxes, rent, rolling stock, up-keep, fuel, light, insurance, office supplies, etc., for all of which you have kept accounts and charged them with amounts paid out or contracted and the result is your net gain.

Then in the same way that you can ascertain the amounts owing you by customers at any period, you may compute your own outstanding liabilities. Starting from a known list of same add the totals of each month's purchases on credit and deduct the payments made on same; add to this balance the amount of outstanding bills payable and your whole liabilities are revealed. The list of indebtedness, however, in this case would not only be accounts owing for merchandise, but would also include outstanding accounts of such expense items as were referred to above, which would be credited to the party from whom purchased, the same as with the purchases for goods, but charged to the various expense accounts—thus again securing the debit and credit for each amount.

Notes and Drafts.

The next item requiring attention is the matter of notes and drafts, mostly payable, but receivable ones should be dealt with in the same way, reversing the entries. Keep a bill book and add a couple of columns to it—they are seldom or never arranged with these, one column for cash discounts, if you have many settlements by note or acceptance with such, another column for ledger folio of the account settled by the bills payable or receivable. Post from bill book to ledger account. Total the amount of bills for the month and post to credit bills payable account in your ledger or of bills receivable to debit side of that account. Have a column on the credit side of cash book for bills payable and post total of same to debit of that account. The balance of this account shows the amount outstanding, which may be verified if necessary by reference to the bill book.

Reference was made to a column for cash discount in the bill book if this is used the net amounts of notes or drafts are posted to bills payable account, the total of cash discount column to credit of that account and the creditor is charged with the total in each case, thus covering his discount.

A most important book in any business is the cash book, and as will be seen from remarks above, I would advocate one with several columns on each side, having which enables the monthly posting to various accounts of the frequently recurring entries, on the debit side we have already referred to cash sales and payments on customers' accounts, another would be required for sundries and possibly one for cash discounts received if they were numerous, and one for bills receivable if the business were large and many settlements were made by note. On the credit side there would be merchandise column for cash purchases, one for payments to creditors, bills payable and possibly expense and other detailed expenditures where the business was extensive.

A Favorite Form.

A sheet that meets with much favor in large businesses is a "Synoptic" or journal cash book, exhibiting cash and other transactions for the month in a detailed and easily understood manner.

The cash book should be frequently balanced, preferably daily, for which purpose the total of each day's amounts may be carried to a total column and balanced by cross addition without interfering with the arrangement of monthly totals of columns.

The bank account calls for some attention. If this is kept in the ledger, I would suggest either posting direct from cash book daily if it is desired to secure the balance from this ledger account the credits being posted from the stub of cheque book, charging the account and crediting the bank and from the bill book charging bills payable and crediting the bank. Or a column may be provided on credit side of cash book for deposits and the total of same posted monthly and one on the debit side for cheques issued and notes or acceptances paid, this total in like manner being posted monthly and exhibiting the balance on hand in bank each month. With the latter procedure, the amount of cheque issued or acceptance paid would then be treated as cash paid out and charged on the credit side of cash book through the proper column.

My own preference is for a bank account kept altogether in the cash book, preferably on the debit side, which generally has less columns than the credit side. Three columns are required, one for deposits, one for withdrawals, and the third for balance. All payments, whether in cash or by cheque or acceptance, are entered on credit side of cash in regular columns, same as above, and also in the bank column for withdrawals. Deposits are entered in the column for that purpose and the difference is the balance in bank, which should agree with the bank pass book balance plus any outstanding cheques not yet presented for payment. The balancing of these bank columns should be done daily or at least frequently.

Do Without a Journal.

I do not know whether I have explained my ideas in a clear manner or not. I do not know whether I have told any of you anything you did not know already; but I have endeavored to present to you methods for complete double entry bookkeeping, without, I think, too elaborate details even for a moderate business. You will notice I have made no mention of a journal. I think it may be done without except in large businesses—yet everything is journalized; that is arranged as a debit and credit by direct posting from day book, bill book, cash book and invoices to the ledger, where results are all focussed and from which with but little trouble in addition to an inventory of stock, a complete and accurate statement of your financial standing may be secured at any time. Not only so, but as I have endeavored to show, your sales may be watched and compared month by month, close watch may be maintained with your customers' accounts, and the totals of outstanding indebtedness, both to and by you, may be ascertained month by month. With a monthly account system written up daily, your accounts may be rendered within a day or two after the first of the month—by some firms they are put out on the last day—and you may then proceed at once to the recapitulation of sales, totalling of same and of bills payable, merchandise purchases, and have a statement of your relative sales, accounts receivable, indebtedness and other information a few days after the close of the month's business. I say a few days, but there would be nothing to hinder this being ready the first day of the month with the system properly in running order.

Must be Up-to-Date.

This is an age of strenuous life, of keen competition and of exacting detail. To succeed, men must be abreast or ahead of the times and this requirement not only extends to the buying, the selling and the advertising, but also to the office detail. You must be up-to-the-hour in this as in all other respects. Prompt and accurate in rendering of accounts, keen to take all the discounts possible and to that end know by systematic method when accounts should be paid—careful to guard your acceptances and thus safeguard your credit. There never was a time when moral risk meant so much to banks and wholesalers as today and for this reason, keep accurate record of your acceptances; in a word, have the latest methods and appliances in your office as you do in your shop, and it is very easy prophecy to say that you will be a long way from the bottom of the ladder before many years pass.

WILL HANG ALL THE TRAVELLERS.

The opportunity afforded by the retirement of R. T. Steele from Lucas, Steele & Bristol, Hamilton, was improved by the travellers of the firm last week to evidence their appreciation of Mr. Steele, and their hearty goodwill towards him. It took the form of a group photograph of themselves handsomely framed. Mr. Steele has always been very popular with and a good friend of the travellers.

QUIT THE ROAD.

A. H. Milner, until recently a traveller with H. P. Eckardt & Company, representing that firm in the Niagara Peninsula, has quit the road with the intention of entering another line of business. He has not yet quite decided where he will locate. Mr. Milner is a young man with a bright future. Of very likeable quality and tireless energy, he was meeting with splendid success, and though on the road but a short time, had made a host of friends among both travellers and merchants.

BUSINESS MEN IN MUNICIPAL LIFE

No. 8

One of the most active members of the Montreal City Council is Joseph Ward, of Joseph Ward & Company. Mr. Ward, who was elected by acclamation at the last elections in February of this year, has made his presence felt on the council. He represents St. Andrew's ward, where are residences of some of the most prominent business and professional men of the city. A member of the fire, health and market committees, he necessarily spends much of his time working in the interests of the citizens of his adopted city. He is endeavoring to secure for the city, and particularly for the business district, better protection against fire, and, needless to say, he has the support of all business men.

Ald. Jos. Ward, Montreal.

Born in the little village of Richelieu, Que. in 1854, Mr. Ward received his early education at Chambly, later taking a course at the Montreal Business College. In 1870. at the age of sixteen, he obtained employment with David Robertson & Company, general produce, grain and seed men, with whom he remained for nine years. Thence he worked for a time with A. T. McBean, and in 1879 started business himself, under the firm name of Joseph Ward & Company, carrying a line of staple, groceries and general produce. He was for some years a partner in the seed firm of Wm. Evans until that company's affairs were wound up owing to the death of Mr. Evans. He is at present interested in four other large commerical enterprises, the Canadian Dairy Supply Company, the De Laval Manufacturing Company, the Canadian Manufacturing Company, and the Canadian Dairy Utensil Company.

Mr. Ward is favorably known in grocery circles and carries a line of groceries upon which reliance can be placed. He has always been interested in the cold storage business, being one of the pioneers in introducing modern methods into Montreal.

GAY AND FESTIVE TRAVELERS.

London Club's Great Success in Conducting a Social Event.

The elaborate preparations made by the Commercial Travellers' Club of London, for the ball on the 11th inst., gave some indication that the event would be the most successful in the history of the club. Every season this affair is looked upon as one of the greatest events in the city's social life, and this season was no exception. The subscription list was closed more than a week in advance, when an attendance of about 500 was assured. By a specially constructed passage way from the second story of the City Hall to the second story of the Masonic Temple, the two buildings were as one, practically, for the occasion. The decorations of the City Hall gave the suggestion of a big marquee and the same idea was carried out in the decoration of the banqueting hall in the Masonic Temple. Red and black—the club colors—were generously used in the decorating. The officers of the Club are: Hon. C. S. Hyman, Hon.-Pres.; H. E. Buttrey and Donald Ferguson, Hon. Vice-Pres.; C. W. McGuire, President; J. A. Townsend and George Detlor, Vice-Presidents; J. J. Harkness, A. H. Brener, L. C. Johnston, H. W. Lind, A. H. Moran, J. M. Ferguson, T. W. Edwards and F. S. Fisher, members of the Executive Committee. The gentlemen who had in charge the arrangements for the ball were: F. S. Fisher, Honorary Chairman; H. W. Lind, Honorary Secretary; S. F. Glass, convenor, Accommodation and Halls Committee; J. M. Ferguson, convenor, Reception Committee; J. A. Carling, convenor, Refreshment Committee: H. C. McBride, convener, Printing Committee; J. A. Townsend, convener, Finance Committee; A. Tillmann, convenor Decoration Committee, and J. J. Harkness, convener Music Committee. To these be the credit.

WHOLESALE GROCERS' ELECTIONS.

At a recent meeting of the Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Association officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, Alex. Orsali, of Hudon & Orsali; Vice-President, Jos. Ethier, manager for Laporte, Martin & Cie,, Ltd.; Treasurer, A. L. Lockerby, of Lockerby Bros.; Directors, L. O. Demers, of Demers, Fletcher & Co., and S. J. Carter, of S. J. Carter & Co.; Secretary, J. Stanley Cook.

EFFECTIVE WINDOW DISPLAY

What Some Manufacturers Are Doing—A Hint for the Retailer—A Capital Window—A Fine Example of What a Grocery Front Should be.

It is worth the grocer's while to consider what some of the big manufacturers are doing in window dressing. Several of them are arranging an advertising campaign of window dressing. Holbrook's have a man out, an expert window-dresser. They give a week's demonstration in a store and at the same time put the expert to work on the window. Armour & Co. have an expert window dresser out. Another meat extract company has been giving prizes for the best window dressing in their goods. The tea companies are always giving strict attention to that feature. Why do they do it? They find it pays. They find that a well-dressed window will run up, often double, the sales of the article displayed. This is a pointer to the grocer. The value of window dressing as a business getter has not nearly been tried out in this country. The people at the head of the procession though are doing it and find it worth while.

An Ornament to the National Capital.

GOODALL BROS., OTTAWA.

The cut of Goodall Bros.', Ottawa, grocery shown above gives a fair representation of one of the most complete, best finished and equipped establishments, not only in Ottawa, noted as it is for its numerous handsome grocery stores, but also in Canada. Goodall Bros., in building their present store a few doors west of their former stand, laid their plans most carefully and studied all the most up-to-date and time and labor saving methods of the day. Not only was the important question of light studied, but ventilation and room carefully considered. The result is that every description of goods is properly shown, systematically arranged and easily handled. The front is striking, with its two large plate glass windows and wide doorway, and admits of good opportunities for window displays. In the photo above one of the windows is tastefully dressed with Gillett's goods, and the other with Goodwillie's preserved fruits, the arrangement of the Gillett window being particularly striking and effective.

Goodall Bros. in fitting up the store had especially built for them a large refrigerator about 12 feet square and 10 feet high, the most perfect of its kind. This refrigerator has proved to Goodall Bros. that the ventilation is so perfect that the finest butter and other susceptible food products will remain free from taint and absolutely sweet and fresh. It is a model in its way and its installation shows that Goodall Bros. are close students of their customers' wants and interests. At the rear of the store proper is the packing and store room, also well lighted and arranged. The shipping and receiving is all done from the rear, where a large yard permits of a dozen wagons being easily handled. The entrance to the yard is through an archway at the right side of the store proper.

The equipment and furnishings of the store proper are in quartered oak, and the shelving so arranged that the various kinds of goods are displayed by classes, extracts, jams, jellies and preserved fruits, pickles, sauces and condiments, cereals and breakfast foods, etc. The most modern scales, cheese-cutting and weighing machines and cash registers, etc. The lighting is by electricity and at night the store is a bright and inviting looking place.

Goodall Bros. are practical grocers of long years' experience, closely attentive to business and watchful to their customers' interests. No detail is missed which, in their opinion, will be appreciated by their trade, and it is due to this careful study of their business that success has attended them and they have to-day one of the most satisfactory grocery businesses in Ottawa.

SCRIPTURAL WINDOW.

"How to Build a Noah's Ark," is the title of a recipe for window dressing given by F. B. Mallory in The Grocery World. Here it is:

Apply to some taxidermist, and see if by paying him a trifling amount he will not be willing to loan you a stuffed dove for use in this window exhibit. In case you cannot secure one, then try and construct one out of white tissue paper, (the crinkled paper), and two white wings, which you can probably purchase at some millinery establishment, where you can also secure a spray of leaves that will answer for an olive branch to place in the dove's mouth. The dove should be suspended in the air with outstretched wings as if flying toward the ark, for which use an invisible wire hung from the ceiling at one side of the window. The dove should be carrying an olive branch in its month and should have the appearance of bringing it to the ark. The ark is easy to construct out of cereal boxes by piling the boxes up the size you want to build the ark and leaving out a box every now and then when you come to the top layer for windows or air spaces. If you would have the ark technically correct, surround this with a projecting base of boxes laid flat around the ark.

Surround the ark with bottles of olive oil laid flat on the flooring of the window as close together as possible. The bottles should all be laid on their sides, with the label side turned under, with the exception of the border row next to the window, where every bottle should be turned label side up, so that people will catch onto the comparison between the "dove bringing the olive branch back to the ark," and the sea of olive oil bottles upon which the ark is represented as floating. The top of the ark should have a slightly peaked roof, which should project a trifle over the sides. This roof can be made from large sheets of pasteboard. If desired, a rainbow may be constructed out of different-colored tissue paper tinted with water colors.

WINDOWS THEY CAN'T RESIST.

A writer, discussing why Americans spend so much abroad, says:

"There is another reason, too, why Americans spend so much in Paris. How many times have we heard a fair traveller from across the seas exclaim: 'I didn't mean to buy a thing in Paris, but the shop windows were so tempting I could not resist!'

"In Paris there is nothing haphazard about the disposition of goods in the etalage of the humblest store. Haberdashers like Charvet pay an immense salary to the window decorator, who produces veritable works of art in his harmonious combinations of scarfs, handkerchiefs and hosiery. The large plate glass reflects each day a new series, varying in hue from the boldness of the modern impressionist to the soft, aesthetic tints of the Renaissance painters. Even such dull and practical supplies as dog biscuits and garden seeds are made to produce their effect in the windows of the shops where they are sold.

ENFORCING ONE IDEA.

A pyramid of oranges, topped by an open barrel of grapes, made an effective window display for the holiday season at one of John A. Diprose's two Dundas Street stores, London. Mr. Diprose frequently uses the "one idea" display with excellent teste, and his windows are always attractive.

THE REASON WHY.

The reason why one window becomes covered with frost, and another does not says the question-and-answer man in the Mail and Empire, is on account of the amount of moisture in the room. If the windows are washed with a solution of water and ammonia they will not become crusted with ice.

UNION JACK SOLD.

Bishop Bros., Niagara-on-the-Lake, have just received their registration papers from Ottawa for "The Union Jack Brand" of canned goods, covering the manufacture, packing, and sale of canned fruits, vegetables, jams, jellies, preserves, and catsup. The design is a Union Jack surrounded by a wreath of autumn maple leaves, and makes a very pretty design. They put up their first pack last year, and had such encouragement

Harry Ranahan's—One of London's Attractive Stores.

The impression that the goods handled by Harry Ranahan are of the highest quality is effectively created and sustained by his newspaper advertising, his window displays and his store interior. His is one of the handsomest stores in London. There is a decided freshness, novelty and "style" about the specialties he carries, and strikingly good taste shown in their arrangement. He features several lines of imported table delicacies, but lately has given special prominence to Crescen brand goods. Mr. Ranahan is a genial, energetic, young man, and has accomplished much during the few years he has been in business.

SEED SELECTION.

Many merchants are interested in agriculture. Upon application to the Seed Commissioner, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, they can secure the third annual report of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association. Part III. contains addresses of experts in the following subjects:—"Wheat Growing in the Canadian West," "The Relations Between Soil Conditions and Crop Improvement," "Quality in Wheat," "Soft Wheat Problems," "The Action of Certain Smut Preventives on the Vitality of Wheat," "Some Effects in Varieties of Cereal Crops Arising from Different Conditions of Growth," "The Improvement of the Potato," "Some Results in Horticulture From the Selection of Seeds," "Methods of Storing Seed Corn," "How Best to Encourage the Dissemination of High-class seeds."

A traveler told The Grocer that C. M. McCallum, Brampton, had one of the best dressed windows this Christmas, he had seen anywhere. The window was dressed by Mr. McCallum's head clerk, A. Pearen.

Arthur Laframboise, Montreal, was in Sherbrooke last week.

PROSPERITY AT FLOOD TIDE

A year ago it was thought that the zenith of prosperity had been reached, but it has not taken twelve months to prove that this latter view was incorrect, says Bradstreets of Dec. 29, in a review of Canadian trade conditions. This year, with a steady growth in population and an increasing trade and commerce in all directions at home and abroad, a still greater share of prosperity has fallen to the lot of all classes of this country's inhabitants.

The farmers of Canada have had a splendid year, the country's mines have produced metals and coal as never before, and the output of products of the forest and of the sea compares favorably with that of the previous years. The production of wheat and other grains has been the heaviest in the history of the country. The wheat crop will show an increase of about 10 per cent., for the larger part of which western Canada is responsible. Last year's western wheat crop was in the neighborhood of 85,000,000 bushels, while this year it will run something over 90,000,000 bushels.

One of the most satisfactory features of Canadian trade is that of foreign business. Owing to the fact that government reports are not issued until four or five months after the date reported on, it is impossible to obtain figures covering the latter part of the year, but the report for the fiscal year, which extended half way into 1906, gives a very good indication as to how trade moved, particularly as it is well known that trade in the latter part of this year showed no signs of falling off. The total for the fiscal year was by far the heaviest in the country's history, amounting to $546,929,038, being an increase of $80,616,612 over that of the previous year. It was in export trade that the increase was greatest. The value of the year's exports showed an increase of $44,184,741, the greatest in the history of the country, while the imports increased by $31,646,686. Agricultural exports increased by almost 50 per cent. and those of manufactures by about 20 per cent. To Great Britain, Canada exported 53.96 per cent. of her total exports, against 50.61 last year, and to the United States, 35.68 per cent., against 37.51.

The Golden West.

Canada's present prosperity is largely due to the rapid growth of the western country, the enrichment of western farmers by the high prices for a greater volume of product, and the rapid filling of the country by immigration. Its population has been increased during the past year by well over 100,000 immigrants from Great Britain, the United States and the continent of Europe. The major portion of these have taken up land in the west, and others in the new portions of eastern Canada, but it is in the west that this immigration has most affected the country's advance. The British and American immigration has set a very high average of quality for that of the whole year. The western cattle trade had an exceedingly good year; the cattle were well finished, and shipments were nearly 50 per cent. greater than those of last year. Prices, too, were fairly good. The grain movement was slow owing to the inability of the railroads to properly handle it. At country points, however, it was marketed early, and this had a very good effect upon collections throughout the country, which averaged better this year than they have done for some time. The growth of the manufacturing interests of the west is year by year becoming more pronounced. Winnipeg, among the newer cities, is fast becoming a manufacturing centre, having made considerable progress in this regard during the past year; it is also showing steady growth as a jobbing centre.

Pacific Coast Revival.

The revival in the lumbering and mining industries along the Pacific coast made the year the most remarkable in the history of that part of the country. The lumber mills, particularly, have been unable to keep up with demands even at the high prices ruling, and similar conditions prevail at the mines. The shortage in labor on the coast has been a serious problem. Its cost has advanced greatly, and inferior Asiatic labor has had to be resorted to. The growing of fruit is rapidly becoming an important industry, and a good European trade is hoped for in this connection. The shipping trade has shown a good growth as a result of rapidly increasing trade with the Orient. The crops of Alberta naturally find their outlet on the Pacific Ocean, and flour and grain markets are rapidly being opened in Japan and parts of Africa. Wholesale and retail trade has been good throughout the year and money has been plentiful.

Conditions in Ontario.

Generally speaking, conditions in Ontario and the other older parts of the country have been but little different from those prevailing farther west. Crops generally were good. Fall wheat and most other grains, with the exception of spring wheat, showed an increased total yield. Prices have been good ever since the harvest, and the grain has come forward fairly well. But it was in other lines that farmers were most successful. The dairy season has been an extraordinary one in more than one respect. While the make of cheese was not so heavy as in previous seasons, the high prices prevailing eclipsed anything in the record of the industry. The result was a heavy make of cheese and a light make of butter, in which also prices were high. While cattle prices were not generally good, those for hogs were exceedingly high, and not nearly enough were obtainable. The packing industry suffered on this account. General wholesale trade has had one of the most successful years. The turnover in most lines has been the heaviest on record. The great activity in railroad and general building in all parts of the country has resulted in a scarcity of manufactured steel and iron. Manufacturers have suffered severely in the shortage of labor, and serious delays in making deliveries have occurred.

Canadian banks have had a good year, as shown by annual statements now being published. The one failure, that of the Ontario Bank, was the result of bad management and not of general conditions.

Railway Development.

The scarcity of labor has had some effect upon the work of railway extension. The new Grand Trunk Pacific line is being pushed with all possible speed, and all available men have been working on different parts of it throughout the season. The Canadian Northern, which will be Canada's third transcontinental line, is rapidly being pushed through the west. The same company has completed its line from Toronto north to Sudbury. The Ontario government railway running up into New Ontario has also advanced further during the year. It is rapidly making, tributary to Toronto and other Ontario business centres, a vast area of lands fabulously rich in products of mines and forests. It is along this line the silver mines of Cobalt lie. Where a year ago there was along this line only an occasional lumber or prospecting camp, there are towns and settlements, the existence of which signifies much to older Canada. What the opening of this new country will mean may be gathered from the fact that shipments of ore already run to about $1,000,000 a month. This railroad is also opening up a vast agricultural country well fitted for settlement.

During the past year a good number of settlers have gone into the country, but here is a land extending up to James Bay which will need filling long after western Canada has ceased to be the Mecca of immigrants. It is reasonable to expect its development will do for the industries of eastern and central Canada just what the western expansion is now doing for the country as a whole.

FREIGHT RATES TOO HIGH.

The stove manufacturers of Canada are not satisfied with the new classification made respecting stoves in the recently revised freight rates submitted by the Canadian Freight Agents' Association. The matter will be again discussed by the Freight Association, which is committed to much lower tariffs than formerly.

Don't worry over trifles. If you must worry, pick out something worth while, then get busy.

GRAIN TRADE OF THE ORIENT

Vancouver Wants a Big Government Elevator—Japan Imports Six Million Dollars Worth of Flour—Review of the Pacific Province Markets.

(Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer)

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 5, 1907.

Fully as much as Alberta wheat-growers look to the establishment of a grain traffic west to the Pacific coast, are Vancouver business men looking to the coming west of the vast and increasing wheat product of the western portion of the prairie provinces. From time to time efforts have been made, and are still being made, to induce shipments of wheat on a large scale from the Province of Alberta. There has been the beginning made, in the erection of one elevator in Vancouver, that of the Hall Elevator Co., and this same firm intends erecting a mill here. The opinions of visitors who have looked with impartial eye on conditions as they exist, both in Alberta and on this coast, coincide that the western portion of Canada's great wheat fields must find an outlet to the seaboard here. Two recent visitors, John R. Boyle, of Edmonton, chairman of the Dominion Grain Commission, and Geo. E. Goldie, a prominent manufacturer of Ayr, Ont., also a member of the Grain Commission, have both, since making personal observations, expressed themselves very strongly in respect to the future movement of grain. Mr. Boyle thinks that a large terminal storage elevator must be built at Vancouver, on the scale of the big elevators at Fort William, Port Arthur, and Montreal. This, it is suggested, will be recommended to the Dominion and Alberta Governments, with the proviso that the C.P.R. make the grain rate from Alberta via Vancouver the same as via Montreal. Mr. Boyle thinks that China and Japan are very evidently going into the milling business, which will compel shipments of wheat direct. The importance of Vancouver's all-the-year-round port is also commented on by the commissioners, as well as the preparedness of the coast cities to handle ocean-going traffic.

Yesterday, to bring the matter up-to-date, the Board of Trade of Vancouver city held a conference with R. G. Macpherson, M.P., prior to his return to Ottawa, and among other questions discussed, that of the grain export trade took leading place. President R. P. McLennan pointed out the recent visit of the grain commissioners, and their opinions as to the benefit and necessity of a terminal elevator for development of export of wheat to the Orient. They had been given to understand that the C.P.R. was willing to consider the matter of freight rates if an elevator was built. The demand was for such an elevator as the Dominion Government had built at Montreal.

Mr. Hall, of the Hall Elevator Co., thought an elevator of at least a quarter of a million bushels capacity was needed, the cost being anywhere from $125,000 to $150,000. R. Martin pointed out that the trouble lumber mills now had to secure empty cars was largely, so the railway people alleged, because empties had to be hauled west for the lumber. If the grain were brought west that trouble would be relieved. Mr. Macpherson expressed his willingness to go carefully into the question and if it were thought best to have a Government institution in preference to elevators built under open competitive trade, he would certainly support the proposal.

S. Tamura, a pioneer Japanese merchant of Vancouver, who has been very active in building up an export flour trade from Canada to Japan, recently said that he hoped Canada would eventually take all or a great portion of the big flour trade of his country. At present Japan imports six million dollars' worth of flour annually from the United States, and this increases yearly. He considers himself the pioneer in the shipping of Canadian flour to Japan. In spite of the fact that Canadian flour is dearer, owing to its superiority and strength, and despite the fact that the Japanese bakers are accustomed to the soft wheat flour from the States, trade with Canada is growing.

The C.P.R. has just arranged for two large shipments of wheat from Alberta to the Orient. One consignment of 500 tons has been ordered by Hong Kong merchants through the Hall Elevator Co., of Vancouver. This will be Alberta winter wheat and will mainly come from the Claresholm district south of Calgary, a district which not so long ago was thought only fit for cattle ranging, and which is now a large wheat producer. The other shipment will be two sample cars for Kobe, Japan. One will be Alberta red winter wheat and the other Alberta white winter wheat. This was secured by the Calgary Milling Co.

The jobbing trade reports business, for after-season times, very good indeed. The principal feature of the market is the decline in the price of sugar, new quotations now being on a basis ¾c. lower, beginning at $5.30 for granulated to $4.35 for dark yellow. The movement in Japan rice has not been nearly so active since the removal of the duty as anticipated, seeing that the provincial fruit pests inspector, under a generously interpreted fruit inspection act, seized and condemned to be exported a large consignment of rice, alleging the existence of weevil. The trade in Jap rice has been very large for some years, Vancouver and Victoria importers controlling practically all that is used in Canada, and employing a large number of hands, also operating two or three rice-cleaning mills here and at Victoria. The action has been much resented, and trade much hampered by the condemnation. At present Japan rice is quoted here at $78 per ton.

In canned goods prices are high and very much inclined to go up further. Tomatoes quote now at $1.50 for 3's and $1.15 for 2's; corn $1.15; beans $1.10; peas $1.05 and $1.10.

California dried fruits are very high in price though no increases have been made recently.

In cured meats the prices are unchanged at 17 to 20c. for bacon, 17½ to 19¾c. for hams, 14½c. for long, clear, dry salt. Lard is high, quoting at 13½c. and 14c.

The Jap orange season is over. The last consignment of about 5,000 boxes reached Victoria by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha line on the last day of the old year. The quantity imported has been very much less this year than for some seasons, and the importations have closed earlier than usual. Price is now 60 and 65c.

California importations are of course entirely navels. They are choice, some extra fine Rose brand from Redlands, Cal., being among the last cars brought in. They quote at $3.75. The lemon trade has been very active all winter, fully equalling summer trade. Price is now $5.50. In both lemons and oranges the new crop seems to run to larger sizes than last year's.

In apples a car of Coldstreams, including Spies, Baldwins and Russets, was received rather unexpectedly. Washington importations are chiefly Missouri pippin, Spitzenberg and New York Winesap. The Coldstreams are selling at $1.50 and the Washington from $1.50 to $2.00.

Malaga grapes are in the market at $7.50 per barrel. Cape Cod cranberries at $13.50 per barrel. Bananas still arrive, a car being received to-day. The price is 5½c. per lb.

Italian chestnuts, directly imported, are selling at 20c. per lb. to the trade. Pines, last received by S. S. Aoran, from Honolulu, are all cleaned up at $4.50 per doz.

New California vegetables are arriving freely. Cabbage is 2½ to 3 cents per lb.; cauliflower, $1.50 per doz.; brussels sprouts, 12 cents per lb. New peas and beans are arriving, the average price being 20 cents per lb. Radishes are also coming in from California, bringing 50 cents per dozen bunches. Celery is partly local stock yet, some imported from California. Price is 75 cents to $1.25 per dozen. Some California ripe tomatoes have been on the market at $3.50 per 20-pound box. Lettuce, Victoria and Burnaby grown, is $1.50 and $1.75 per crate. Okanagan onions are the chief supply of that article at 2½ cents.

Potatoes have been very plentiful all season, though the supply of Ashcrofts is not so large as other varieties. Locals are now worth $12 to $14 per ton. Agassiz potatoes are $18, and Ashcrofts, $24 per ton.

Butter is firm in price, and Alberta creamery stock is 2 cents higher, being held firm at 29 and 30 cents. Local creamery brings 35 cents; local fresh dairy, 30 to 35 cents. Fresh eggs are cheaper, being down to 40 and 45 cents per dozen. The market price of turkeys and geese went down for New Year, as considerable stocks are held over in cold storage. Turkeys brought 19 cents and geese 17 cents, average. Dressed chickens, fresh, were 20 cents per pound at last New Westminster market. Other fowl brought $7 and $8 per dozen, while chickens brought $5 to $7. Few ducks offered, at $10 and $12 per dozen.

Cable Address { Adscript, London. / Adscript, Canada.

GIVE CANADIAN PEAS A SHOW.

The view is held in the canning industry that the canned goods inspection measure Hon. Mr. Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, is going to lay before Parliament proposes to prohibit the use of coloring matter in peas while raising no question in regard to the importation of chemically colored peas from France. The Government Blue Books do not show the volume of the importations of French peas; but it is considerable. Those peas not only come into competition with the highest class of the canning product in Canada, but they hinder the growth of Canada's export trade in this commodity. Mr. Fisher would do well to straighten out this seemingly undesirable feature of a very useful measure.

A LENTEN THOUGHT.

Lent begins next month. There are many grocers who might, but don't push Lenten specialties. This is the time to start thinking about it so as to be ready when the time comes. By a careful selection of goods and the judicious use of window dressing and local advertising a good many grocers might turn a quiet spell to profitable account.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION

By

B. E. Walker, President Canadian Bank of Commerce.

While we are enjoying an extraordinary prosperity, there are signs about us of a strain which must bring trouble if they are disregarded. We are a borrowing country, and we cannot be reminded of this too often. As we fix capital in new structures, public or private, railways, buildings, etc., some one must find the capital in excess of what we can ourselves provide out of the saleable products of our labor. The number of countries willing to buy our securities has been steadily increasing, but we must not be blind, as we sometimes seem to be, to the fact that our power to build depends largely on whether these countries have surplus capital to invest. By means of the cable the trading nations of the world have been brought very near together, and while nations of the world have been averted, and the adjustment of capital to the world's needs has been greatly improved, still for the same reason world-wide trouble in the money markets sometimes arises with a suddenness which is alarming to those at least who are not watching for the signs. We are passing through such a period just now, happily without a general breakdown, but unless we mend our ways we are not likely to escape a similar or still worse condition next autumn which may wreck our fair prosperity. Europe is bearing the enormous cost of two great wars, both in the loss of capital actually destroyed and also in the loss to individuals from the decline in the values of the national securities of the countries interested in the wars. And since these wars, losses on an unexampled scale have occurred by earthquakes and fire. The volume of trade and the unusual amount of building in many countries have at the same time vastly increased the amount of capital required. This has been accompanied by a steady rise in prices throughout the world, and by a most pronounced and widespread advance in the scale of personal expenditure. It is true that it has also been accompanied by the greatest production of gold and of other commodities, but the effect of the various influences has naturally been to put upon the money markets a strain which has only just failed to cause a general breakdown of credit. To make the outlook still more serious, the United States, and other less important countries, including Canada, contemplate expenditures on a very large scale for railway and other building. This, then, is a time for every prudent man to survey carefully his financial position. If he has debts he should consider how he will pay them if he should have to face world-wide stringency in money. Has he assets which the world needs for daily use, or assets which will sell only when the sun is shining? If he is happily in easy conditions as to debt, he will, if he is wise, consider every circumstance arising in his business which tends towards debt instead of towards liquidation. As for those who are plunging in real estate at inflated prices and in mining stocks, nothing, we presume, but the inevitable collapse which follows these seasons of mania will do any good.

SHORTAGE OF CARS.

Grain dealers in Montreal are suffering more than others on account of the present blockade on the railways. Many have had cars of grain held by the railway companies for over a month. Meetings have been held by those interested, and the matter has been pretty well threshed out. It was not until Monday, however, that anything official was done. Then a meeting of the Corn Exchange was called and a plan of action was decided upon. What the grain men want is reciprocal demurrage. The railway companies charge them demurrage on cars which they delay in unloading; the grain dealers believe that they should be allowed demurrage when cars which have arrived in Montreal are held, often entailing financial loss to the dealers. E. A. Schmidt moved a resolution that the whole matter be placed before the Railway Commission and this was seconded by Mr. C. R. Taylor and eventually carried, a vote being taken.

AMERICAN EGGS ON THE TARIFF WALL.

American eggs are now threatening the Toronto market. Quotations are yet about two cents too high to make importation safe. The duty is three cents a dozen. The American duty is five cents, so that it is very rarely, if ever, that the Canadian hen can return the compliment.

Forty-seven New Ontario municipalities have adopted local option. There should be something doing in the tea business.

Castile soap continues to advance, according to reports, being now 40 per cent. higher than at lowest point.

Montreal, January 10, 1907.

It is still a little early to know just what kind of business is being done after the holiday season, but from reports which have come to hand, it would seem that travelers now on the road are securing good orders for general grocery lines. Stocks of retailers appear to have been pretty well depleted during the holidays, and they are now renewing them. Sugar has been lowered ten cents all along the line since last report. Canned goods have been advanced by the canners. Although prices are quoted in many lines, at an advance, it is impossible to obtain goods, no matter what figures are paid. Strawberries and tomatoes serve as instances. Neither of these lines are obtainable, the market being absolutely bare. Several lots of teas have been exported to London recently, something unusual. Evaporated apples continue to climb upward in price. Beans are higher and very firm. Quiet rules in dried fruits. Coffee is rather firmer, while peels have been advanced.

Collections are reported as being quite satisfactory.

CANNED GOODS. — The canners have advanced the prices on all lines of canned goods, and the jobbing trade were notified to this effect during the week. Many of the new prices, which are quoted hereunder, are purely nominal, as it is impossible to obtain supplies at any figure. The situation in tomatoes is very firm.

Corn is in good supply. Stocks of peas are none too heavy, and anybody holding a supply has good value for the money temporarily tied up.

TEAS.—Black teas and Ceylon greens are again higher in price. Good inquiry is reported for all kinds of Ceylon and Indian blacks and greens. More inquiry is reported for Japans also. Ceylon Pekoes and Orange Pekoes have been in demand in London lately, at very high prices, and quite a lot of Pekoes have been shipped from Montreal to London in the past two weeks. This is a very unusual occurrence. The London market is 4½ to 5d higher than the Canadian, and, sellers are consequently attracted to it.

COFFEE. — Some selling is being done by jobbers, now that the holidays are over, and stocks are depleted. A stiffer feeling is noticeable in the market. The big New York financial houses have endorsed the action of the Brazilian Government, and the Valorization scheme. This is said to be the cause of the firmness.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.—Trade on the whole is quiet, although there is some movement in certain lines. In currants the market is bare. The New York market has been advanced 1-4c. for bulk, and 3-8c. for packages, There is no change in the raisin situation. Spot stocks are very small. Prices are unchanged. Several cars of raisins, which have been delayed for several weeks, are expected daily. Prunes are without change. Tarragona almonds are up 1c. The market for shelled walnuts, according to advices from primary markets, has been advanced 25 francs, equal to 4c. above the lowest point. Grenoble walnuts are without change. It is said that 25 per cent. of the crop this season is no good. Marbots, usually rated second to Grenobles, are selling at prices one cent higher at present. Shelled almonds are featureless.

EVAPORATED APPLES.—Evaporated apples are now quoted as high as ten cents by some firms. This illustrates the very strong feeling in the market. Higher prices are likely to rule in the near future. Many jobbers are quoting 9 1-2c., but these are likely to advance to 10c. at any time.

PEELS.—Peels are very firm and scarce, at slightly higher prices.

RICE AND TOPIOCA.—During the past month or two, there has been a somewhat easier feeling in tapioca, especially for forward shipment. This has been mainly caused by short sellers in the London and New York markets, who have been endeavoring to get the market down. That they have not succeeded in keeping it down, is evidenced by the fact that latest cables from Singapore report a recovery in prices, and eastern sellers are now asking within a fraction of the highest point touched, for January-March shipment. From present indications, the prices now quoted are likely to hold good for some time to come.

LAST MINUTE PROVISION MARKETS.

Montreal, Thursday, Jan. 10, 1907.

BUTTER—Market firm. Good local demand.

CHEESE—Good feeling in market. Trade brisk. Stocks rapidly decreasing.

EGGS—Prices high. No change in situation.

PROVISIONS Featureless market. Abattoir dressed hogs quoted $9.25 to $9.50 per 100 lbs.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Business better than expected.
Sugar down 10 cents.
Nearly all canned goods advanced.
Evaporated apples higher.
Furs scarce and higher.
All markets firm.

Toronto January 10, 1907.

Business in the city is phenomenally good for the season of the year. In the country it is quiet, but not as quiet as it might be. Collections are only moderate. The demand for goods has spread over all lines. Sugar is down ten cents, and the demand is very moderate. Canned goods are advanced by the canners to help the wholesalers' expenses in carrying the stocks, and evaporated apples are still higher, and the market appears very firm. Beans, while unchanged as to price here, are held with more confidence that a little while ago.

CANNED GOODS.—The entire list of quotations has been revised in accordance with a new schedule issued by the canners. The change is an advance, in most cases, of 2 1-2c., but in a few instances, more. The canners are out of over 60 of the lines here quoted, and the advance is made, it is said, to compensate dealers for the expense of carrying their goods over until Spring. Unusually good demand is reported for all lines of canned goods.

SUGAR.—Prices of refined declined 10 cents on Tuesday. This followed a fractional decline in the European market for raws on Monday. There were buyers for January account at the close at 8s. 8d. f.o.b. Hamburg, which is equal to a shade under $3.81 duty paid New York for centrifugals, basis 96 degrees. The New York market is very dull. Rapid progress is being made in harvesting the Cuba crop, 122 centrals being at work, against 20 last year, and weather fine.

THE LATE WM. BINKLEY SMITH

A Traveler Whom Customers and Opponents Loved and Admired—A Man of Unvarying Kindliness—Large Attendance at the Funeral.

Few men whose lives, approaching the psalmist's span, have been subjected to the turmoil, anxiety and competitive selfishness of business have left behind them a memory more fragrant with kindliness and helpfulness and the joys of friendship than did William B. Smith, the veteran grocery traveller who stepped behind the scenes of life's stage suddenly last week. A man of steadfast integrity, of tried business capacity, a very successful salesman, his predominating characteristic was his kindly good nature. His heart was large; his mind was free from any taint of jealousy. He was optimistic and his optimism was of that persistent variety based on a faith in humanity and an unassuming self-confidence. It was thus he impressed those with whom he came in contact. One who had worked with him many years said, "I never saw him exhibit annoyance, even at times when provocation was ample." Another said to the writer, "I worked with him for eight years and, analysing his character, I was struck by his unvarying kindliness of disposition. I never heard him say a harsh word of anyone."

Another characteristic of Wm. B. Smith was that in his business relations he formed very close friendships. Many of his customers, writing to Davidson & Hay, mourn in his departure the loss of a true friend. They had looked for his kindly counsel in matters quite foreign to his line of business. Here is indicated his strength as a salesman. He enjoyed in a marked degree the confidence of his customers. It is noteworthy that he always sought to sell the best goods. He was a firm believer that the best goods, irrespective of prices, were the cheapest, and his sympathies and energies were always enlisted on the side of quality.

The Late W. B. Smith

A traveller of another large house said of him: "His death will leave a gap among the boys on the road that will be decidedly hard to fill. W. B. always looked upon the sunny side of life and always wore a smile, even in adversity. The boys will miss his cheery countenance.

The funeral took place from his late residence, 135 Avenue Road last Friday. Rev. Mr. Armstrong conducted the service. There was a large attendance of city business men and not a few from outside. The pallbearers were deceased's two sons, Elmer H. and Herbert E., and his four brothers, Dr. Jno. W. Smith, Dundas; P. S. Insp. J. H. Smith, Hamilton; D. E. Smith B.A., Chicago; and Geo. W. Smith, Dundas. Merchants from outside the city: Charles Faulkner, Streetsville; H. J. Brown, Berlin; W. H. Scroggie, Guelph. A few of the city men present were J. W. Cowan, Geo. Stanway, Wallace Anderson, Chas. E. Kyle, E. Fielding, Jas. Owen, J. Adams, J. L. Watt, J. H. Hargreave, Col. Jno. I. Davidson, J. Pafford, W. Logan, W. H. Seyler.

COOL-CURED CHEESE.

Letter From English Dealer to Prove Its Superiority.

J. W. Rudd, the Dominion Dairy Commissioner has received the following letter from Wall & Company, Manchester, one of the largest English dealers, showing the superior value of cool-cured cheese: "On going through a line of white and colored cheese on December 18, September made, all western goods, we wanted a few hundred boxes for a very particular buyer. We got him fixed up, but he was not altogether satisfied with the quality, and kept repeating that they were not up to our usual standard. On going to the colored lots we picked 400 or 500 boxes without turning down a factory, and our buyer expressed the pleasure that it was to have cheese of this kind offered. Every lot was as near perfection as you can get cheese.

"On going into the matter to try and find the difference we at once saw that the colored had been cured in a Government cool-curing room at Brockville, while the white had been cured in the ordinary way.

"If any of your farmers had been in our warehouse to-day they would have had an object lesson in the value and importance of having their cheese all done in the same way. In our minds, it makes a very much bigger difference than people imagine, and if this way was adopted generally Canadian cheese would hold a very much higher place in the opinion of the trade than it does to-day."

AN ART CALENDAR.

Armour & Company are again issuing their American girl calendar. Not the same as a year ago, but a new galaxy of American beauty types, drawn by foremost American illustrators. The calendar consists of six large sheets, ribbon bound, each bearing a delicately drawn feminine head, and two months of time. So far as the Grocer knows, no other such calendar is issued for advertising. Any one can get one of them by sending to Armour & Company, Toronto, the lead top from a jar of Armour's fluid beef, or twenty-five cents.

D. J. Rattray, vice-president and general manager of D. Rattray & Sons, Limited, has left for a business trip to Europe. He will visit the firm's connections in England, Scotland and Spain, France and continental countries.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

As predicted in The Grocer last week, there is a distinctly better feeling in the cheese market. The difference between the two weeks is quite noticeable. While it cannot be said that the market is brisk, with all that implies, yet it is a fact that there is much more interest taken in the cheese situation than there has been since before the holidays. Prices quoted this week are fully half a cent above the week previous, which substantiates what has been said regarding future prices.

Cable inquiries have been frequent and several houses have been doing business with English firms at the higher prices. The demand from the Old Country, such as it is, is for cheese at a lower price than that now ruling—buyers do not seem very anxious to meet the figures of Canadian houses; but they must now pay what is asked to obtain the goods. The situation in Canada is such that holders can afford to wait for higher prices than are obtainable at the present time. At any rate this is what they are doing. No lots are allowed to pass from their hands at prices which do not suit them. Sales made recently were of September and October makes, and although the prices obtained must have been satisfactory to the houses making the sales, there are many firms which would not let their holdings go at the figure obtained by the sellers. This would tend to show the confidence of cheese men in the future of the market. The "tail-ends" which have been selling at rather low prices, and the poorer grades of cheese generally, are now practically off the market. No stocks of such a nature are known to be held.

Last week an attempt was made by the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association to revive the custom of taking stock, monthly, of the holdings of different houses in Montreal. It was found, however, that it would be impossible to obtain a complete statement, and rather than turn in figures giving only part of the stocks, it was deemed advisable to let the matter drop. By many it is thought that it would be better for all concerned, if the custom were resumed at the beginning of the season. It is likely that, if the matter is taken up in earnest again, it will be when the season opens, and not before. It is generally thought that stocks of cheese in Montreal at present are between 150,000 and 175,000 boxes, being nearer the former figure.

In butter there has not been much change in the situation since last report was made. As has been the case for some time, trade is confined to local business. Not much interest is shown in the market by buyers. Some lots have been sold at fairly good prices, but on the whole activity is limited and will be until after the middle of the month at the earliest. Notwithstanding the present quiet, it is probable that prices will be well maintained. Stocks held locally are light, and receipts are not by any means heavy; other things being equal, it is not likely that there will be any lower prices than those at present quoted. On the other hand indications point to higher figures.

Receipts of cheese last week were very light, only 256 boxes arriving. Of butter, 1,857 packages were received. Total receipts of cheese from May 1, 1906, to the end of last week, were 1,347,720 boxes, and of butter, 600,541 packages.

PROVISION SITUATION.

The live hog market is disturbed and higher this week. The packers are paying $6.40 f.o.b., country points, which is $6.65 fed and watered, Toronto, and $6.90 off cars at the factory. The advance is scarcely justified by the market, and various reasons are alleged for it. The fact is, there were practically no deliveries of hogs during the holidays, and the large packers had to have them to keep things going. The farmer is the gainer, not, however, to a great extent, for deliveries have been light. Christmas week it was the season, last week it was the elections and the weather. This week it's the weather. One result is that too many over-held and fat hogs are coming to market, and on these the farmer loses 25c a cwt.

The domestic market is very quiet, demand being less even than usual at this season. The packer to-day is not selling one cwt. of product in Canada to five he will sell in the summer. The farmers' meat rings have largely displaced pork products in the country, and in the towns the trade seems to be pretty well stocked. The market is said to be barer in Quebec than elsewhere, and eastern packers have been invading Ontario for hogs.

In the Old Country the market is somewhat improved, temporarily at least. This week shows an advance of 2s. Even at that, prices are 2s. to 3s. below present cost. This has been about the state of the polls for the last six months. Only two or three times for a week at a stretch in that period has the market in Great Britain shown the Canadian packer a profit on his output. This is borne by the establishment of allied industries. This time last year, the packer was making money on bacon, and despite steadily rising prices of hogs, continued to make money over a period of 12 weeks. While the packer expects seasons when his export bacon makes him a loss, he has hope that the present situation in the Old Country will shortly materially improve.

The Chicago provision market is looking for a decline. Reviewing last week, the Journal of Commerce says: "There has been quite an active speculation in hog products, led by packers who bid up prices and bought some stuff which has been variously credited to long and short account, until the later half of the week, when several sharp reactions occurred on selling at the advance, believed to be by the packers in anticipation of larger receipts of hogs the coming week, of which estimates were quite largely increased, while the packing of the past week was not much behind last year. Receipts, outside of Chicago, have generally shown an increase, while there they fell short of daily estimates, as if made to bull the market, which the packers were doing in products. Many look upon this as the culmination of high prices and light stocks, all of which except lard showed a marked increase in Chicago in December, while the world's stock of lard showed an increase also, as packers' consignments of lard from Chicago transferred the stock of lard from that point to export markets in transit. Cash trade, however, remains at a standstill, except for immediate wants of the trade, which has little if any confidence in the maintenance of present prices.

BUTTER.—The market continues continues rather weak at practically unchanged prices. A lot of the butter coming in is feedy, and some of it goes slowly, but good stua is selling well. EGGS.—The prolonged January thaw has made the egg market feel a little unwell. With good winter weather to discourage the hen from too early activity, the market will hold firm, and perhaps advance for the commission men all aver that stocks of eggs are not excessive. The market, however, is threatened with American eggs. Should there be much soft weather in the near future, there will be something doing in eggs. Some new laid eggs have been coming, but the drop of the thermometer will probably check the movement.

POULTRY—The market, owing to the soft weather, has been somewhat weaker, except in ducks. The demand for ducks is occasioned by the Chinamen, who always buy them alive, preferring their own method of killing. They bleed the fowls well. Markets Still Very Quiet, But Enquiries Indicate a Revival—Grain Prices Thought to be at the Bottom.

Grain business is just beginning to recover from the holiday slackness. Quotations are very much the same. There is a feeling that prices have been scraping on the bottom, and that has occasioned considerable enquiry. Flour is very quiet at old prices. In the United States last week there was a quite notable increased activity in cash wheat and corn, but it followed depression in both, caused by short selling, by the big elevator concerns, to shake out the long interests, which has become tired of the protracted decline in stuff bought because it was cheap during the autumn. This depression had been carried to a low point on the crop that attracted foreign interest, in wheat as an investment, based upon and demand: and, during the week, between 150 and 200 boatloads have been taken from this and other ports, for both the Continent and United Kingdom.

MONTREAL.

GRAIN.—Grain is dull this week. the shortage of cars is felt by the grain merchants perhaps more than by any other class. Many have cars of grain which have been in Montreal for a month or more, but which they have not been able to get at. One grain dealer had to wait fifty-six days before securing a couple of cars for which he was waiting.

MARITIME DAIRY ENTERPRISE.

Big Company Extending Operations to Nova Scotia and Newfoundland.

(By our Special Correspondent.)

Advices from St. John's, Nfld., state that Sussex, N.B., is now supplying Newfoundland with choice creamery butter, which is preferred to the butter formerly shipped from Montreal and New York. The New Brunswick product is spoken of in the highest terms both as regards texture and flavor. This probably accounts for the small shipments of butter that have been made from this city to Newfoundland and the Maritime Provinces of late. Sussex has for years been noted for its dairy farms which, since the construction of the I.C. R. has been supplying St. John with milk. When the farmers woke to the possibilities of dairying, Sussex and the surrounding country became the natural headquarters of the movement. While the manufacture of cheese had for years been growing to extensive and profitable proportions, it was not until 1898 and 1899 that butter-making began to be a factor in the farm life of the province. In 1898 the total value of creamery butter made in New Brunswick was but $18,557.00. In 1903 it had increased to $183,000.00. The Maritime Dairy Company, of Sussex, is probably the largest Dairy Company in Eastern Canada. This company was organized in the Fall of 1904, under provincial charter, which since has changed for a Dominion charter. They operated the first year 14 butter and cheese factories with an output of over $200,000.00. In 1905 the turnover increased to $375,000, and 1906 found this company operating twenty-eight creameries and cheese factories in the Maritime Provinces, with a turnover of over $600,000. This company's factories are situated largely in New Brunswick, but we understand it is their intention to extend their operations in Nova Scotia as well, several situations for central creameries being now under consideration. This company stands in the peculiar position of controlling both the source of supply and its markets as well. This control of supply is possible only by reason of its policy of owning and operating a large number of the cheese factories and creameries from which the supply of cheese and butter is obtained. The company has branch supply depots at St. John, N.B.; Halifax, Sydney and St. John's, Newfoundland.

MONTREAL RETAILERS.

The greater part of the evening set for the monthly meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association was taken up with a discussion of the gas question. Ald. J. B. A. Martin, formerly of Laporte, Martin & Cie., was present at the meeting, and he was requested by President Daniel to give his views on the lighting problem.

Ald. Martin reviewed the history of gas in Montreal, and outlined the proposed course of action of the city council. Secretary Beaudry replied to Ald. Martin and in concluding asked the grocers present if they were in favor of the arrangements proposed to be made with the Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co. Those present were unanimous in their declaration that they were strongly opposed to the plan mapped out for the future.

The question of reimbursing the members of the association who went to Quebec last year came up again, and it was decided not to consider the question.

Wall Paper

SPRING WALL PAPER INDICATIONS.

WHEN the month of January passes into history, the present wall-paper season, which ends about that time, will, in all probability, prove to have been a most successful one ; the average weight of paper consumed exceeding that of last year.

During the period of calm which precedes the ending of the season, manufacturers are kept busy by anticipating the demands of, and choosing proper designs for, the Spring season. When that time arrives the manufacturers of outside countries will find it no easy task to compete with our own manufacturers, who have gathered in a very good assortment of designs from the most important places where they are created. At the present time, silk effects are actively in demand. Next season some elaborate designs in landscape effects are promised, which are expected to surpass those shown last Spring. Some doubt is, however, entertained, as to the success of this line of goods, as it has not proven very successful during the past few years.

The most pleasing results during the past year were, perhaps, obtained from high-class floral designs.

In the matter of provincial taste in wall paper it may be noted that Quebec shows a marked liking for red tints and full designs, while the Western provinces greatly prefer soft shades and small, neat floral designs.

CANADA'S CHEESE INDUSTRY

Last Year Made a New Record Every Way—Price, Production and Quality All Made New Records.

In the year just closed few industries have made so remarkable an advance as that of the cheese and butter makers, says the Globe. Although the make of cheese was not equal to that of some previous seasons, the high prices which prevailed eclipsed anything in the records of the history, and resulted in much larger returns to the farmer than last season.

In fact, the high prices which our cheese demanded during the past twelve months caused a falling off in the make of butter, and, while the exports of cheese were in excess of those of 1905, there was a marked decrease in the exports of butter, the season in this respect being in striking contrast to last season, when the large exports and notably high prices for butter resulted in unprecedented returns to the producers.

The Gazette of Montreal, in its annual review of the trade, maintains that the falling off in the exports of butter has offset to a considerable extent the increased returns from cheese, so that, despite the remarkably high prices prevailing for the latter throughout the season, the aggregate return from the export movement in dairy produce this season were not greatly in excess of those of last season, and were less than those of the season of 1903, when the make was much larger, although prices were not as high as this season.

In fact, while the season has resulted satisfactorily owing to the high prices prevailing for cheese, The Gazette's carefully kept records do not bear out the impression rather widely entertained that the past season was a banner one so far as the returns of the dairy farmers were concerned. The estimate is made by The Gazette, that, allowing for the cheese still to go forward, our exports will represent a total value of $29,000,000, this being the return to the Canadian dairy farmer from the season's exports. These figures represent only the export movement in dairy produce from Montreal, and do not, of course, include the home market, which in the last few years has become a very important factor. This is also true to a greater extent of the manufacture of butter.

"That there has been a material increase in the production of butter during the last five years," says Mr. J. A. Ruddick, the Dominion Dairy Commissioner, in a recent report, "is evident from the fact that, while the home consumption of butter must have increased at the rate of many million pounds annually, there is a growing surplus for export. The same also applies to cheese, because cheese is not so universally eaten as butter is."

The total exports of Canadian cheese from the ports of Montreal, Quebec and Portland for the season of 1906 were 2,258,357 boxes, of the value of $21,228,554, as against total exports last season of 2,148,663 boxes of a value of $18,263,635, or an increase for the past season of 109,694 boxes, and an increase in value of $2,964,919. With the whole range of prices as a basis, The Gazette finds the average price of cheese for the season at 11⅜c. per pound, or $9.40 per box. This is compared with an average price of 10½c. per pound, or $8.50 per box in 1905; an average price of only 8¼c. per pound, or $6.80 per box in 1904, and an average price of 11¼c. or $9 per box, in 1903.

Various causes tended to account for the exceptionally high prices. Stocks on the other side, at the beginning of the season, were extremely light, and consequently a keen demand developed, which was conducive to high prices from the start; in fact, prices from the very beginning kept ahead of values in Great Britain. The amalgamation of leading English and Canadian firms, too, resulted in strong competition. Among other causes, the Chicago tinned meat scare played a considerable part. The sensational revelations had the effect of diverting consumption in Great Britain to a considerable extent from canned meat to cheese. There was, no doubt, an abnormally high ratio of consumption in Great Britain, the increase being estimated at about 25,000 boxes per week for the whole of Great Britain, and this along with the short make of English cheese, was a strong factor in maintaining prices at a high level.

In the London market the ruling average price during the seven months of production was 59s. 6d., as against 54s. in 1905, so that cheese in London this year has sold on the average at 5s. 6d. per cwt. higher than it did last year. Canadian cheese not only maintains its supremacy in the British market, but continue to grow in prestige from year to year. Out of total importation of 130,062 tons of cheese into the United Kingdom for the year ending June 30, 1906, there were 95,884 tons received from Canada, which was over eight times the quantity received from the next largest exporting country—Holland. The quality of the cheese has not only maintained its former reputation, but on the whole has improved. A well-known British authority—Weddell & Co.—are quoted as saying: "The Canadian cheese-maker, like the Danish butter-maker, has become so proficient in his art that it is seldom necessary to unfavorably criticize his work. Whenever an inferior quality is produced in Canada it is now generally found to be due to want of suitable surroundings or to the uneconomical methods and customs of some factory, together with defective transit, rather than to the lack of art in cheese-making.

CANADIAN BUTTER ABROAD.

An interesting article in the London Times points out that one-fourth of the total imports of butter comes from Australia, New Zealand and Canada. About the same amount of butter is received from Canada as from New Zealand. The Canadian butter, this expert states, "is sweet and waxy, and as good as any butter that comes to Great Britain. If means were used to enhance the average value, as has been done in New Zealand, Canadian butter would command high prices, but at present, the amount of choicest Canadian is so small that it scarcely receives the place it deserves on the market.

J. A. Ruddick, Dominion Dairy Commissioner, in his recent annual report, says:

"Butter is received in Great Britain from many sources, and it all competes more or less with that which is supplied by Canada. This direct competition is, however, a very satisfactory feature of the situation, because it means that it is possible for Canadian butter to replace that which comes from other countries to an almost indefinite extent. The increase in the consumption of butter in Great Britain, which has been so marked of late years, shows no sign of falling off, and this appears to be true in every country where butter is included in the daily diet of the people. The general improvement in the quality of butter, and the improved facilities for preserving it in a fresh condition, have induced many customers to butter their bread more freely than in the days when there was less strictly fine butter to be had, and when much of it became rancid before it was consumed.

The German Demand.

"The increasing demand for food supplies in Germany will have considerable influence on the situation in the future. At one time Germany exported to England, among other products, considerable butter, but the remarkable industrial growth of the country during recent years has increased the purchasing power of the people to such an extent that the home supplies are unequal to the demand. The result is that Germany is now importing a quantity of butter, and the amount is annually increasing.

"While Germany does not offer as good a market for our butter as Great Britain does, and it would be a mistake for us to split up the comparatively small quantity which we now send, and thus weaken our position in that respect, it will help the demand for our butter to have Germany absorb a portion of the supply which would otherwise come to Great Britain and thus compete with ours.

"Applying the law of supply and demand and having consideration of the vastly improved, and improving facilities for handling butter on both sides of the Atlantic, as well as on the ocean itself, one can only conclude that there is a great future before the Canadian butter trade, if the farmers who supply the milk, and the creamery owners and the buttermakers do their part in turning out an article of a uniformly high grade of quality. The writer believes it is possible for Canada to compete successfully with Denmark or any other country as far as quality is concerned."

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

After-Holiday Trade in Fruit Exceptionally Firm—Growers pleased with the Season—Fish Men Look Forward to Lenten Trade.

The California fruit situation is now highly satisfactory to the shippers. Good weather prevails, and the car shortage has at last been relieved. Although declines are noted in certain lines, the local orange market is holding remarkably firm, considering the season. The growers having apparently realized the folly of rushing fruit to market directly after the holidays, closed their packing houses for two weeks, giving the markets time to clean up, and the benefits of this move are now being felt. The demand at the coast is active, and about the same prices as at Christmas are being realized. Crops in Florida are reported to have suffered severely in the recent freeze, some reports estimating the losses at one quarter of the total growth, and it is expected that the demand for California fruit will increase as a result. Shipments of Messina marmalade oranges are due to arrive during the latter part of January.

Vegetable dealers report New Year's business as comparatively poor, but are not inclined to kick, as the Christmas trade was exceptionally brisk. The present outlook is satisfactory, a good demand prevailing, considering the season.

Fish dealers are already looking forward to the increased trade produced by Lent.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Trade in fruits is fairly good, considering the fact that the holidays are scarcely over. Prices are well maintained in most instances, although a few changes are noticeable. Grape fruit is cheaper, as are also Jamaica oranges. Almeria grapes have been advanced.

FISH.—Fish merchants are preparing for the Lenten season which begins the middle of next month. Present trade is very satisfactory on the whole. In fresh and frozen fish supplies of cod and haddock are good. Just at present there is a shortage of frozen herring, but new arrivals are expected shortly. Tomcods are lower this week. All lines of salt fish are firm in price. Yarmouth bloaters are in good supply, arrivals being large; haddies are scarce. There is a good demand reported for bulk oysters which are arriving freely.

The S.S. Mariner, has reached Bay of Islands, Newfoundland, for a cargo of frozen herring for the Atlantic Fish Companies. This will be her second trip for the season. The Lunenburg vessel, Glenwood, finished loading herring last week. She had on board, in all, 1,250 barrels of salt herring. This is the fifth vessel loaded this season by the Atlantic Fish Companies, making in all, a shipment of about 6,000 barrels.

The Tobacco to Handle

T. & B. still forges ahead because it is a good honest pipe tobacco, with a world of solace in every ounce.

T. & B. is not only popular with the smoker—it's also the grocer's favorite because the margin of profit is just right.

T. & B. widens your chances of trade, builds up good lasting friendships by the score, and incidentally helps you provide a decent competency not only for yourself but also for your posterity. Good Tobacco! Why—if angels smoked they'd smoke none other.

T. & B. is certainly the tobacco you want to handle

The Geo. E. Tuckett & Son Co., Limited

CIGARETTES IN CUBA.

It is rather a surprising fact that in Cuba the cigarette enjoys a greater measure of popularity than does the cigar. One would think that in a place like Havana, the home of the finest cigars made, one would find the people smoking nothing other than the long weed which they make from their excellent tobacco. This is not the case, however, for preference is given to the cigarette by the masses.

The better class of people, while they smoke more cigars than the poorer inhabitants, view with greater favor the popular cigarette, so that all things considered, the cigarette enjoys greater popularity than the cigar in the Island of Cuba. Foreigners residing on the island at first prefer the cigar, which, after all, is natural on their part, since they have heard so much about the weed and smoked it so often before landing in the country where the cigar has its origin.

Little children, boys, girls, men and women, all smoke the cigarette, year in and year out. It is not considered improper for a woman to smoke in Cuba, and the natives practice it quite freely and without being considered as doing anything but what is natural. Under these circumstances it is not surprising to find by official returns that Cuba requires more cigarettes annually than does Canada, although the population of the former is approximately one million and a half against Canada's six millions. Climatic conditions on the island are such that smoking is not as likely to injure those who indulge in it as it is to harm those smokers who reside in Canada and other such countries.

There are numerous cigarette factories scattered over the island and these are kept busy all the time. The same quality tobacco is used in making the cigarettes as that used for cigars. The only difference is that the large leaves are kept for the cigars while the very small leaves, and the trimmings and waste tobacco (finer grades) are utilized in the manufacture of cigarettes.

The Cuban cigarette differs considerably from the Canadian. It seems to have more body in it, and there are other differences which are noticeable to one accustomed to handling all kinds of tobaccos. The wrappers which are most extensively used are three in number—the pectoral, rice paper and waxed paper wrappers. Owing to the cheapness of tobacco and labor the Cuban cigarette manufacturers are about to put their goods on the market at a very low price. The popular price in Cuba is cuatro centavos, or four cents, for a package containing sixteen cigarettes—four cigarettes for one cent. There are other qualities which sell for two, three and five cents, but the four cent package is regarded as the standard. There would probably be packages to sell as high as ten cents, packages which might contain a greater number of cigarettes, but sixteen is considered the most convenient number from every standpoint. For instance, the Cuban excise duty amounts to one cent on every fifty cigarettes, which, by making sixteen cigarettes constitute one package, makes this one cent for three packages. If seventeen cigarettes were packed, the duty would come to a fraction over one cent on every three packages, and would entail a great deal of useless figuring, which is avoided by the use of the recognized sixteen-cigarette package.

Owing to the scarcity of tobacco this year, it is to be wondered at where manufacturers are going to make money by selling cigarettes to retail at four cents a package—and the manufacturers themselves are wondering.

SMOKE AND SUCCEED.

Modern Demand of Business Sociability Helped by Use of Tobacco.

"Business is business," is no longer true. In these days the rendering should be, "Business is sociability."

A correspondent from the north of England who recently replied to an advertisement requiring "A gentleman of good social position for an important post in a large industrial firm," writes as follows :—

Smoke, Golf, Motor.

I had an interview with the advertisers, who, after a brief discussion of my business qualifications and experience, asked me whether I smoked, played golf, and could drive a motor-car.

I was informed that unless I could answer these questions in the affirmative, my application could not be entertained. "For," said my prospective employers to me, "in these days it is essential to cultivate the social side.

"You get on better with your clients, customers and rivals if you are on good terms with them ; in fact you are distrusted if you do not smoke with them.

Inner Freemasonry.

"You are an outsider, excluded from that inner freemasonry of mankind, and the more personal relationship you can cultivate, the more consideration in business matters you are likely to receive.

"If you golf, or drive a car, you have an enormous pull over others who do not do these things, and who are, in consequence, termed 'rank outsiders.'

"You must have more than business credentials in these days if you want attention. But mind you, we don't want anyone who drinks. That is fatal. Even a moderate drinker, in these days, goes down in the esteem of his business acquaintances and competitors, if he takes an occasional glass during the day.

"It is bad form, as well as a bad sign, indicative of laxity and carelessness and a procrastinating nature. We must have a man who does not drink, but he must cultivate sociability as a business factor."

TIN CIGAR BOXES.

Down in Cincinnati cigar manufacturers are contemplating the use of tin boxes in putting up their cigars. The price of wooden boxes has been advancing steadily for some time, and if they go much higher manufacturers will be losing their profits. Buying the tin boxes in large quantities, it is possible to secure them at a very reasonable price.

TOBACCO LEAVES.

Chas. Landau, representing the Independent Havana Cigar Manufacturers in Montreal, has left for an extended trip to Havana and other Cuban points.

Ed. Youngheart, of Ed. Youngheart & Co., Montreal, has returned from an extended trip to the West.

Farmers in Essex County, Ontario, expect to make about $100 an acre on their tobacco crop for 1906. The price is unusually low, but the crop is a heavy one.

The third International Tobacco Trade Exhibition will be held in London, England, in April, 1907. It is promoted by the proprietor of two well-known tobacco journals. Representatives from the British colonies at the exhibition are desired. It is stated that it is a unique opportunity for colonial manufacturers and tobacco growers to impress the British trade and public with the resources of the empire.

TRADE NOTES.

Gorman & McFarlane, general storekeepers, Douglas, Ont., have dissolved partnership, and the business will be continued by W. H. McFarlane.

D. Granda, of F. & J. Granda, Montreal, has returned from a trip to New York.

A. P. Tippet & Co., Montreal, have issued a very neat desk calendar for 1907.

John McInnis's grocery, Londonderry, N.S., was one of the stores that suffered in a fire which caused $30,000 damage on Dec. 13.

Thieves broke into J. W. Johnston's grocery, St. Thomas, on Dec. 5th, and took away with them a dollar in change and some goods.

Twelve actions have been entered by the Revenue Department against grocery storekeepers in Griffintown for selling liquor by the glass.

The grocery and general stores of Chamandy Bros. & Co., Chaplle Bros., and K. George & Co., North Bay, were recently damaged by fire.

Jas. Burgess & Sons, general storekeepers, Grand Falls, N.B., and Puddington & Merritt, grocers, St. John, are applying for charters.

Robert Watson, manufacturing confectioner, has bought the factory on Sorauren Avenue, Toronto, formerly occupied by the Liszt Piano Co.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH AND SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH

More Fatal Accidents

The Daily Papers reported during December 1906, six very serious accidents from explosions of inferior, inflammable stove polishes. Two of these accidents are reported as fatal to the unfortunate users of the dangerous mixtures.

These accidents are by no means rare. Don't take any chances by selling your customers dangerous explosives under the name of Stove Polish.

Push RISING SUN Stove Polish in cakes and SUN PASTE Stove Polish in tins. Both are absolutely safe. Both pay you a good margin of profit.

"Batger's"

Strawberry Jam

If you carry this line of jam on your shelves it sells itself. The appearance of the new style glass jar is good and the Whole Fruit inside invites tasting.

It is made from the finest English garden strawberries and granulated sugar, by a firm that has been in the business for over 150 years.

Once tasted, Batger's Strawberry Jam will be ordered again. If you are not already selling Batger's, why not order a trial case of 4 doz. and see for yourself?

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO GROCERS

Finding that we have been infringing on another firm's rights, by using the name Welcome for our leading brand of soap, we have changed the name and will continue making this brand under a new name which will appear in our next advertisement.

Don't Be Caught

like many canners were this year—with a short supply of cans and a large pack of fruits and vegetables ready for canning.

It is poor policy to put off ordering your cans until the last minute, when chances are that the manufacturers cannot guarantee to supply the goods.

Acme Cans are Good Cans

Four Reasons why INVICTUS FIBRE is the BEST FIBRE PAPER on the Market

1. Invictus Fibre is made from personally selected pulp wood cut on our own limits.
2. This special pulp wood is again rigidly culled on arrival at our mills
3. The pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made is manufactured in our own pulp mill and transferred at once to the paper mill, avoiding all drawbacks of transportation.
4. Invictus Fibre will increase in strength and not grow hard and brittle as does fibre made from sulphite pulp. This is a quality of the peculiar and selected pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made.

A trial order will convince you that we are correct. See that each package bears the words "Invictus Fibre." Every ream contains 480 sheets

If you have Money to Burn

Why! Go burn it. There is 10 times more satisfacti on in burning money than in losing it in driblets, through carelessness of clerks or disputed accounts. Who that has "pass-book" customers has not had accounts disputed and partially repudiated? The best way to avoid all complications and misunderstanding is as follows.

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? Indianapolis, Indiana.

Hamilton, January 3rd, 1907

Dear Sir:—One of our wholesale customers called us up on the 'phone the other day, and mentioned that one of his country customers had sent some Poultry for our Aylmer factory in his care, and that the price was to be 10c. per lb. "I had no idea," said he, "that your "people pay such high prices for your Poultry. Some "retailers and consumers seem to have the impression "that all Canned Poultry is made up of all kinds of scrap "meat, and if they were acquainted with the facts that you "pay such high prices for your Poultry, and insist on the very best quality, "it would increase the consumption very much." We assured our esteemed customer that our Canned Poultry was absolutely guaranteed to be exactly what it is represented to be, and that taking into consideration the trouble in cleaning Poultry, waste of bone, etc., our Canned Poultry is very much better and cheaper than Poultry in its fresh state.

Aylmer Poultry is especially recommended for invalids, as owing to being thoroughly sterilized there is no danger of any bacterial trouble of any kind, as with Poultry not canned. Aylmer Chicken Soup is recommended by physicians from coast to coast. Every retail grocer in the country should keep these high-grade products in stock, and should lose no opportunity to place their merits before his customers.

Yours faithfully,

CANADIAN CANNERS,
LIMITED

A few reasons why Ozo Jams should be and are considerably better than any others now being made in Canada :

1. As Montreal is by far the largest buying centre in the country, enormous quantities of all kinds of fruit are sent to be marketed here, and as ripe fruit has to be disposed of within 24 hours of arrival a glut is sure to occur in some fruit every day—it might be peaches to-day, or strawberries to-morrow—some fruit is sure to be over-shipped, which we can buy at a price averaging as low as what it would pay to grow it; and buying fruit at this price naturally we can afford to use more of it.

2. Our Jam plant is the largest in Canada, contains the finest, cleanest and most modern equipment, which enables us not only to turn out an enormous quantity but give far better quality as well.

3. We can buy sugar on the wharf at a great saving over what it would cost if freighted west, and consequently are enabled to put in a much larger proportion in the cheaper qualities.

4. Having the turnover, we are able to purchase our packages at the very lowest price.

5. As we believed that these natural advantages would enable us to take the lead in the Jam business, we sent to England for the most expert Jam cook we could find. As money was no object, we got him and placed him in charge of our Jam Department, where his 28 years of practical experience are enabling him to turn out goods which are a revelation to the trade, and are causing a large increase in sales in this line with the people who are handling them.

6. Notwithstanding our ability to turn out a product equal to any made in the country at a lower price, our aim is to put this saving in the cost of production into bettering the quality of the goods, thus putting purchasers of our goods beyond the reach of competition.

With this information at hand you can readily see why so many of the largest wholesalers have placed their Jam contracts with us, and we think you will also see that it will be to your advantage, and that of your customers, to place your Jam business with us.

We quote Standard Brand Jam

Don't worry!

Have you any customers to whom you sell everything but Coffee? People who are content to buy their sugar and salt from you, but who go to the other grocer, round the corner, for their Coffee? What's the reason? Don't you give attention to the Coffee department of your business? There is no single line you handle that affords the all-round profit to be got from an intelligent handling of Coffee. Perhaps you have never had the right blends.

Your Coffee Problem is Solved and you will have no further need to worry if you use the White Swan blend. It is a blend selected by experts who have spent a lifetime in the business. It is specially prepared for particular people, and its peculiar excellence always satisfies the most fastidious palate. The very tin, too, is high grade. You will soon get a profitable coffee trade if you handle it, and the profits that have been going "round the corner" will once again find their way into your till.

COST OF DOING A RETAIL BUSINESS

An Address by H. C. Beckett before the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association.

Only four or five in a hundred of the people who go into business succeed. The other ninety-five or six either go to the wall or eke out a bare existence.

Ninety per cent. of the retailers don't know the cost of doing business. If this be true, and the view is strongly held by a great many business men, it is time to make a thorough study of the cost of doing business. The old school definition that profit is the difference between the cost and selling price of an article is wrong. The expense of doing business must be subtracted from the profit and the grocery trade affords a great many instances of where that can't be done.

There are two reasons for this lack of knowledge of the cost of doing business. The first is bad or inefficient methods of bookkeeping; the second a failure to include in the cost of doing business all the items of expenditure that go to make it.

An Example.

To illustrate: Suppose a man is doing $12,000 business per year with $3,000 invested, I would figure the cost something like this:

Interest on capital, 3½ per cent.	$105
Rent	200
Salary to proprietor	800
Wages to employes	850
Insurance	50
Taxes	30
Horse keep, repairing rigs, etc.	75
Light and heat	50
Telephone	20
Depreciation in value of fixtures	25
Postage, etc.	25
	$2,230
Now suppose he figured 20 per cent. profit on selling price of goods, $12,000, we have	2,400
Less	2,230
Net Profit	$170

The first item is interest on the capital invested. If a man were working on borrowed capital he would pay interest. If a storekeeper borrowed half his capital, the interest on his own money would be as legitimate an item of expense as the interest on what he had borrowed. This should include also interest on the value of stock not paid for. It should include also interest on all outstanding accounts owing him. If a firm has $1,000, or $25,000 open accounts on their books the interest on that is assuredly a legitimate cost of doing business.

No Doubt About These.

Then there are items that leave no room for questioning—rent, taxes, fuel, light, wages, advertising, insurance. If a storekeeper owns his premises he should include rent, or what is the same thing, interest on the value of the property.

If a storekeeper employed a manager, the business would have to pay the manager's salary. If a man manages his own business he should have a salary just the same.

Some people might say "his profits are his salary." Not at all. That is putting him in a worse position than his hired manager. If a business failed, the worst that could befall a hired manager would be the loss of a position. He risks nothing. The storekeeper risks all he puts into the business.

Fixtures Wear Out.

Depreciation of stock and plant is not a myth. Scales wear out, horses get old. The loss of goods in weighing is a case of "many a mickle makes a muckle." It is a very natural tendency in salesmen to appear liberal and the effort to fight against it is not likely to be so strong if one is dealing with some one else's goods. Some people will rashly assert that what is given away in over-weight won't amount to a hill of beans in a year. Suppose that on an average a man gave over-weight of an ounce every time he sold a pound. Many sales would be more than one pound, many would be less. The best cure for over-weight is to have goods weighed up in advance wherever possible.

No one will dispute bad debts as a legitimate item in the cost of doing business account, but some may not have the courage to make a clean breast of it and admit the loss.

Repairs are continually necessary. Every person utilizing any kind of plant should know the percentage of depreciation and provide for it. If a horse lasts five years, in one year a fifth of his value is used up, has gone into the cost of doing business.

Cost of Deilvery.

The cost of delivery would surprise some merchants if they would give it careful consideration. Here is how a retail grocer in an Ontario city doing a business of $125,000 a year figures it out. He keeps eight delivery wagons:

Interest on investment, 6 per cent.:
Barn	$1,300
Rigs	1,000
Horses	1,200
	$3,500	$ 210
Wages of drivers		4,000
Keep of horses		1,162
Taxes on stable		33
Repairs		400
Total		$5,805

This is just a little over 5 per cent. on the turn-over and shows that it costs this grocer $725 a year to keep one delivery wagon. It will cost the man who keeps only one more.

A man in business is not in business for fun, or for a mere living. He should accumulate a certain sum each year to the good that would keep him from want by the time he is 55 or 60 at any rate.

Curse of Business.

The temptation to cut prices is the curse of business, and it is ignorance that is at the root of all cutting, the lack of knowledge of the cost of doing business. It is the principal reason for failures. The result of cutting is that a man's family suffers. He is not able to give them a proper education. He is not able to take the recreation due himself.

There is no man works harder than the retail grocer; he seldom takes a holiday; he is grinding all the time. Quite a number of the retail grocers and general merchants throughout the country never could make ends meet if it was not for a family combination. They get in their sons and daughters and don't half pay them.

The proportion of those who succeed in the grocery business is very, very small, probably not over five per cent. It doesn't necessarily follow that all the rest fail; they simply exist.

I place the cost of doing a retail business at 22 per cent. of the total turn-over, and suggest the following as legitimate charges: Interest on investment; interest on open accounts, salary, wages, rent, fuel, light, taxes, advertising, depreciation of stock, loss in overweight, bad debts, delivery, repairs and renewals, paper and twine, incidentals, telephone, etc.

WHOLESALER WHOM HIS STAFF DELIGHTED TO HONOR

Hugh Blain Presented by the Travelers and Staff of Eby, Blain With a Handsome China Cabinet and Ornaments.

The traveling and office staffs of the Eby, Blain Co. took Hugh Blain of that firm by surprise on Saturday at noon and presented him with a very handsome china cabinet and a pair of ornaments of exquisite design and workmanship as an expression of their hearty appreciation and good wishes on the occasion of his recent marriage. Of course the travelers were into it and they were all there but R. W. Ritchie, the senior member of the staff, who was only kept away by illness. The other travelers present were:—J. W. Borsbery, J. A. Milne, F. J. Watson, H. C. Baker, T. A. Wilson, L. E. Morden, D. Casey, A. L. McKechnie, J. N. Notter, T. S. Grant, J. A. Taylor, J. A. Montgomery and J. W. Maybee, manager of the coffee department.

Mr. Blain, when he saw them moving in the fine furniture and the staffs assembling, "tumbled" but he had no time for effective action before he found himself arrayed against the multitude that crowded the private office and swarmed out into the sample room and general offices and J. W. Borsbery, the senior member of the traveling staff present, reading the following address:—

"To Mr. Hugh Blain:

"It is with more than an ordinary amount of pleasure that the travelers and staff of The Eby, Blain Company, Limited, have an opportunity presented to them to show in a little more tangible form than usual, the very high esteem with which they have always regarded you, and they feel that the occasion of your recent marriage is a favorable and opportune time for this.

"I feel specially happy at being chosen to present this address, and with it this china cabinet and contents, not only because of the unanimous good wishes of every employe which I know go with it, but also because I am proud to be one of the oldest employes of the largest exclusively wholesale grocery house in Canada, and to have been associated with you for so many years.

"In reviewing the past 26 years, during which I have been continuously connected with The Eby, Blain Company, I can only look back with the most pleasant recollections, and I feel sure that the harmony and good feeling that has always existed among all the employes during all that time, has been due in a great measure to the courteous and honorable treatment that everyone has received at your hands. We all respect your high sense of public duty, and your character as a man, and sincerely hope that you will be spared for many years to enjoy a well-earned prosperity.

"We wish you to convey to Mrs. Blain our hearty congratulations, and although we have not the pleasure of her acquaintance, we know she must be a very fine woman, or she would not be the wife of our esteemed employer and respected citizen. We trust that your journey through life may be over a pleasant road, and crowned with success and happiness.

"Signed in behalf of the travelers and office staff.

J. W. Borsbery."

Jan. 12th, 1907.

It was not in any too steady a voice that Mr. Blain responded. He said: —

"Mr. Borsbery, Ladies and Gentlemen:

HUGH BLAIN.

"This has not taken me by surprise altogether, because I came in five minutes ago and saw the beautiful cabinet being covered over, although Capt. Maybee did not see me, and I have been trying ever since to read a letter in the other office. I can say, without any reflection on my conscience at all, that this is indeed a surprise, of which I had not the slightest intimation, I am sure, without intimation of some kind, it is pretty hard for one to know what to say. It is worse than sitting down to dinner with the first intimation of such a presentation and having at most a few minutes to put your thoughts into some sort of shape.

"I must confess that there is no source from which I could so highly value a presentation as the source from which this comes, (because I think every person is entitled to value the good opinion of others, in proportion to the nearness that they are to them), and, outside of my own family, I feel that we are nearer together as employers and employed, as members of an institution of this character, than any other relationship in life, except the domestic relationship, and I am sure that there is no source from which I could receive a remembrance of this kind with the same degree of pleasure as I feel at receiving this from the ladies and gentlemen who are here. I thoroughly appreciate this. I appreciate it the more because I am afraid I have not had the opportunity of being as close to them as I should like to be, associated with them as I am. Unfortunately for me, in many ways I have been mixed up with a great many things outside of our own business, and I have not been able to give that close attention to details to become interested in and understand all those who are in the institution as thoroughly as I would like. It is a grand opportunity for anybody who has the ability and time, to become thoroughly and properly interested in those with whom he is associated, and I would like very much, if my natural ability and opportunities had been such as to be able to say that I was, in a very much greater degree than I feel I am.

"I most heartily thank you for this splendid gift. I am sure it has been entirely unexpected. In fact the event which prompted your kindness was kept so quiet, that I did not expect anything. I have a very handsome article of furniture that corresponds very nicely with this beautiful cabinet in my drawing room, which came from the members of the firm here. This is a very nice companion for it. I assure you. I am extremely pleased, and I know that my wife will be very much pleased indeed. I do not know how I can express the appreciation that I know she will feel. A thing of this kind is possibly valued more highly by ladies than by gentlemen. They understand these finer feelings of domestic concerns in the way that a man has not the opportunity, and cannot possibly understand, and I am sure that their appreciation is in proportion to their realization of the advantages and beauty of such things in their own household. I am quite certain that Mrs. Blain will appreciate, and enjoy, and value this as highly as it is possible for a woman to appreciate and enjoy. I feel that there is an enjoyment to me even beyond that, in the recollection of the kind spirit in which it is given by those who are here, and I regret that I am not more worthy of receiving it. I assure you that I will always appreciate this as long I live, with deepest and fondest recollections, and with the greatest possible gratitude to you, ladies and gentlemen, for your kindness on such an occasion, in which I know my wife will cordially join."

WEIGH OR COUNT, THEN PAY

Incidents Illustrating a Good Practice in the Grocery Trade—They Show, Too, How Organization is a Benefit to the Retail Grocer.

It was urged in an article published in The Canadian Grocer a couple of weeks ago "What to do this month," that grocers should see to it that they are allowed the "tare" on all goods and with that end in view should weigh all goods received.

A representative of The Grocer was in Hamilton last Friday, and, talking with John O. Carpenter, was told a good thing just along that line with the addition that it illustrated the benefit of a grocers' association.

Mr. Carpenter said he undertook one time to weigh sal soda as it was delivered to him and found that he was being charged for the package, about

Fred Dane.

40 pounds, as soda. He made a "kick" and the tare was allowed him thereafter.

Then like a consistent member of the Grocers' Association he brought the matter up in meeting and found that nearly or quite everyone present was paying for the package in the same way.

While in Hamilton The Grocer man was told by another member of the trade in the city with flat-wheeled street cars that one of their troubles was the selling of wholesalers to boarding-house keepers and other consumers. This matter came up at an association meeting, when an offending wholesaler was present. His denial was not as strong as the proof and he promised not to do it again. This is another illustration of the advantage of a strong retail grocers' organization.

In the current number of the Bulletin, issued by the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States, to get back to the question of tare, President John A. Green says over his own signature :

"There have been many inquiries of late and considerable agitation in regard to short weight cheese.

"The ruling of the pure food commission on this point is as follows :

"The person packing the goods is not compelled to stamp the weight of the package, but when they do, it must be correct.'

"January 10, 1907, a grocer purchased two cheeses, and after weighing them, sent for me. The weights marked on the boxes were 29 and 27. The weight of the cheese when weighed was 27½ and 24, a loss of four and a half pounds in 56 at 15 cents per pound.

"Such business methods as these are what the members of the association want rectified. The above difference in weight added one and one-fourth cents per pound to the cost, and of course lessened the profit.

"Let this fact be known of any concern that they are charging for what you do not receive, and they will soon feel the influence of publicity.

"The trouble has been when we have found a shortage we simply let them make it right for the time being, and then do the same thing with the next shipment.

"I would recommend that the local associations begin suit under the federal law wherever a discrepancy of this kind occurs, and if the local association is not strong enough, then the state or national.

"My advice would be : 'Weigh and count everything you buy, and pay for nothing but what you receive.' "

GROCER COMMISSIONER.

Fred Dane, Who Takes a Place Among Rulers of T. & N.O.R.

In the appointment of Fred Dane, Toronto, as a member of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission, in succession to Cecil B. Smith, C.E., another name has been added to the list of grocery men prominent in public life.

Mr. Dane was born in Belfast, Ireland, 45 years ago, and has been connected directly or indirectly with the grocery trade during a business career of 27 years. He was brought up in the brokerage business, in which he engaged, first in Londonderry, later in Belfast, and finally in Toronto, where he has now been established nearly 20 years. During his first years in Canada he was engaged more particularly in pushing the sale of Ceylon and Indian teas, but he now handles practically anything in groceries. Among the firms represented in Toronto by Mr. Dane are the Colombo Commercial Company, of London and Colombo ; P. A. Burlumi, currant shipper ; and Kearley, Tonge & Co., of London, Calcutta and Colombo. Besides being prominent in business circles, Mr. Dane occupies important positions in various societies and fraternal organizations.

The commission to which Mr. Dane has now been appointed meets in Toronto twice a month, so that he does not expect any serious interference will be caused by it with his business interests. Mr. Dane intends, however, to familiarize himself completely with the situation he has to do with, being no believer in the "dummy director" system. He has already been over the line since his appointment, and only returned from a visit to Cobalt and the end of steel on Saturday last.

ers, Toronto, who died in Dresden, Germany, after undergoing an operation for appendicitis, took place from St. Thomas' Church, Hamilton, on Saturday, January 5.

Mr. Broadfield was born in Hamilton, where he lived for many years. The partnership of McMahon & Broadfield was formed in that city, and the firm was in business there for several years prior to removal to Toronto. Mr. Broadfield was widely known, and highly esteemed in business circles both in America and Europe.

A caller upon the grocery jobbing trade this week was Harry T. Graham, representing the Halifax Fish Co., Ltd., Halifax, N.S. Mr. Graham was introduced to the trade by Mr. Wallace Anderson, of Anderson & Powis, Toronto agents.

WITH THE HAMILTON RETAILERS

E. M. Trowern Talks of Legislation and a Bad Debt Bureau—Editor of Canadian Grocer Suggests Organizatio n for Trade Betterment.

At the regular January meeting of the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association Thursday evening of last week in the Board of Trade of the City under the Hill, E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, delivered an address on the legislative activities of his association and outlined the bad-debt collecting system adopted last November. While there was a good meeting, about twenty being present under the chairmanship of President Smye, there was by no means a full attendance. The Hamilton association is a strong and active one and is doing a good work for the grocery trade of that city.

"All retailers have common interests and they have become class conscious," began Mr. Trowern, and proceeded to explain how section 520 of the criminal code prevented the putting into effect of the "contract selling plan." This is an arrangement by which the manufacturer puts a price on his goods and the retailer agrees not to sell for less than that. This means of eliminating price cutting would require the co-operation of the retail, wholesale and manufacturing branches of the trade, and such an arrangement would, Mr. Trowern stated, be contrary to section 520 of the code and he drew attention to the fact that work people had accorded to them specifically under the code the right to combine to fix the price of labor and he argued that grocers and all retailers should have the same privilege.. "Merchants want to get some of the good things," he declared. He insisted upon the need for a change of the code to permit of trade agreements. "Get it changed," he asserted, "then the clouds will roll by."

A gentleman present asked: "If you get the change will it give the wholesalers more power to combine?"

"It wouldn't be reasonable for us to ask the legislature to give us what we would not let everyone else have. I am not in favor of class legislation, but we are all business men," replied Mr. Trowern. He was sure that if the retailers had power to combine the wholesalers could not do otherwise than comply with the retailers' reasonable demands.

Mr. Trowern made no secret of his opinion that the Department of Trade and Commerce was very dead. He wanted that department resurrected and under it a commission appointed consisting of a manufacturer, wholesaler, retailer and solicitor to whom could be submitted all trade agreements for approval. Answering an imaginary protest of the consumer, Mr. Trowern said, "we are not going to hold up our customers. They are the most valuable asset we have."

He denounced the legislation proposed by Mr. Monk to permit of co-operative trading and explained the legislation relative to hawkers, pedlars and transient traders. He stated that the Ontario Division Court Act was to be revised at the coming session of the legislature and he expected it would be provided that small debts could be collected before a magistrate at an expense of 25c for a summons.

Mr. Trowern then explained the bad debt bureau of the Retail Merchants' Association. Books of blank forms are sold by the association at one dollar each. There are four detachable forms on each page. The first is a letter to be sent to the delinquant customer stating that if something is not done towards liquidating the account before a certain date his name will be placed on the association black list. If that is not effective a second form is detached and sent to the secretary of the association. The secretary sends a form letter to the customer giving him a certain time to pay up. If that doesn't answer, the name goes on the blacklist, and is available for all local branches of the association.

W. S. B. Armstrong was called upin by the chariman and said he had been much interested by Mr. Trowern's address, but he thought one of the troubles of this country was too much legislation. Competition among grocers he believed should be along the lines of the quality of the goods and the service, and not in prices. To that end the organization of the retail grocery trade was essential. In Great Britain there was a National Association, said to represent 40,000 grocers. They now were engaged in fostering a scheme of technical education for grocers and grocers' assistants. In the United States there was a powerful national organization of retail grocers, based upon state and local organization. The speaker's observations in regard to the effect of price arrangements among the wholesale trade had led him to the opinion that they engendered distrust. He had not come to make a speech, but to meet the grocers. It was the aim of The Canadian Grocer to keep in as close touch as possible with the trade.

W. H. Sevler, manager of The Grocer, was also present, and was called upon. He entertained the meeting with a racey account of how years ago he graduated from the wholesale grocers' trade in Hamilton, and was translated to New York. His account of his association with the trade in the American metropolis, and how he held his own against Yankee shrewdness, was highly amusing. Having established amicable relations with the trade, Mr. Seyler told his audience The Canadian Grocer's ambition was to serve the grocery trade to the limit of its powers. He urged them to make the needs and ills of the trade known through the paper, and invited thorough discussion in its columns of all subjects of trade interest.

A communication was received from St. Peter's Infirmary, stating that for $35 an organ that would be of great service to the institution could be secured, and asking a contribution. It was at once and unanimously decided to contribute $20 to help buy the organ for what was felt to be a very worthy institution.

TRAVELERS' VICE-PRESIDENT.

Study the Details—Geo. West's Advice to the Retailer.

Geo. West, Toronto, is the newly elected first vice-president of the Commercial Travelers' Association. Mr.

GEO. WEST, TORONTO
Commercial Travelers' Vice-President.

West is senior member of West, Taylor, Bickle & Co., manufacturers of brooms, brushes, woodenware, baskets, etc. In conversation with The Canadian Grocer recently, he said:

"I have had the pleasure of calling on the grocers and hardwaremen of Ontario for some twenty-five years and close observation of the methods of the different men in their lines of business, leads to the conclusion that the man who looks closely after the details (and there are many) is the successful man. This applies equally to office and stock.

"As an instance of this: Mr. M—— went into business in 1870 and sold out in 1890, taking enough out of the business to live easily for the balance of his life, but being a comparatively young man, was not satisfied to lead an idle life and went into manufacturing, which proved a failure and he lost what he had made in his first venture, but nothing daunted he procured a stock of hardware and started again in an entirely new district, applying his old methods of looking strictly after the details; and, keeping everything in stock that would likely be called for, from a needle to an anchor, he soon recovered lost ground. The saying goes that if you cannot get an article at any other place in town, go to Mr. M——, he is sure to have it. This opens a new account for him. The customer reasons that if he has the article that is not called for every day he is sure to have the one that is.

"There is nothing that hurts a business so much as being continually out of some line of goods. There are times when it is unavoidable, but this should be the exception and not the rule."

PURNELL, WEBB & CO.'S DINNER.

Vinegar Brewers and Sauce Manufacturers—A Pleasant Time at Bristol.

Messrs. Purnell, Webb & Co., Ltd., vinegar brewers and sauce and pickle makers, held their annual dinner on Saturday, Dec. 29th, at the Crown and Dove Hotel, Bristol, Eng. Mr. Fleetwood Webb, managing director, presided, and the company included travelers, office staff and workmen.

The chairman stated that during the past year the company had opened a larger number of accounts than in any previous one in its history. There had been an especially large increase in the business of the sauce and pickle departments, and the demand was increasing every day. The staff of travelers and local agents in various parts of Great Britain had been considerably added to, while a special representative sent to Canada had visited all the important centres and appointed agents, and had traveled as far as Vancouver, where the company had for many years done a satisfactory business.

An excellent musical programme was rendered during the evening, and the usual gift of half a crown was given to the men for their wives.

A SUGAR MAKER.

Raymond, Alberta, is said to be the youngest town of its size in Canada. In 1903 the townsite was a bare prairie. Now it contains 500 residences, stores, warehouses and public buildings, and has a population of 2,500 people. It is the headquarters for some of the largest ranching and cattle enterprises in the Canadian West, and of the Knight Beet Sugar Factory, the only one of its kind in Canada west of the Great Lakes. This factory represents an investment of $500,000, and has been in operation for three years. In 1904, this factory sliced 11,900 tons of beets, and manufactured 3,160,000 pounds of sugar.

M. Descelles, representing L. Chaput Fils & Cie, Montreal, was a caller upon the Toronto trade last week. Mr. Descelles was making his calls with special lines represented and controlled by his house.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

CHATHAM.

At a meeting held on Friday evening, the 4th inst., the business men of Blenheim formed an association for purposes of mutual betterment. The meeting was well attended and enthusiastic. The following officers were elected : Geo. Taylor, president ; C. E. von Gunten, first vice-president ; E. G. Thompson, second vice-president ; Theo. Pickering, secretary-treasurer. A committee was struck to nominate the various working committees who will direct the efforts of the association, which looks forward to a useful career.

The grocery and allied trades will be pretty well represented on Chatham's governing bodies for the year 1907. At the municipal elections both Ald. Jas. N. Massey and Ald. Wm. Potter were re-elected to the city council. This will be Ald. Potter's third year of continuous service, in addition to which he was a councillor for one year under the old ward system. During the past year he has been chairman of the civic property committee. Ald. Massey's services during the past year have been deservedly recognized by a substantial vote of confidence on the part of the electorate. Ald. John Edmondson, who made a good run and missed re-election by only a few votes, will be much missed by his old colleagues. His defeat came rather as a surprise to most people, and is largely explained by the fact that he made no canvass whatever.

In the race for the new board of education, Grocer John McCorvie polled 978 votes, standing third in the list of candidates, while E. A. Mounteer came within a few votes of re-election, and that in the face of a remarkably strong list of candidates. Mr. McCorvie's magnificent run was no source of surprise to his many friends. As he was one of the five highest candidates, he is ensured a two-years' term at the board.

H. A. Stonehouse was re-elected Mayor of Wallaceburg by acclamation.

Reeve W. C. Crawford, of Tilbury, was on Monday re-elected in a sharp contest against two competitors.

Strong efforts are being made to revive the local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association, formed some years ago. A meeting has been called for Thursday evening, the 10th, when the election of officers will take place. S. A. Brubacher, organizer of the association, is to be present to explain many new features of the work of the association, among them the new Pedlars' Act and the Dominion system to collect accounts and report bad debts.

The grocery trade was well represented at the organization meeting of the local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association, held here on Thursday, the 10th.

Organizer Brubaker, of Toronto, was present and delivered an address, in the course of which he claimed that the local merchants paid a 35 per cent. business tax, where dealers in other cities paid only 30 per cent. Apparently, when Chatham was incorporated a city, the matter of reducing the assessment from the 35 per cent. required in towns and villages to the city tax of 30 per cent. has been overlooked.

Mayor-elect Stone promised to have the matter at once dealt with.

The question of instituting a delinquent list, for the purpose of protecting the retailers from bad debts, was discussed at length, the suggestion being heartily commended.

The following officers were elected :— Geo. W. Cowan, president ; Wm. Anderson, vice-president ; C. H. Mills, second vice-president ; H. G. Hodges, treasurer. The matter of appointing a permanent secretary was left to the executive.

CALGARY.

The Hudson's Bay Co.'s stores have had an addition made to them, and have undergone extensive alterations internally. They have made a new departure in the West by the opening of a tea and rest room where they serve Tetley's tea and Christie's biscuits every afternoon to their patrons free of charge. This is very much appreciated these cold days, more especially by people from the country.

The early-closing by-law came into force on Jan. 1. With a few exceptions all stores must close at 6 p.m. during the week, and at 10 p.m. on Saturdays. This is a great boon to the assistants, and at the same time does not interfere with the amount of business.

A W. Ward, who gave up the grocery business some time ago, has gone into the real estate business, in partnership with Mr. Paterson.

Calgary's bank clearings for the month of December reached the very high figure of $6,727,198. With a population of less than 20,000, this puts Calgary in the front rank from a business point of view.

The Alberta hotel has changed hands. N. D. Jackson has leased it to a Mr. Tapprel from Vancouver.

LONDON.

Mr. John Garvey, London, wholesale grocer and liquor dealer, recently purchased property on the south side of King Street, between Clarence and Richmond Streets, and will erect a five-story warehouse there. The price paid for the land, half an acre, was $25,000. Mr. Garvey has been in business in London 21 years, having come to this city from Peterboro. His store near the corner of Richmond and Dundas Streets, is now too valuable a site for a wholesale business, he says, property in that vicinity having increased in value four-fold in the 21 years. This is probably high water mark for the increase in the value of business property throughout the city for the same period, but it is significant of the general and steady growth of the Forest City in that time. Mr. Garvey's experience in the grocery business in Peterboro' and London, has extended over 38 years, although he has been a wholesaler for the past eight years only. His sons are associated in business with him now, and the firm is one of the most widely known in Western Ontario.

Business is dull and the quiet of this week is accentuated by comparison with the remarkably large holiday business that the trade generally enjoyed, when practically all the grocers did the biggest holiday business in their experience.

INGERSOLL.

The grocers of Ingersoll report an unprecedented volume of business during the holiday season. They are agreed that their stocks were larger than ever at the opening of the Christmas trade, and that they sold out closer than on any previous year in their histories. The sleighing during the week was an important factor in the Christmas trade, as many of the buyers made long trips on the snow which probably would not have been undertaken with wheeled vehicles.

That these are prosperous times there can be no doubt. All branches of the mercantile business enjoyed an increase of patronage and the merchants as a whole unhesitatingly declare that more and better purchases, than in former years, were the general rule. For Ingersoll grocers, at any rate, the year 1907 opened auspiciously, and they are looking ahead to another period of prosperity.

Thomas Seldon, the well-known apple and poultry exporter, returned on Saturday night from his annual business trip to the Old Country. Mr. Seldon was absent about six weeks, and he reports a splendid trip. He arrived home in time to study the municipal situation and to cast his vote in good time on Monday.

E. E. Dundass, a native of Ingersoll, and a former grocer of many years experience, is here on a visit from the West, whither he went some five years ago. Mr. Dundass has been following the less strenuous life of a rancher, and he speaks in glowing terms of the possibilities of the "Far West."

KINGSTON.

The Xmas trade is now over. The weather and all other conditions were favorable to trade, and merchants were busy and happy, and full of turkey, Xmas cake, and plum pudding. Alas, the reaction after the holiday season: indigestion, liver complaint, etc.—bad weather, snow all gone, no cheery sound of sleigh bells,—nothing but slush, rain and bank messengers, with sight drafts.

Jim, the grocer, had his usual crowd around him on the market, where the grocers generally meet and have a short chat. After "who's going to be Mayor?" and "who's going to be alderman in your ward?" the discussion went on to canned goods. "What are you getting for tomatoes?" "12½ a tin." "Oh, I'm selling for 10c. By the way, I had several cans of tomatoes returned." "So had I." "So had I." "What was the cause?" "They were new goods. They had a sweet flavor,—tasted as if they were made of spoiled vegetables with sugar added. The tin inside was black,—rub your finger on and the black came off on your finger. Looks dangerous to health. Why doesn't the legislator look after the factory instead of sending its blood hounds into groceries and getting innocent retailers fined? What gross ignorance and carelessness on the part of those supposed to mete out justice!"

One of the grocers on the market said you didn't know what you were selling now since the trust was formed. He didn't believe factories were allowed to use their own labels. He said he saw a car loaded up at a western city, and four different factories were represented according to the labels seen, yet the shipment was all from one factory. Perhaps the factory was used as a store house. If it is true that labels are put on indiscriminately the Trust ought to have its head punched.

Ferdinand Sears, at one time owner of the North Star Grocery here, bought out the stock and goodwill of the late Mr. Hawkins, Seeleys Bay. Ferdinand is a thorough grocer and will make things hum at the Bay. He intends to run it on a cash basis. Credit system involves a lot of work, worry, and bad debts.

John Brydge, who has spent the last two or three years in Kingston, has removed with his family back to his old home, Renfrew, and bought out a confectionery and restaurant business. He is doing a big trade, and his son who has been in the Northwest for over a year has come back to help him. They are popular and bound to succeed. Popularity wins every time.

The sad drowning of Ernest Instant, brother and helper of Reg. Instant, grocer, of Emerald, has cast a gloom around, and made hearts heavy that knew him. He was a great favorite with the boat people, always pleasant and obliging, ever willing to lend a hand to unload freight. He will be greatly missed indeed. He and three others ventured out in a cutter to bring a doctor across from Bath to attend a sick woman. The ice gave way and only two were saved.

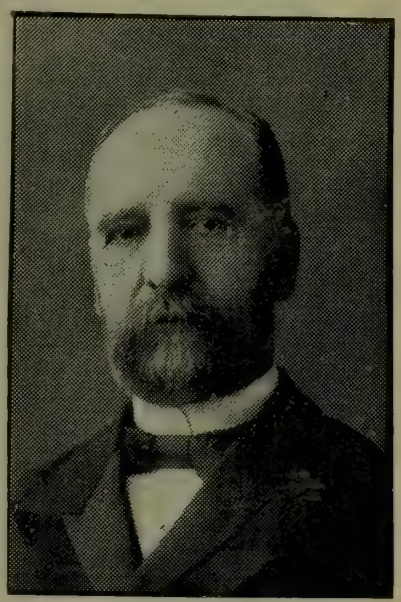
Our years are like the shadows
On sunny hills that lie,
Or grasses in the meadows,
That blossom but to die—
A sleep, a dream, a story,
By strangers quickly told—
An unremaining glory
Of things that soon are old.

Well, the municipal elections are over, and many are glad and more are sad. Dan Couper, the popular grocer, is in again. He is too darned popular to be defeated. Bert Robertson, the commercial traveller made a big run, and got there. He did very little canvassing. It is quite an experience for a knight of the grip. Just think of him praising himself instead of his samples! The knights know how to say good-day, and shake the voter's hand, and kiss the baby, and tell its ma it is the sweetest in the land. The vote of the electors for the reduction of liquor licenses carried by a large majority. Mayor John Mowat again occupies the coveted chair. He is too well-liked to displace. The labor union candidate, Dr. Richardson, was distanced. Evidently partyism is dearer to the hearts of many than unions.

GROCERS IN CIVIC LIFE.

Food Stuff Men Who Are Elected Mayors of Their Towns.

The recent municipal elections in Ontario placed a considerable number of food stuff men in executive charge of municipalities. Amongst the mayors elected were T. B. Shillington, general merchant, Blenheim; S. H. Armstrong, butcher, Bracebridge; W. E. Milner, grain merchant, Brampton; Harrison Wiltse, grocer, Clinton; W. H. Moss, baker, Dundas; F. Slater, wholesale flour and grain merchant, Gravenhurst; R. A. Smith, grocer, Newmarket; M. Snetsinger, apple and coal dealer, Thornbury; Geo. E. Clavet, grocer, Port Arthur.



Ald. T. A. Lytle, Toronto.

T. A. Lytle, of the vinegar firm of T. A. Lytle & Co., was elected an alderman in Toronto.

Grocer S. M. Fleet, Ingersoll, who has had several years' experience in municipal affairs, was a mayoralty candidate last Monday. Mr. Fleet, who is recognized as one of the town's shrewdest business men, follows all matters pertaining to the welfare of the town very closely and in his capacity as alderman has rendered very efficient service. His opponent was Dr. J. B. Coleridge, a native of Ingersoll, by whom he was defeated by a majority of 365.

Another grocer who has won the confidence of the electors is Mr. C. A. O'Neill, who entered the municipal arena last year for the first time. He was returned to the council by a handsome majority.

EFFECTIVE WINDOW DISPLAY

A Holiday Idea That Was Worked Out by a Beeton Grocer—"The Night Before Christmas" in a Grocery Store Window.

Here's an idea in window trimming that is worth a place in any grocer's scrap book of ideas. Ben Miller, of the Red Rose Tea traveling staff told The Grocer about it. He thought it unique and he saw how attractive it was. The window was trimmed by Walter A. Pringle, of Beeton, and was the grocery window of his fine store.

The window was fitted to represent a cosy sitting room on Christmas eve after everybody but Santa Claus had gone to bed. At the back, and the principal feature of the window was a large fire place in yellow and white. Black cloth was used to represent the fire hole and the fire was an ingenious contrivance indeed. A shallow box trimmed with black cloth and covered with wire netting was the foundation. Over the netting was red tissue paper, three-ply. On this was a heap of borax pieces about the size of coals and about this was ranged some coal. A 32 c.p. electric lamp was placed in the box from the rear and when that was lighted the borax was a fine imitation of a blazing coal fire. The only other light in the window was a shaded one at the top, and the shade hid it from the street view.

The rest of the room furnishing consisted of a fine art square of carpet on the floor, a quarter-cut oak library table and bookcase, a leather upholstered easy chair and a child's rocking chair. Upon the table was a Battenburg centre piece, and a large fancy lamp. A doll lay asleep in a doll's cradle and three pairs of slippers, papa's, mamma's, and Toddie's, were ranged by the fireside, and the child's red cashmere hose were hung from the mantle. The mantle was trimmed with a handsome drape and supported three fine vases. Two or three fine pictures adorned the walls and a large red Christmas bell was suspended from the ceiling. The motto, "A Happy Yuletide," tastefully done and nicely framed, hung on the wall.

This window attracted a great deal of attention and amply repaid Mr. Pringle for his trouble and expense in connection with it.

Mr. Pringle has been in business for himself only since March last. He succeeded his father, Geo. G. Pringle, who was in business very successfully in Beeton 22 years. When Mr. Pringle sr. retired he built for his son on the old site one of the finest stores in Simcoe county. It is 105 feet long by 28 feet wide. Mr. Pringle carries a large general stock of fine goods and specializes in fine furs.

Marks, Clavet, Dobie Company's Grocery Department, Port Arthur.

A NORTHERN ONTARIO STORE.

This illustration shows an interior view of the Marks, Clavet, Dobie Co.'s store, Port Arthur. This shows only a portion of the grocery department of one of the largest and finest general stores in Canada. Some people have the idea that Northern Ontario is a backwoods country. This picture ought to undeceive them. Or they should talk with some of the grocery travelers who do business in that country. They assert that there are stores in North Bay, Port Arthur, Fort William and other centres of development which excel any stores in the southeastern peninsula of the province bounded by the great lakes. Mr. Clavet, whose career was recently sketched in The Grocer, besides being a progressive and successful merchant, is mayor of Port Arthur, having been re-elected last week by a large majority, and takes an appreciative interest in everything affecting the public welfare.

Our idea of a hopeless liar is a person who says he never makes any mistakes.

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS.

The Ontario Government is thinking of adding to the cost of public school education by supplying text books free throughout the province. The socialistic idea is spreading pretty fast just at the moment. It may at first blush look reasonable that if education is to be free the necessary books should also be free; but it is largely a question of cost and if the cost indirectly is going to be greater than at present, where's the gain?

The retail booksellers waited on the Minister of Education at Toronto the other day and protested against the taking away of one of their sources of revenue. They put forward the cogent reason that the cost of Government distribution would not be less than the present retail profits on school books. There are many considerations in this question of cost. For instance, what is the life of a school book? In Toronto where the Board of Education provides free text books an extensive repair department is maintained, which greatly prolongs the usefulness of the average book. In rural districts this would be impossible without doubling the cost of transportation by having books sent to a central depot for repair.

Most general merchants are directly interested in this question and should express their views to their representative in the Legislature.

ORGANIZATION OF THE GROCERY TRADE.

The retail grocery trade in Canada should be very much better organized than it is. There should be a national organization based upon provincial and local organizations. How can that be accomplished? It must begin with the retail grocers' associations already established. If the existing associations at Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton or Ottawa would take the matter in hand and issue a call for a convention success would be assured.

The aggregare membership of all the grocers' associations in Canada is probably not much over a thousand and there are more than ten thousand grocers in the Dominion. The few segregated present associations exert a scarcely perceptible influence upon the trade as a whole. United in a coast-to-coast alliance through provincial, based on local, organization, they could end many existing evils, put the trade upon a very much higher plane and in many ways advance the interest of the individual grocer.

The Canadian Grocer would like to have this subject discussed in its columns by grocers in or out of existing organizations.

DELAYED GOVERNMENT PRINTING.

"At a recent sitting of the British House of Commons, in reply to a question, a representative of the Government explained that beginning with 1907 the force engaged in editing consular reports would be largely increased and that every effort would be made to expedite their issue. It was further explained that consular officers had been instructed by the Foreign Office to report at once to the Board of Trade any matters of immediate commercial importance which may come to their knowledge, using the telegraph whenever deemed necessary."

This is a statement from the United States consular reports, and it is true enough. Sometimes the reports in question are eight or ten months behind, long after they can be of any use.

In Canada the reports of trade agents are published pretty punctually. But there are other Government publications that come in blue paper covers that die, are buried, and are resurrected before the public sees them. Take for instance the reports of the Dairymen's Associations. There's no reason why the reporter, who is paid a good fee for the work, should not transcribe his notes within a week or two after the meeting and the report be printed within a reasonable time and be issued to the farmers and the trade while they are fresh and interest in them is alive. The public then would be getting value for the large sums expended in this kind of printing.

PROTEST AGAINST PARCELS POST

The executive committee of the Ontario Retail Hardware Association urge the trade throughout Canada to protest against the proposed legislation extending the parcels post to include a c.o.d. collection feature. They suggest that every retail dealer mail a letter to the Postmaster-General so that it will arrive in Ottawa about Feb. 1.

The accompanying draft form of letter should not be copied entire, but is suggested as a basis upon which to outline an argument against the proposed legislation. All letters should be written on the firm's business paper. If the local member of Parliament has not been written yet he should be asked to oppose the measure by a letter or petition signed by every retail merchant in each town or village.

FOR BETTER FREIGHT HANDLING AT MONTREAL.

Shipping interests in Montreal are taking steps to see what can be done to form a terminal company to handle freight on the wharves. The congestion at the railway terminals in Montreal has come to such a pass that shipping men are preparing now to save themselves the possibility of any loss next season. It is believed that were a company formed to handle all freight there would be no congestion or trouble of any description. The idea at present is to form a company which to all practical intents and purposes would be the Harbor Board. This terminal company would receive the freight arriving in Montreal by the different railways, and charging the railways a sufficient sum to cover operating expenses, would deliver the freight to its destination. Any surplus which might be left at the end of the year would be refunded to the railway companies in amounts varying according to the business they had given the company during the year. This arrangement, it is thought, would be eminently fair to all concerned, and would ensure the wharves being kept reasonably clear of freight at all times.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Fish—Revised.

Montreal, January 17, 1907.

Wholesale houses are satisfied with the manner in which the New Year has begun. Their travelers have not yet been on the road very long, but their returns made indicate good business ahead. Stocks throughout the country appear to have been pretty well diminished during the holiday trade, and retailers are buying freely. The recent advance in canned goods has not yet effected the market materially. Little business is being done in this line. Sugar has not changed since last report. Considerable buying was done immediately after the decline, but present trade is limited. A very firm tea market rules. Stocks are by no means large. Some lines are particularly scarce, as for instance Ceylon greens. Black teas have been advanced. Siftings and fannings are also higher. The statistical situation in currants is quite interesting. From it, it would seem that we are likely to see higher prices all round before the new crop is harvested. Evaporated apples continue interesting. There has been no actual advance this week, but prices are firm. Beans are firmer. An advance in gingers is talked of among spice men.

CANNED GOODS — Higher prices in canned goods have not affected the situation one way or the other to date. Grocers have, in most cases, good stocks of canned goods and do not yet require anything in this line. It is unlikely that when their stocks do require replenishing they will be greatly affected by the recent advance. Wholesale houses will in most instances allow their customers any line in stock at the old prices, except, of course, in cases where they themselves have had to renew at advanced figures. There is considerable interest in gallon apples in some sections of the trade. Quite an export business has been going on during the past while. As a matter of fact, the export trade had grown so much that the shippers were looking around for more supplies. It is understood that they tried to secure stocks held in Nova Scotia, for export purposes, but that they did not succeed. Some local pack tomatoes are offering at prices about the same as those quoted hereunder.

TEAS—The tea market is as firm today, if not firmer, than it was three weeks ago. Stocks are not large and demand is good. There is more or less inquiry for different lines, but otherwise the situation has not changed since last report. Siftings and fannings are higher—one to two cents a pound advance having been recorded within the past week. Ceylon greens are even more scarce than they have been. Early in the week some Japan fannings were turned over at a good profit. Blacks are high, being advanced as much as five cents in some instances.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS — Quiet prevails locally. Dealers are doing very little in the way of sales. Seeded raisins are stiff in New York, but locally there is no change in the situation. Californias are half a cent higher on the coast. Prunes are firm, and an advance would not be a surprise. In currants the statistical situation is very strong. Last year there were 55,000 tons of currants in Greece available for shipment between January and the new crop. This year only 17,000 tons are obtainable. For this reason it is likely that there will be an advance rather than a decline in the market. In 1905, 98,000 tons of currants were shipped from Greece up to December 31, against 83,000 tons during the same period in 1906. Figures compiled in Patras show that not a pound of currants was shipped to Canada during December last. An advance in package currants is considered possible on the New York market. Tarragona almonds are firm. Filberts are up in New York.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Firmer.

Canned Goods—Selling well.

Evaporated Applies—Higher.

Toronto, Jan. 17, 1907.

The grocery trade has opened up strong and good business is reported in nearly all lines. There is a good healthy interest in canned goods. Sugars are firmer, but an immediate advance is not looked for. In dried fruits prices all continue firm. Collections are satisfactory and the wholesale trade is in good spirits. Evaporated apples are firmer and the demand is good. Beans also are slightly stronger in tone, due to a rise of 10 cents at points of production.

CANNED GOODS—The new prices are for the most part merely nominal. Wholesalers are getting them where they can, but to a large extent the old prices prevail. In regard to tomatoes and onions, others are inclined to demand full figures. Golden wax beans also bring top prices, and strawberries bring $2.40 to $2.50. The advance in prices by the canners has stimulated to some extent, and some grocers are reported to be providing for their season's requirements.

SUGAR—The market is quiet, and raws show a firmer tendency than last week. Willett & Gray, reviewing raws for last week say: "No business has been done during the week under review to warrant a change in the quotation of spot or nearby sugars, hence we continue to quote 3.56c. per lb. duty paid New York for spot value as per last sale. There has been business in January and first half of February shipment at a reduction to 2 5-32c. per lb. c. and f. for 96 degree test Cuba centrifugals, equal to 3.52c. duty paid, and of Porto Rico centrifugals for January-February shipment at 3.50c., basis 96 degrees test." At the end of the week Cuban sellers were inclined to a firmer tone in sympathy with European beet and no Cubans were offering below 3.51½, duty paid New York for 96 test centrifugals. Refiners would have gone in at 2½c. cost and freight, basis 96 degrees, or 3.48½ duty paid New York. Saturday and again Monday refiners bought at those figures. Then the market steadied again to a basis of 3.51½ duty paid for 96 test centrifugals, and refiners were uninterested. During the last week or two, there were sold to Canadian refiners some 5,000 tons Demerara centrifugals at equal to 2c. c. and f., New York, basis 96 degrees test. Interest now centres in Cuba and the crop is going there very well.

The feeling in regard to refined is that prices are about bottom, but no one can be found prepared to predict a change soon.

Last week's summary of the statistical position shows stocks in the United States and Cuba together of 184,558 tons, against 166,439 tons last week and 185,965 tons last year. Stocks in Europe, 3,156,000 tons, against 3,271,000 tons last year. Total stocks of Europe and America 3,340,558 tons, against 3,456,965 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The decrease of stock is 116,407 tons, against a decrease of 113,308 tons last week. Total stocks and afloats together show a visible supply of 3,430,558 tons, against 3,506,965 tons last year, or a decrease of 76,407 tons.

TEA—The market continues very firm, especially low grade and medium quality, both Ceylons and Japans. A cable received in Toronto this week from Ceylon shows an advance of 25 per cent. in a low grade tea since November.

McMeeking & Co., London, reviewing the trade for December, say of Indians: "The offerings at London public auctions were 131,000 packages, against 107,000 packages in the same month of 1905. The weekly auctions, although large, did not prove to be in excess of the demand, and the teas sold readily with a general improvement in prices up to about 9d. per lb., although grades above that level were somewhat weak and irregular. All the lower-priced qualities were keenly competed for at a substantial improvement in value. The average of public sale prices for the month was 8d. per lb. against 7d. per lb. for the corresponding month of the previous year." Of Ceylons they say: "The offerings at London public auctions were 53,000 packages against 64,000 packages in the same month of 1905. The quality did not show any improvement, but the demand was very strong for nearly all grades, even the finest being apparently less influenced than Indian teas by the advance in the lower qualities. The average of public sale prices for the month was 8¾d. per lb. against 7⅞d. per lb. for the corresponding month of last year."

COFFEE—The market continues about unchanged.

DRIED FRUITS—Prices continue firm and stocks on spot are mostly light. Currants by the Str. Clara, which reached New York last month, after going ashore, are the first arriving here and are none too soon. In Greece it is reported there are 17,000 tons, as against 55,000 tons a year ago, and on this finding it is believed currants will be higher before the new crop arrives. Of the crop of 1906 there were shipped to America up to Dec. 31, 83,000 tons, against 98,000 tons for the same period the year before. It is therefore pretty certain that stocks this side the Atlantic are small. Evaporated apples are going higher, and 9c. is being asked, with perhaps a little shading here and there but they are costing pretty nearly that laid down in Toronto. Apricots are double the nominal price, and a very good substitute is on the market in the form of a dried yellow plum at 16c.

OLD DUTCH CLEANSER FACTORY BURNED.

The Toronto factory of the Cudahy Packing Co., of Omaha, manufacturers of "Old Dutch Cleanser," was completely destroyed by fire on Monday night last. The loss is estimated at between $10,000 and $15,000, but is covered by insurance.

A NEW CEREAL COMPANY.

Dr. John H. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, Mich., and a party of London citizens have practically completed arrangements for the location in the latter city of a big cereal company, to be known as the Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Company, Limited, of London, Ont. The capital is $100,000, nearly all of which has already been taken up. The provisional directors are Dr. W. F. Roome, J. K. McDermid, T. Baker, G. W. Miller, W. Spittal, J. M. Moore, A. A. Campbell and R. Wallace. The plant of the Health Food Co., on Gray St., has been purchased, and a large addition will be made.

T. H. Estabrooks, St. John, N.B., is in Toronto this week. He finds his Ontario business growing very satisfactorily. In the east it is no less so. In one of his best teritories the traveler who went out the day after New Years broke his record for a week's business before the end of that week, and he is a man with an enviable record at that.

Jas. Turner & Co., Hamilton, have shipped lately a couple of cars of evaporated apples. From all indications 10 cent apples are not far off.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 17, 1907.)

Matters are still quiet in local jobbing circles, most of the trade being busy getting things into shape after the Christmas holidays and sending their travelers out on the road. The most notable decline for the week was that in sugar, all grades of which declined 10 cents on January 8, in Manitoba only, and on the 11th the decline was extended to points west of Manitoba. The dullness of the market and the small demand is accountable for this falling off in values. Foreign dried fruits are firmer on the continued good demand and limited supplies, it being almost impossible to get goods in anything like reasonable time, owing to the tie-up in freights.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS

Halifax, Jan. 15.

Business is only fair since the holiday rush, but travelers will soon be on the road again and it is expected that trade will brighten up. The market throughout is steady, there being no very special changes in the price list. Some of the retailers are cutting prices to capture business, but otherwise there is nothing very noteworthy to record outside of a further advance in potatoes, which are now quoted at eighty cents per bushel. While there is actually no great scarcity those who have stocks on hand are putting up the price.

SUGAR—The demand for sugar at the present time is not very heavy. The price is firm. Quotations here are :

FISH — The exports of live lobsters from provincial points to the American market are very heavy this season. Upwards of one thousand crates per week are being sent to Boston, which is the main point of distribution across the border. The steamers from Yarmouth and Halifax each take from 300 to 500 crates per trip. Lobsters are selling at about 20 cents per pound in Boston.

MOLASSES—There is only a normal demand for molasses now, and prices are steady, as follows:

Fancy Trinidad, 39 cents.
Fancy Porto Rico, 37 to 38 cents.
Extra choice Porto Rico 37 cents.
Choice Trinidad, 35 to 36 cents.
Fancy Barbados, 32 to 33 cents.

BUTTER AND EGGS—Both continue in good demand and high prices prevail. There is an abundant supply of case eggs on the market, and they are quoted from 23 to 25 cents per dozen. Fresh laid stock, which is very scarce, is worth 45 cents per dozen. It was thought that the mild weather the past several weeks would start the hens laying, but the desired result has not been brought about by the weather conditions. There is very little local made butter on the market, the scarcity of small tubs being very noticeable. Good stock is worth from 25 to 27 cents, while ordinary grades run from 22 to 25 cents.

Dairy Produce and Provisions

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

It is some time since the market for cheese has been in such good condition as it has been of late. The feeling is perhaps not to be called very strong, but there is certainly a firm market. Brisk trade is being done at prices which are satisfying to holders. There was considerable cable inquiry from the other side, followed soon after by purchases, small lots at first, but later larger amounts. This demand has kept up wonderfully well during the past two weeks, and if it continues stocks of cheese in Canada will not last long, since they are not now large by any means. The continuance of business with the other side depends entirely upon the consumptive demand in England. Stocks of cheese in that country are rather large than otherwise. There is the English cheese to be considered as well as the imported article. A certain amount of Canadian cheese must be on hand, however, and since the public have bought so far at prices which, in the past, were thought too high for the consumer, it is likely that they will continue to do so. Dealers are quite satisfied with the figures they are obtaining. Buyers in England seem to recognize the fact that if they are to secure Canadian goods it is necessary that they should pay what holders here ask. Holders are not in a position to make any concessions. Stocks in Canada, and in Montreal particularly, are not such that there need be any fear as to whether or not they shall be disposed of at a profit. Holdings in Canada on the whole are considerably short of last year. In Montreal, stocks are becoming lower each week. Various estimates place the number of boxes now held anywhere from 100,000 to 150,000. A good average would be about 125,000 boxes. It is gradually becoming known in England that such are the conditions existing in Canada, and for this reason buyers do not hesitate to buy at the quotations given them, knowing that prices are likely to be higher if they wait until later. There is not in the Old Country at present very much more Canadian cheese than there was at this period last year. Also, a fact which helps Canadian sellers, the make of English cheese this year was not so large as usual. Cheese men expect to have continued good business unless some new factor appears in the market to upset their calculations.

There is a dullness noticeable in the butter market. Trade is still limited, and prices, while fluttering more or less, hold fairly steady. The New Year's business has not yet made its appearance, but dealers are hoping that trade will soon begin to pick up again. Stocks of butter brought from the other side have caused the quiet which now prevails. A larger quantity was brought in than at first thought, and this is not now moving out as freely as might be desired.

According to Board of Trade figures, receipts of butter during the week ending January 12 were 1,412 packages, and of cheese 857 boxes. Total receipts of butter from May 1, 1906, to the end of the week were 601,953. Of cheese, 2,348,577 boxes were received in that period.

PROVISION SITUATION.

Live hog prices are soaring again this week. Quotations are $6.65 f.o.b country points; $6.90 at the Toronto cattle market, and $7.15 off cars at the factory. The packers blame it on each other, but at the bottom of it is a determination to keep the factories going and the consequent competitive buying. The occasion for this is the attitude of the farmer, who has been holding back waiting for better prices. His idea seems to be 7 cents. That's almost famine prices and the packers think now he won't get it. At present prices the farmer gets 6½ cents out of it.

The result of this holding back is that there are a good many over-held hogs in the country that should have been marketed two or three weeks ago. For these, as has been pointed out before, the farmer will not get the market price.

Deliveries last week were fair for the time of year, probably 28,000 in Ontario, though one large packer placed them as low as 20,000. He had got only 60 per cent. of what he had expected. Average weekly deliveries in Ontario are about 30,000.

If these prices hold they mean higher prices for products in the domestic market as soon as the demand revives. At present sales are not large enough to make an advance worth while. About the 1st of March, however, there will be something doing. At present prices of hogs and products the packers could scarcely clear themselves and whatever they may do at times on the British market, in Canada they want a profit on everything.

The English market this week is somewhat stronger, but at the advanced price for hogs, it does not yet show a profit for the Canadian packer. The improvement is due to shortage of Canadian supplies and for some time Danish killings have been running short, owing to bad weather, though last week they got up again to 27,000.

Last week has been rather unsettled in the option provision market in Chicago, realizing of profits on the strong spots having been the chief feature, while taking small profits on the breaks by shorts has been of more importance than hitherto, when they were generally covering at a loss. This shows both sides to be timid as to the future course of the market and inclined to scrap it, awaiting developments, as the general belief is that receipts of hogs sooner or later will show a considerable increase over last winter's packing season. In the meantime the spot trade is only of a hand-to-mouth character still and bids fair to remain so at present high prices, as consumption has apparently been somewhat curtailed thereby, though still very good. Exporters have been taking a little lard for current wants, the same as the home trade, and have done little in meats though weekly consignments continue on a liberal scale in that staple, while falling off somewhat in lard.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

PROVISIONS—Smoked meats are expected to advance in the not distant future. The Easter season is approaching, and with it there comes a strong demand for this line. Already some good orders have been booked for the Easter season. Prices are sure to advance when the beginning of March comes, if not before. A good jobbing demand for lard is reported. Prices show no change.

PROVISIONS—In view of the advance in the price of live hogs provision prices are very firm, though advances are not looked for until business picks up. This is not expected for some weeks. At the same time one or two packers are quoting long clear a shade higher.

BUTTER—There is little change in the situation. Deliveries of dairy are large and the quality is nothing to boast of, much of it being feedy. Established choice brands of creamery bring 28 cents to 29 cents and even 30 cents, but the ordinary run is going at the prices quoted last week, 26 cents to 27 cents, and some as low as 25 cents. Otherwise prices are practically unchanged, with the exception of choice dairy rolls, which are quoted a cent higher. These are the prices at which butter is selling wholesale in Toronto:

EGGS—The market continues firm though small supplies of new-laid eggs continue to come and most shipments are adulterated with the salt-cured variety. Of course it's the farmer's fault, but it's a pity to encourage him. The price is down a little. Fresh (storage) eggs on the contrary are higher, which means that the holdings are not formidable.

Car Shortage Curtails Supplies of West ern Wheat East of the Lakes and There is a firmness in the Price of Wheat and Oats.

There has been no marked activity in the Canadian grain markets. The car shortage continues a drag on business. Receipts at Fort William and Port Arthur are not half of normal. Stocks of western grain at eastern lake ports are about exhausted and there is no chance of getting all-rail shipments through within six weeks or a month. This gives a firmer tone to the market for both wheat and oats. The New York Journal of Commerce, reviewing last week's grain markets, says: "The speculative markets in grain have been characterized by more strength and a little more activity the past week, based upon increased export demand for both wheat and corn, of which the offerings have been moderate or even light, and this has deterred short selling. But the large shorts have not yet been driven to cover as there has been no especially new feature in the crop situation at home or abroad to drive them in, except in Argentina, but the smaller shorts have quite generally covered. The United Kingdom has been the largest buyer of both the export staples, but the continent has also been in the market. Statistics, both foreign and domestic, have been favoring the bulls since the last half of the crop year began, and while foreigners are patient buyers, and do not bid when stuff is not offered, they take everything on the market when it is offered. This has given a very firm undertone to the market for both staples on the spot, and this was communicated to the options though the feeling is still bearish, but gradually changing to the bull side, as it is pretty evident that Europe will want all the surplus of both wheat and corn that we have to give them and as fast as they can get it. In flour, however, there has been no improvement, but rather a weakening tendency, on some increased pressure to sell, in order to keep mills running, even without a fair miller's profit, as there has not been the export demand, so far on this crop that was expected, and foreign markets are still out of line with ours on both winters and springs, but there was a steadier feeling at the close on the belief that the home trade are getting sufficiently low in stock to be compelled to come in more generally for supplies in the near future. The concessions made during the week have not amounted to over 5c. on winters and 5 to 10c. on springs." This week the market turned a little easier again. Bradstreet's report of the world's visible supply showed a decrease of 2,200,000 bushels of wheat, compared with a decrease of 71,000 bushels last year; an increase of 1,276,000 bushels of corn, compared with an increase last year of 915,000 bushels; oats decreased 722,000 bushels; year ago 795,000 bushels. Primary receipts of wheat 486,000 bushels, against 630,000 bushels; shipments, 214,000 bushels, against 200,000 bushels. Receipts of corn, 829,000 bushels, against 714,000 bushels; shipments, 323,000 bushels, against 438,000 bushels.

MONTREAL.

GRAIN—Some business is passing but things are pretty quiet. Very little Manitoba wheat is left at the lake ports on this side, and in view of the car shortage it is impossible to get any all-rail shipments through within a month or six weeks. There is stuff lying at Owen Sound that was ordered out in November. Naturally Manitoba wheat is firmer. Oats too are firmer, because the farmers are not selling.

CEREALS—Oats are firmer and the products naturally lean that way. Should the advance in grain be maintained, and the millers think it will increase, there will be a substantial advance in the price of products. At present, however, the trade is pretty well stocked. The car shortage is interfering with business in this industry too. Some millers can scarcely get oats to keep their mills going. One miller with 300,000 bushels in transit has difficulty in keeping his mills operating in the daytime. A few weeks ago he was running night and day.

QUALITIES OF A GOOD SALESMAN

R. T. CRANE, in the Valve World.

Some people seem to believe that a good salesman is one who is able to deceive, humbug, cheat and defraud the buyer, and this, aside from the question of morality, and considered only from the money-making point of view, may be true where the business is such that the seller does not expect to meet or sell to the same person a second time. We claim, however, that any enterprise which is conducted in that manner is not entitled to the dignity of being classed as a business, for it is nothing more than a swindle.

We maintain that in an ordinary business it is not good policy for salesmen to practice the slightest deception, and one of the first things that we require of our men is that they shall be absolutely honest, frank and fair in their treatment of our customers. We think the value to a salesman of having these qualities appear in his every feature and action and suggested by every word that he utters cannot be overestimated.

Every purchaser is, we believe, desirous of dealing with a house that supplies honest goods at honest prices, that carries stocks in sufficient variety and quantity to take care of his requirements without delay, and where he can be sure of always obtaining the same line of goods.

It is a great relief to a buyer when he finds such a concern, and he should at once see that it is to his interest to confine his dealings to that house, as he is usually so fully occupied in looking after the other portions of his work that he cannot afford to spend his time endeavoring to ascertain whether he has been defrauded either in the quality of goods or in prices.

Trade Only With Reliable Firms.

From our own experience, we know it is a great satisfaction, when purchasing goods, to feel that we are dealing with a house having such a reputation. In fact, we have made it a rule to trade only with concerns of that kind.

For a firm to gain and maintain a reputation for fair dealing, it is not enough for the firm itself to be honest, but the policy of the house must be reflected by the salesmen, who, in many cases, are the only persons connected with the firm the trade ever meet. Hence the importance of having salesmen of good character, who, in soliciting business, make only such statements as the house can live up to. It is apparent, therefore, that an honest concern cannot afford to employ untruthful salesmen, as nothing will cause it greater injury than to have such men out among the trade.

On the other hand, a house selling inferior goods needs salesmen who can and will lie sufficiently to conceal the inferiority beneath a cloak of plausible phrases. Therefore, when we find by experience a salesman whose statements are always correct, and who will not stoop to misrepresentation, we are convinced that his house in honest and reliable, and are disposed to give him our business.

For a salesman to impress the trade in this way involves something more than simply refraining from lying. He must confine himself to what he knows to be true, neither deliberately lying, nor mixing up guesses opinions and facts in such a way as to deceive or mislead the customer, who, after having discovered a deception, can rarely be sold to again by the salesman, with the result that the house loses a customer.

Salesmen Must Know Goods.

Many salesmen are apt to be slovenly and careless in their replies to questions, sometimes possibly with the intention to deceive, but probably many more times for the purpose of concealing their ignorance on the subject about which they are questioned. This is a practice that we most strongly condemn. We very much prefer that our men shall acknowledge their ignorance to the customer and suggest to him that he apply to the house for information, if the matter is of sufficient importance to take that trouble. While salesmen are not expected to give customers unusual or technical information, still it is exceedingly desirable that they should have an extensive knowledge of the goods they are handling so as to be able to describe their goods and answer questions likely to be asked.

Occasionally a salesman is asked his opinion as to market conditions. Our salesmen are instructed not to give any opinion in the matter of prospective rise or fall in prices, as in our judgment salesmen are not in a position to be reliably informed as to the prospective trend of prices, and we cannot afford to have them deceive or mislead the trade in this way any more than we can afford to have them misrepresent the quality of our goods. In any event, we do not care to encourage our customers to gamble on the market. However, if customers have contracts on which they would stand to suffer loss if prices were advanced, we feel that it would not be at all improper for our salesmen as a matter of safety to the customers, to recommend that they place orders to cover such contracts.

Cut Out Treating Habit.

One mistake that salesmen frequently make is to urge an audience with a man when he is busy, thereby annoying him so that he will not give them a proper reception. Besides being tactful, it goes without saying that salesmen should be men of good address and affable in manner.

Another feature of the subject which some of the older people in business will remember was a common practice in the past, was the custom of drinking and carousing with customers. In those times some dealers kept a bar in their stores, others would have jugs or bottles of whisky on hand for their customers, and it was looked upon as being rather necessary for salesmen to take people out and entertain them by drinking and carousing with them in order to hold their trade.

We are pleased to be able to state that this practice has almost totally disappeared, business now being transacted more strictly on the basis of merit than was formerly the case. We laid down the rule years ago that if a man's trade could not be obtained without having our salesmen dissipate with him, we did not want it at all.

CANADIAN BACON IN ENGLAND.

(By P. B. MacNamara, C.C.A. at Manchester, Eng.)

The past twelve months has been by no means a bumper year for Canadian bacon. The first half of the year brought full supplies, and whilst prices at no point touched the curer's notion of what they should be, yet Canadian bacon held its own amongst numerous competitors and came out very little behind its two principal rivals—Irish and Danish. Since August, supplies of Canadian bacon to this country have been very meagre, owing to a deficiency in the supply of hogs and the unusually high prices prevailing. It has been fortunate for Canadian shippers that the quantities placed on the English market have been small, for the prices have been very unprofitable. If Canadian bacon is to maintain its position on the British market, the shipments must be on a more liberal scale. The English merchants look hopefully to the time when Canada can produce more hogs, and there is a generally expressed wish that her vast resources should be turned in this direction by an increase in the number of hog-producing centres.

The quality of Canadian bacon is uniformly good. The feeding of hogs, the selection of the bacon, the mildness of the cure, the transit to this country, and the facilities for placing it on the English market here could not be improved.

Canada has not been alone in the diminution of shipments of bacon to the English market, as the shrinkage in shipments from the United States during the last few months has been very great, and at the time of writing it has been estimated only 8 per cent. of the American bacon products is being sent to Great Britain; dear hogs and the good condition of the home trade being accountable for this fact.

CANNED GOODS AND CHEESE IN AFRICA.

W. T. R. Preston, acting Canadian commercial agent in South Africa, is a keen observer. If his views expressed in the succeeding paragraphs are well founded there are considerable possibilities of increasing South Africa's consumption of Canadian canned goods and cheese. This is important. Both industries are indigenous in Canada and the expansion of each is limited only by the consumption at home and abroad and the means of inter-continental transportation. This last is not at present what it should be for the development of trade between the African and American sections of the empire. Mr. Preston writes:

"There is very active demand for Canadian cheese and Canadian canned fruits. In respect to both these commodities in order to ensure profitable sale they must be of the best quality. In respect to fruit the cheaper or coarser grades grown here are always in the market, and that is why a demand exists for a finer fruit in canned goods. In reply to a late correspondent, a Canadian canning company manifested a desire to place their goods on the South African market by the labels used by them and forwarded to the correspondent a set or sets of the labels in question. Upon interviewing the gentleman I was informed that he found it practically impossible to secure orders without samples of the goods. He told me that a set of samples, such as the letter from the Canadian company indicated, would ensure considerable business, but being without the samples he would not be able to secure orders. The general agency here with a full set of samples of goods would undoubtedly promote a profitable trade between South Africa and Canada.

"In as far as I have been able to learn on the question of Canadian cheese, the bulk of this commodity which reaches here comes via England, and is not the best quality of this Canadian product. I have seen a much better and finer grade of Canadian cheese both in Canada and in Great Britain then I have been able so far to find in South Africa. If my opinion on this subject is well-founded as it appears to be, the trade in this commodity is not being developed on favorable lines."

ALBERTA GOVERNMENT CREAMERIES.

The Government of Alberta's creameries have had another successful year. Dairy Commissioner C. Marker, reviewing the season of 1906, says:

Taken as a whole the past season has been one of the most successful we have had since the creamery work was inaugurated in Alberta. The Provincial Government operated thirteen creameries with a total butter output of 1,050,536 pounds for the six summer months netting at the creameries the handsome sum of $222,970.77, giving an average price of 21.228 cents per pound at the creameries, which were patronized by 1,755 patrons, the vast majority of whom are now preparing to make next year's business the best on record.

Not so very long ago dairying in Alberta was regarded by many as a mere make-shift, a present necessity to provide a little ready cash, but only to be abandoned as soon as the herds of cattle or the grain crops became sufficiently large to provide for the farmers the necessities and comforts of life. But what do we find now? Dairying is rapidly becoming recognized as an industry in the province, an industry which gives both ample scope and satisfactory returns for the ability and intelligence devoted to it by the dairymen. During the past year over two million pounds of butter have been manufactured in the creameries in this province as against less than four hundred pounds in the year 1902 and the product of the Alberta creameries is rapidly becoming a factor in the supply of our western markets.

As long as the farmers of Alberta find it to their advantage to engage in dairying they should be satisfied with nothing short of the best, the best quality of product, the best market and the best returns.

DEMONSTRATION AT CARSLEY'S.

Ribet's Swiss Chocolate and Cocoa are being demonstrated at Carsley's in Montreal. W. H. Halford, acting for S. H. Ewing & Sons, the agents, has charge of the demonstration, which has been very successful. Ribet's goods are newly before the Canadian trade, but have been received with favor. The various lines are neatly put up and the outside of the package by no means belies the inside, as the quality is of the first.

TRADE NOTES.

Cox's gelatine postal scales are being distributed by agents of that firm. The scales are quite useful, and are being given away to customers in all parts of the country.

G. O. Stratton has purchased the Main St. grocery of the late K. A. McLean, Moncton, but the Highfield St. store will be continued under the name of D. L. McLean.

Robert T. Holman, one of Prince Edward Island's foremost merchants, and head of the firm of R. T. Holman, Limited, Summerside, died on Dec. 11th, at the age of 79.

Docker & Fraser, Heward, N.W.T., are dissolving partnership, and the business will be continued by G. B. Docker. Munro & Co., of the same town, have been succeeded by Munro Bros.

George Wenino, of Sarnia, is one of the grocers who believe in a confectionery department. Mr. Wenino has just added a home made baking department and a candy kitchen to his already complete grocery.

The Foster Pottery Co., Main St. West, Hamilton, is sending out a neat calendar, entitled "Black Bass Fishing." The photo is realistic and summery enough to cause many a sigh for "the good old summer time."

Recently the Canadian Sign Company, of Amherst, N.S., supplied the store of C. E. Bentley & Company, Truro, with eight very attractive signs. The designs are very artistic, and it is likely that the company will reap benefit from their investment.

Herbert Crossthwaite, formerly a traveller for the Erie Tobacco Co., Windsor, died at his home in Toronto on Dec. 23rd. His death was due to an accident received while diving in Port Dover harbour a year ago last July, which resulted in paralysis. He was 26 years of age.

James Whitehead, of Whitehead & Huether, Walkerton, speaking to a grocery traveler of long standing, this week said the Christmas trade of 1906 has been, by long odds, the best and most satisfactory they had ever known. The traveller had got a share of it, and voiced the same opinion.

A dainty New Year's reminder reaches The Grocer from the editor and staff of Corn Trade News and Milling, London, Eng. The matter is printed in black and red on a heavy white stock, embossed with a gilt statute of Ceres. The Grocer heartily reciprocates the kind wishes contained in the card.

S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal, have issued, for 1907, one of the richest and neatest calendars noticed by The Grocer this season. The designs are in placque style, richly colored and embossed, and the entire card finished in the highest lithographic art. These calendars, which are about 8 inches square, will be keenly sought ater by the customers of Messrs. S. H. Ewing & Son. A post-card referring to this notice will bring one if the supply has not run out, there having been a good demand for these beautiful cards.

A Good Repeater

A prominent grocer, when recently asked what kind of goods he liked to sell best, replied:—

"Give me a good repeater like Royal Baking Powder; an established article of undisputed merit which housekeepers repeatedly buy and are always satisfied with."

NEW baking powders and new foods, like new fads, come and go but Royal goes on forever. Grocers are always sure of a steady sale of Royal Baking Powder, which never fails to please their customers, and in the end yields to them a larger profit than cheaper and inferior brands.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Dealers Now Satisfied January, 1907 Will be One of the "Best Ever" in the Fruit Trade—Fish and Vegetable Trade Quiet.

It is now expected that the protests of the fruitmen in regard to the new duty on mushmelons and peanuts will shortly result in something definite, and it is not improbable that when the final draft of the tariff is made, these articles will be placed on their former basis. The matter has been under discussion during the past few days, and a definite announcement is expected at any time.

The market for navel oranges in New York is very firm for desirable sizes. Rain in California and Mexico has again interfered with shipments, and the transportation problem is not yet solved. An example of the poor service is seen in the case of a Toronto firm who had a shipment of Mexican oranges 20 days on the road. The general trade is reported excellent, and for probably the first time in twenty years the market has passed the Christmas season without a bad after-effect. One dealer states that in the first week of January this year his sales were greater than for all four weeks of January, 1906.

In fish and vegetables there is little of interest.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Dealers report a very fair business in fruits for the season. Florida oranges have been advanced and are now selling at $4. Oranges are in good demand at prices quoted. Lemons are selling fairly well. Prices generally are well maintained.

FISH—Dealers are doing a good business in fish at prices, which, on the whole, are very steady. Cod and haddock, which are in good supply, are in demand at prices which have not changed since last week. Some small quantities of fresh frozen herring have arrived and are now on the market at figures which are likely to be maintained. There has been an advance in tomcods since last report. Receipts of bloaters and haddies are large. Prices are without change on these lines. Oysters in bulk are arriving very freely. Barrels are quoted at $8. Standards and selects are down ten cents.

TOMATOES AND PURE FOOD LAW.

An American Broker's View—New Law a Good Thing for the Trade.

A Maryland firm of canned goods brokers, Strasburg, Silver & Co., dilating on the situation after the holiday festivities and in view of the fact that the Pure Food Law came into effect on Jan. 1, say: "The unexpected has happened, and the round dollar is the low-down price, not many to be had at that. Of course a car or two can be had for less, but who wants canned tomatoes that are not pure legally and effectually pure, the kind after which the Pure Food Law was framed and with which it was compelled to comply, not the reddish, over-green, unripe, cholera-morbus kind, but the kind that invigorates and does not inebriate. Packers down this way are overjoyed over the new law; nolens volens, it will keep the other fellow from packing inferior grades, the kind that fill and continue to fill the retailers' shelves instead of filling the wants of the consumer. When the retailer stocks up with tomatoes of the "trashy sort" his same customer seldom makes a second pur- his same customer makes a second purchase and never a third, but when the consumer meets with a pure unadulterated brand, having been packed in its highest state o. lusciousness from a near-by field, and then hermetically sealed, retaining all of its natural flavors he wants more and many more. This new federal law will therefore be a boom to the tomato business, increasing consumption. Demand and necessities of supply will naturally insure higher prices for future tomatoes, which cannot be packed pure in high-priced cans and everything away above last year at indefinitely higher prices and sold at 80 cents for 3s and 60 for 2s, without loss to the packer. Verily, the packer and his employe must be paid to insure a healthy condition of affairs, and we don't believe that the jobber, retailer or consumer wants to escape a reasonable profit to the producer, nor does the jobber want a future contract for delivery ten months hence signed by a straw seller, making him feel more like chaff at delivery time, if the market is up a little, as it will doubtless be. Pure goods increase consumption and higher prices must prevail as long as demand is greater than supply. Demand increases output likewise and yet there is no danger until the output exceeds the demand. We would suggest the early covering of futures if you can find the right seller, but a contract with the wrong seller is worse than valueless; to think that you stand on a prop when you don't is disappointing; if it should be a contract, why not for a given quantity as well as quality, not the pro rata kind because sufficient goods will always be packed to fill all future orders and the buyer has a right to what he buys as well as the seller to settlement as per contract. An esteemed contemporary has said: 'Children pay with marbles, men with money.'"

Newton A. Hill, representing L. Chaput Fils & Cie., Montreal, in the Northwest and British Columbia, is leaving this week on his first trip for 1907. This is Mr. Hill's fifth year on that ground, and he has secured a good share of the trade of that section.

HOW A FRUIT SELLING TURK DID THE WHOLESALE GROCERS

Some Canadian wholesale grocery houses, not all of them in, nor all of them out of Montreal, are mourning their acquaintance with a young and enterprising Syrian, who visited them early last year. He, on the other hand, has improved his bank account to the extent of $25,000 or $30,000.

This story illustrates some phases of character that are not all foreign. It happens to be true, so the names are better not said.

When the Sultana raisin crop was in blossom a young man of Smyrna arrived in America. He was tall, spare, dark, with a thin line of black moustache artistically on a horizontal line and had lately been admitted a partner in a Smyrna fruit firm that had already done business on a considerable scale in America. He looked more the Parisian than the Oriental and spoke six languages fluently. His manner was engaging, but strenuous, he talked fast and by preference about figs and Sultanas. His mind was aglow and each idea was illuminated by an eastern adage or oriental imagery.

When he arrived in Canada he found some claims against his firm arising out of former business. These he considered, made the best bargains he could and settled with the cash. To one wholesaler he paid as much as $300 and others got smaller sums.

These disposed of he started in to sell figs and raisins. And selling was easy; why shouldn't it be, representing a firm that settled the claims against it as he had? As a broker expressed it, "the wholesalers were falling over themselves in their eagerness to buy."

Remember this was long before the Sultana crop was gathered, or any save a prophet knew how it would turn out. The fig business turned out all right because the crop was a good one; it was on raisins that the hopes of the wholesalers were wrecked. His price on Sultanas, necessarily a purely speculative one, on a growing crop, ranged from 12s. 6d. to 17s. a hundredweight.

When the crop was gathered it was found to be about half an average and the dried fruit situation generally was very firm. Prices opened at 30s. and immediately began to climb higher. The Canadian buyers were a bit anxious, but could only wait and see what their versatile friend would do.

To appreciate the situation it must be understood that Canadian houses do this fig and raisin business on the basis of a letter of credit. This is the way it works: When the lively Syrian got an order he got with it for the amount of the order a letter of credit through the customer's bank on, say, some bank in England with business in Turkey. A copy of this letter would be sent to the bank in England and the Syrian would have a copy. When he shipped the goods he presents the letter of credit with the bills of lading, say to the Ottoman Bank in Smyrna, and in due course it would be honored by the bank in England. The letter of credit might be cashed at any of a dozen banks so that it can be understood that once given it cannot be withdrawn. This means that a letter of credit bears a strong resemblance to gold coin.

The feelings of the gentlemen who had dealt with the Syrian in raisin futures may be guessed at. He did not leave them long in suspense. In due course they got their advices and they were probably more mad than surprised.

The wily Turk knew that if he did not fulfil his contracts his cake was dough. Having decided that he couldn't or could not afford to keep faith he boldly decided to turn the situation to profit. Raisins had risen to 38s. He charged his Canadian customers as high as 50s. and at varying rates shipped orders to exhaust the letters of credit.

Some orders he at first repudiated asserting that they were "confidential" and to be filled or left at his discretion. He changed his mind with regard to these, however, and filled them after his fashion, but his victims wished he had adhered to his original intention. His was an old established concern. The banks had reported his financial standing good and his reputation for integrity blameless. But this young man was new blood. Most foreign speculators in dried fruits prefer to lie down rather than be wiped out when the market goes against them. This enterprising Turk saw larger possibilities in the situation. As default would forever prohibit him from doing business under the same name again, his conscience enabled him to decide that robbery would make the case no worse. A common matter of fact thief would have sat down and figured out his letters of credit in raising at his factitious price. Not this elegant trifler with wholesale grocery surpluses. He was a man of ideas and imagination. He was blessed with the great gift of humor and made the punishment fit the crime. He distributed favor in the raisin deal in proportion to the size of the fig orders he had secured. One gentleman not only gave him a large fig order but dined him at the leading hotel and it is alleged this wholesaler got his entire order at contract price. Only an artist, and one of fine social sensibilities like Raffles would have taken thought to do that. But he carried the joke to a mean issue and this is where admiration of the Turk must tarry. He played with the weights. One firm that got 300 boxes when they should have had 1,000 found the weight of the contracted order short about 2,000 pounds. This was low down. After that we must pass the Turk up.

AN EGG-O-SEE BANQUET.

Annual Gathering of the Big Cereal Company at Quincy, Ill.

The fourth annual gathering of the managers of the Egg-o-See Company at the Newcomb hotel in Quincy, Ill., on Friday evening, Dec. 28th, was an important event for Quincy and a landmark in the history of the company. There were representatives on hand from all corners of the continent. Among the Canadians present were the Hon. John Bain, Ottawa; E. M. Trowern, Toronto; H. C. Beckett, Hamilton, and B. F. Blakeslee, Toronto, Canadian representative of the firm. General regret was expressed at the absence of general manager John E. Linihan, who through illness was unable to attend. Another cause for expressions of regret on the part of several of the speakers was the approaching removal of the general offices from Quincy to Chicago.

The banquet itself was a magnificent affair. The menu was elaborate and included things new as well as appetizing. The menu card was a work of art, with the familiar trade mark of the company embossed on the cover, while inside were pictures of the new office quarters and the famous "There ain't goin' to be no leavin's.". The tables, which were adorned with American Beauty roses, were each arranged to seat congenial little groups of four, with the exception of the long table for the speakers, which was elevated above the floor and had seats for fourteen.

At the conclusion of the banquet, the oratorical portion of the programme was begun, and addresses were given by President John W. Cassidy, who acted as chairman and toastmaster; John A. Steinbach, Mayor of Quincy; J. L. Mahin, of the Mahin Advertising Agency, Chicago, who talked on the career of Egg-O-See, and the part played in its success by advertising; Brode B. Davis, Chicago; Thomas Balmer, New York, who gave a very practical talk along trade lines; Dr. Otto Bell, St. Louis, on the medical and scientific side of Egg-O-See; Chas. H. Williamson; W. R. Emery, advertising manager of Everybody's Magazine; Judge C. F. Perry, Quincy; Col. Hunter, Chicago; A. C. Monagle, New York manager, on "Salesmanship in Cereals"; Robert E. Lee, editor of the Eli Grocer, St. Louis; W. D. Whitmore, New England manager; J. S. Dinkelbohler, Jr., Cincinnati representative, and several others.

During the evening a musical programme was rendered by an orchestra, quartette, and several soloists.

"THE FAIRBANK PLAN"

LOOK INTO IT

and see just what "The Fairbank Plan" is. While we spend hundreds of thousands of dollars every year advertising the six great Fairbank specialties:

Gold Dust Washing Powder
Fairy Soap, Copco Soap
Fairbank's Glycerine-Tar Soap
Fairbank's Scouring Soap
Fairbank's Sanitary Soap

and educating the public regarding them; and while we intend to continue doing this, we realize fully that advertising alone has not accomplished the splendid results we have enjoyed in the sale of these goods, but that "the man behind the counter" has been an important factor in extending and increasing our trade. It was the realization of this fact that gave birth to "The Fairbank Plan," as a method of rewarding the retail clerks for their earnest co-operation in selling these goods and, consequently, a portion of our immense advertising appropriation is now set aside for the recognition of the dealer and his clerks.

"The Fairbank Plan" is an absolutely fair method of rewarding the clerk in direct proportion to the interest displayed in pushing the six specialties, as each package of these goods is couponed in such a manner that the coupon can be easily removed before the goods pass into the hands of the consumer. For these coupons we offer many valuable articles.

If you will send for an illustrated premium list of "The Fairbank Plan" it will convince you that this is no cheap trading-stamp scheme.

"Batger's"

Strawberry Jam

If you carry this line of jam on your shelves it sells itself. The appearance of the new style glass jar is good and the Whole Fruit inside invites tasting.

It is made from the finest English garden strawberries and granulated sugar, by a firm that has been in the business for over 150 years.

Once tasted, Batger's Strawberry Jam will be ordered again. If you are not already selling Batger's, why not order a trial case of 4 doz. and see for yourself?

Four Reasons why INVICTUS FIBRE is the BEST FIBRE PAPER on the Market

1. Invictus Fibre is made from personally selected pulp wood cut on our own limits.
2. This special pulp wood is again rigidly culled on arrival at our mills
3. The pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made is manufactured in our own pulp mill and transferred at once to the paper mill, avoiding all drawbacks of transportation.
4. Invictus Fibre will increase in strength and not grow hard and brittle as does fibre made from sulphite pulp. This is a quality of the peculiar and selected pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made.

A trial order will convince you that we are correct. See that each package bears the words "Invictus Fibre." Every ream contains 480 sheets

A Two Cent Mistake

Don't amount to much in any business, but the striking point is that a clerk is just as liable to make a mistake of $2.00 as he is of two cents, and a few mistakes like this would pay for enough of Allison's Coupon Books to last a year or more. With these books mistakes are impossible.

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? Let us send you a free sample.

Hamilton, January 3rd, 1907

Dear Sir:—One of our wholesale customers called us up on the 'phone the other day, and mentioned that one of his country customers had sent some Poultry for our Aylmer factory in his care, and that the price was to be 10c. per lb. "I had no idea," said he, "that your "people pay such high prices for your Poultry. Some "retailers and consumers seem to have the impression "that all Canned Poultry is made up of all kinds of scrap "meat, and if they were acquainted with the facts that you "pay such high prices for your Poultry, and insist on the very best quality, "it would increase the consumption very much." We assured our esteemed customer that our Canned Poultry was absolutely guaranteed to be exactly what it is represented to be, and that taking into consideration the trouble in cleaning Poultry, waste of bone, etc., our Canned Poultry is very much better and cheaper than Poultry in its fresh state.

Aylmer Poultry is especially recommended for invalids, as owing to being thoroughly sterilized there is no danger of any bacterial trouble of any kind, as with Poultry not canned. Aylmer Chicken Soup is recommended by physicians from coast to coast. Every retail grocer in the country should keep these high-grade products in stock, and should lose no opportunity to place their merits before his customers.

Yours faithfully,

CANADIAN CANNERS,
LIMITED

A few reasons why Ozo Jams should be and are considerably better than any others now being made in Canada :

1. As Montreal is by far the largest buying centre in the country, enormous quantities of all kinds of fruit are sent to be marketed here, and as ripe fruit has to be disposed of within 24 hours of arrival a glut is sure to occur in some fruit every day—it might be peaches to-day, or strawberries to-morrow—some fruit is sure to be over-shipped, which we can buy at a price averaging as low as the mere cost of growing it; and buying fruit at this price naturally we can afford to use more of it.

2. Our plant is the largest in Canada, contains the finest, cleanest and most modern equipment, which enables us not only to turn out an enormous quantity but give far better quality as well.

3. We can buy sugar on the wharf at a great saving over what it would cost if freighted west, and consequently are enabled to put in a much larger proportion in the cheaper qualities.

4. Having the turnover, we are able to purchase our packages at the very lowest price.

5. As we believed that these natural advantages would enable us to take the lead in the Jam business, we sent to England for the most expert Jam cook we could find. As money was no object, we got him and placed him in charge of our Jam Department, where his 28 years of practical experience are enabling him to turn out goods which are a revelation to the trade, and are causing a large increase in sales in this line with the people who are handling them.

6. Notwithstanding our ability to turn out a product equal to any made in the country at a lower price, our aim is to put this saving in the cost of production into bettering the quality of the goods, thus putting purchasers of our goods beyond the reach of competition.

With this information at hand you can readily see why so many of the largest wholesalers have placed their Jam contracts with us, and we think you will also see that it will be to your advantage, and that of your customers, to place your Jam business with us.

We quote Standard Brand Jam

A Letter YOU Should Read

VERCHERES, QUE.

To "SALADA" TEA CO.,
Montreal, Que.

Dear Sirs,

A few words to tell you about the "SALADA" Green Tea that you have sent me. Your "SALADA" is a first-class article. I have been in business 42 years, and have sold several kinds of tea, and may say that your tea is better than any other. I have sold a lot of your famous tea, and all my customers that have tried it are all the time praising it. I am pushing your tea over all others, and if I continue to do so will surely be able to sell a large quantity. Now, I am sending you a list of names of customers that do not know "SALADA," and by receiving a sample, this will give them the advantage of knowing it.

Yours truly,
(Signed) J. JACQUES

If you are not already selling this tea, would it not be well to get into line before others steal a march on your trade?

There's no time to be lost, as competition is forever on the move and the fittest must survive.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE WHITE SWAN

There are many brands of Jelly Powder on the market—some better than others, nearly all good, but only one of outstanding merit. A brand that stands pre-eminent for high grade and absolute merit. A brand that has staunch friends in almost every town from Halifax to Vancouver, and that is gaining in reputation every day.

GREIG'S — WHITE SWAN — is a household word throughout Canada, and is everywhere recognized as synonymous with worth. That's why the White Swan Jelly Powders are manufactured and sold in such volume.

Not only are the goods of unimpeachable quality, but the price we sell them at is such that the dealer can make a better profit than on any other. Our method of advertising is to make it werth while for the merchant to handle our brand.

All Greig's White Swan goods are profitable for you to handle.

DATING OF CANNED GOODS

Proposal by Minister of Agriculture in New Inspection Law Opposed by an Expert Canner.

By W. R. Drynan,

The Honorable the Minister of Agriculture deems it expedient to pass an act for the further inspection of canned food products. This act will apparently be closely modelled after the act recently passed in the United States, and on the whole will find favor with all those directly interested in this very important industry. While directly intended to benefit the consumer it should stimulate the industry and encourage consumption, as it will increase the confidence of the consumer in all kinds of canned goods.

Canners of fruits and vegetables especially, have nothing to fear from inspection, as provided for in the bill, for their products are clean, sound and wholesome. In fact it is a physical impossibility for a packer to turn out a good quality of goods unless everything in and about his factory is scrupulously clean and his raw material at its best for table use. This is so generally recognized that in the canners' contract with the growers it is always stipulated that the vegetables and fruits must be brought in when best fitted for table use, and the same day as picked. In addition to this, inspectors are sent to the fields to examine the crops and to instruct when the produce must be brought in. All these precautions are necessary to ensure a first-class product, and as the only method of preservation used is the sterilization process, i.e., cooking in hot water or steam at a high temperature sufficient to destroy all bacteria, canned fruits and vegetables are absolutely pure and are a much safer food than the fresh articles picked up in the hucksters' stalls, and which have been exposed to the dirt and dust of the street. While canned fruit and vegetable packers, therefore, invite inspection, to some it seems a needless expenditure of money, especially as there is already a system of inspection under the Provincial Government.

Date on Canned Goods.

The Honorable the Minister of Agriculture, however, has intimated that the proposed act may contain a clause rendering it compulsory that the date of packing shall be stamped on each can. If this is allowed to become law it will seriously affect the grocer's business and therefore it is worthy of his most serious attention.

The Hon. Mr. Fisher is frank enough to say that he has not been able to get at the facts in reference to whether or not canned goods deteriorate after a twelvemonth, but thinks the clause should be inserted owing to the impression prevalent among consumers that such is the case.

If it is a fact that canned goods deteriorate in quality after a twelvemonth and are not suitable for food, then the Honorable the Minister should most certainly insist that the date of packing shall appear on each and every can, and the packer and middleman for ethical reasons should assent to it without a murmur, but, on the other hand, if it can be shown (as it is lower down) that canned goods properly processed will keep not only a twelvemonth but indefinitely, then it would seem almost a crime to insist upon the clause being inserted in the act as it would seriously cripple a great and growing industry, and cause financial loss to the farmer, the packer, the wholesaler, the retailer and also the consumer.

Not Dated Under U.S. Law.

In the United States the Beveridge Bill provided for the dating of canned goods, but the representatives of the packers demonstrated to the satisfaction of Congress that goods hermetically sealed are as good ten years after date of packing as when first sealed. They showed that a date on the label would not protect the consumer but would work a great hardship to packers, wholesalers, and retailers, as the public would naturally insist on having cans with current labels, and as a consequence this clause was not inserted in the act. Dr. Wiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, and one of the fathers of the Pure Food Law, in reply to an enquiry from the Chicago Canner, Nov. 2, 1906, wired: "Do not think there is any contemplated regulation compelling dating of canned goods. Law does not require it."

Some Evidence.

The New York Journal of Commerce, (Feb. 17, 1906) is authority for the following very convincing proof that canned goods properly processed will keep indefinitely:

"'We have opened a can of condensed milk over 20 years old, that was carried in a sutler's stock during the Civil War,' says the American Grocer, 'and except for color it was as good and as sweet as the day it was put into a tin.'"

"A lot of canned goods washed by a flood into the river at Rochester, N.Y., were found many years after, and when opened were in perfect condition. The canned salmon which was awarded the first prize at the Berlin Fisheries Exposition was from the same lot which took the prize at the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia, five years before.

"General A. W. Greely has testified that the unequalled health of his command in the Arctic expedition was largely due to the excellent quality and variety of the canned goods consumed, carried through two winters, frozen and thawed as they were. The stores included canned apples, peaches, pears, rhubarb, green peas, corn, onions, potatoes and tomatoes, all subject to a temperature of 60 degrees F. below zero, and were solid for months at a time. The second summer they thawed, and froze solid again the next winter. General Greely testifies that 'all the articles named presented the same appearance as though freshly canned, and their flavor was as good when the last can was eaten as in the first month.' They also had canned turnip, squash, beets, carrots, pineapple, cherries, grapes, clams, shrimp and crabs, which, although not subject to such extreme temperatures as the other preserved articles named, yet froze and thawed repeatedly without injury. General Greely also says: 'No illness of any kind occurred prior to the retreat, and those most inclined to canned fruit and vegetables were the healthiest and strongest of the party.'

"So much for the canned foods in the Arctic regions. Now for testimony from the Equator.

"Surgeon-Major W. Simpson Pratt, M.B., whose experience and judgment, says Sir Garnet Wolseley, commander of the Soudan expedition, may be safely relied upon, says: 'Taking my experience in India and the late Nile expedition, in which the test of tinned provisions was exceptionally severe from continued exposure to the powerful direct rays of the sun, I have found that tinned provisions, meat and vegetables, put up separately or combined in the form of soups, are practically undamageable by any climatic heat, provided the following conditions are carried out: First, provisions to be of the best quality; second, to have received the proper amount of cooking before the tin is closed; third, to be put up "in vacuo" in perfectly sound, air-tight tins. I believe that any failure that occurs is due to the neglect of one, or all, these conditions. Given these conditions, nothing can be more admirable; failing them, nothing more deleterious.'

"At the London exhibitions of 1851, 1862 and 1873, tins of meat which had been 'put up' from 25 to 40 years were exhibited, and when tasted were found perfectly sound. Stores of preserved meat that were left in the Arctic regions for years, annually exposed to a temperature 92 degrees below and 80 degrees above zero, were brought back to England and the contents of the tins found to be as sound as the day they were preserved.

"There are variations in the quality of preserved, just as there are in the quality of fresh goods, but, bulk for bulk, the preserved goods are far safer from germ life than fresh foods, by reason of their having been subject to a temperature high enough and long enough to kill all bacteria.

"The late Dr. Cyrus Edson, of New York, who for years followed up all reported cases of illness attributed to eating canned goods, said, as the result of his experience: 'There is not more wholesome food than canned goods properly put up.'"

After Twenty Years.

Prof. Duckwall, M.S., member of the Society of American Bacteriologists, and of the American Chemical Society, in his work on bacteriology, page 160, shows an illustration of a can of tomatoes put up in 1884, and states: "The tomatoes after twenty years are in fine condition, just as nice as freshly canned stock." Further on he writes: "Age does not affect canned goods unless a perforation should happen to be made in the tin. So long as the air is kept away, the contents will remain in an unfermented condition. From time to time there have been rumors of laws to declare the date of the pack on tin cans in various states, the idea being to limit the sale of canned goods to the year immediately following the pack. This would be very unjust because, as we say, canned goods are unaffected so long as the container prevents the germs from the air from gaining entrance. We have opened canned goods of various ages, ranging from five to twenty years, and have found that in every case where the tin was not perforated, the contents were perfectly good and tasted as well as the freshly canned product."

Every packer and nearly every dealer in the country can testify from knowledge at first hand that age does not affect the quality of canned goods properly canned.

A wholesale merchant of St. John, N.B., mentioned to the writer only recently that he had opened a can of pineapple that he knew for a positive fact was at least several years old as it had been in stock that long, and found the contents equal to the freshly canned article, and pineapple, owing to its strong acidity, is one of the most difficult fruits to keep.

Proof of the Pudding.

The writer himself has opened and eaten canned pears at least five years old and found the quality to be really excellent.

In the 24th annual report of the Massachusetts State Health Department a table is presented showing the results of analytical examination for tin of about thirty samples of different kinds of canned fruits and vegetables, and it was found in general that the amount of tin dissolved in three months, and which was infinitesimal, was the maximum dissolved, i.e., there was found to be no change after three months.

It has been pretty clearly shown that the dating of a can offers no protection to the consumer, whereas, on the contrary, it will be a hardship to the packer and the dealer.

Effect Upon Retailer.

Supposing the dating of canned goods becomes law how will it affect the retailer? In the first place, he will be left with goods on his shelves that will have to be sold at a sacrifice, as the mere fact that goods are dated will cause the public to insist on the newer goods, even though they cannot tell one from another on tasting the contents.

In addition the retailer will only buy from hand to mouth, fearing to be left with a stock on hand at the end of the season, and as a consequence, he will not be able to take advantage of the market in seasons of abundance, and this in turn will affect the public, compelling them to pay higher prices for their goods, which again will decrease the consumption, and reduce the demand thus affecting the packer and the grower. The wholesale grocer will also find his business injured just in proportion to that of the retailer.

The mere dating of a can is no protection for the consumer, as if the contents are inferior the dating will not make them better.

The object of canning is to preserve by sterilization in their natural, fresh state, fruits and vegetables which are prone to decay, thus taking care of crops in seasons of abundance to tide over the season of crop failure, and to supply what are equal to fresh fruits and vegetables in localities where the same are not procurable in their fresh state.

In the Hands of Providence.

So long as the Almighty controls the growth of crops these are bound to vary from year to year, sometimes large and again small, and it has always been the packers' aim to take care of these crops, whether heavy or light, thus in some years packing in excess of the year's demand on country's ability to consume, knowing that there would come a lean year sooner or later. With compulsory dating canners will not likely take the risk of putting up any surplus stocks, which would have to be carried over only to be sold at sacrifice prices, possibly at less than cost, and the result is easily foreseen, viz., that the grower would lose a portion of his market. The public would be confronted with the possibility of being denied the luxury of having fruits and vegetables on their tables at all seasons at moderate prices, and in the event of a crop failure there would be no surplus stocks in the country, which would be a hardship, especially to the working classes, who are the great consumers of canned goods.

If the tins must be dated, the canner will be put to considerable extra expense, and in the event of a partial or total crop failure, which occurs periodically, he will be left with a supply of cans that will be utterly useless and his loss may possibly be so serious as to force him into bankruptcy, especially if he is a packer of small means, and this will also apply in a lesser degree to labels, as canners must secure their supplies in advance on a basis of a maximum output.

MONTHLY COMPETITION.

Window dressing, we believe, is one of the most important parts of the grocery business. It needs encouragement in Canada. For that reason The Canadian Grocer is holding a monthly window dressing competition. Three prizes of $5, $3 and $2 will be awarded each month. Those wishing to enter the competition will send photographs of their windows to THE CANADIAN GROCER, 10 Front St. East, Toronto. accompanied by a written description.

This is a chance for the clerk. No department of the grocery trade offers larger opportunities for advancement than window dressing. If you don't know what you can do, try. If you don't surprise yourself the effort will be a great advantage in any case. No grocer is up to his business if he cannot dress a window. Get into the competition.

Was Tried and Abandoned.

Years ago in the infancy days of the industry, dating was compulsory, and each day's run was stamped by hand with a die, but a whole season's run in those days was equal to about a day's run of a modern factory at present, which is anywhere from 30,000 to 70,000 cans. If dating was not practicable in those days it is very much less so to-day. In addition to all this the unscrupulous packer would be tempted to dishonesty, as there would be nothing to prevent his dating any carry-over goods with the current year's dating, and it would be an impossibility for anyone, even an expert, to detect one season's pack from another if goods were properly processed, except possibly in the case of bright colored fruits such as strawberries, etc. In fact fruits such as peaches, pears, etc., are to be preferred after they are a couple of seasons old owing to the improvement of flavor by the syrup having thoroughly penetrated the fruit.

The proposed inspection, together with the packer's necessity to put out only first quality of goods to keep his brand on the market, should be ample protection to the consumer.

Canadian fruits and vegetables, thanks to our climate, are admitted to be the finest in the world, and these same fruits and vegetables, canned as they are to-day, most carefully and scientifically, have no equal the world over for general excellence of quality.

Thanks to the tin can, the explorer in the Arctic regions, the miner in the Yukon, the sailor on the high sea, the workingman in the crowded city, all may enjoy the luxury of having at any season of the year fruits and vegetables fresh from the garden with the dew still on them.

The 20th Century must bend the knee to the omnipotent tin can.

COSTA RICA PLANTER AND PHYSICIAN.

The Grocer received a call this week from a Costa Rica, C.A. coffee planter in the person of Dr. A. F. Pirie. Dr. Pirie is a Canadian, native of Dundas, Ont., but has made Costa Rica his home during the past nineteen years, residing in the city of Cartago, the second most important commercial centre of the republic. He has large interests in coffee estates and his company's marks are prominent in the London and American coffee markets. While up north in Canada he has paid some attention to the introduction of Costa Rican coffees and met with a promising reception. Several cargoes of these highly favored coffees have been sold on the Toronto market and Doctor Pirie is in hopes that the trade will learn to appreciate the value of them more on trial. London, Eng., is the principal market for Costa Rica coffees and they are considered the most desirable and highly quoted brands. Dr. Pirie has been in Canada on an extended holiday and returns to Costa Rica in February.

ISLANDERS GETTING AHEAD.

Writing from St. John's, Newfoundland, E. D. Arnaud, Canadian Commercial Agent, says: "A western correspondent of a local newspaper reports that travellers representing St. John's firms, are gradually supplanting the travellers for Canadian houses in that part of the colony where they formerly came in considerable numbers, and have captured the bulk of the trade. This it is now asserted is being lost to Canada in consequence of the enterprise displayed by several firms in this city, and the energetic work done by their representatives in the field."

Jos. Quintal, of Quintal & Lynch, Montreal, has been nominated for the presidency of the Montreal Corn Exchange Association.

PURE FOOD, HONESTY AND CLEANLINESS

An Article by Walter M. Lowney, Chocolate and Cocoa Manufacturer.

Thanks to President Roosevelt and the magazines, public opinion, the greatest force in the land, has been aroused as never before to the importance of purity in food products. Pure food is important for us and important for our descendants for generations to come. It means much for the happiness of the people and perhaps still more for their success in the competitive strife with foreign industrial nations. It is more important than good coal is in the engine room because the machine whose efficiency is at stake is the human machine and the damage done by impure food may last to the third and fourth generation.

To make public opinion effective its standards must be held up in plain view all the time to all the people. Each standard must become accepted as a principle. It must be considered just as odious an act to adulterate food as piracy, poisoning, the sweating of coins, or any other of the old crimes now no longer in fashion.

It is well, therefore, that Congress has seen fit to make the penalty for adulteration, not only a fine, but an imprisonment also, at the discretion of the court. Punishment must be punishment and not a joke. It is of no use to hale into court an overspeeding automobilist and fine him about one-third of what he frequently has to pay for a new tire. Such punishment simply becomes one item—and a small one—in the weekly expenses of his fad. Fines fall off the back of a millionaire like water from a duck. The maximum fines of the statute book have not kept pace with the growth of wealth. But imprisonment has more of dread in it for the rich man than for the pauper. It is more of a hardship for him because it is a more violent change from his daily life and certainly equal damage to his self-respect.

It is important that public opinion should feel that the harmful adulteration of food fully deserves imprisonment and should support the courts in the infliction of that penalty when deserved. It will not be long after that before men who now adulterate without apparent loss of self-respect will be ashamed, as well as afraid, to do a thing that not only leads to the lock-up, but also subjects the offender to the contempt of his fellow citizens.

Within the memory of men not yet willing to confess themselves even middle-aged, the changes in domestic economy have been enormous. It is generations since the manufacturer took from the housewife the making of the family soap, the candles, the cloth, the linen, and many other things which our grandmothers made for themselves. The process is still going on, and the lady of the house gracefully permits the manufacturer to assume more and more of the household duties which her mother performed as a matter of course. It is not worth while to discuss the question how far this graceful willingness on the ladies' part arises from the scarcity and arrogance of servants or how far from a natural desire on the part of women to have relief from drudgery. The fact remains that the preparation of food is being done more and more outside the home. As a consequence it has become of the first importance that the home should be protected by state and national laws to prevent fraud in food. The law lagged, as usual, far behind the change in conditions, but now it has taken a long stride towards catching up. The pure food law is a delayed necessity, and it is our duty to support it and further its ends.

This support must not be left entirely to the pure food officials. Dr. Wiley, Chief of the Department of Chemistry, Washington, covering interstate business, and the various state commissioners, covering their own local manufacturers, will no doubt do their whole duty, but they will do it more easily if they have the support of the people themselves in this important matter, which touches so nearly the health of every man, woman and child in the country and our national vitality in the future.

WALTER M. LOWNEY.

It is to be hoped that everyone with the public interest at heart will lend his aid to make the food law of his own state uniform with the national law and therefore with other state laws. Under the present laws of many states it will be easy to put adulterated goods on the market if sold within the boundaries of the state. The same goods which, under the national pure food law, would subject the maker to fine and imprisonment if sold across the border in another state, could be sold with impunity in the state where made.

There are many states having inadequate food laws. Legislatures have been known to be very accommodating in framing divorce laws and laws of incorporation for the benefit of outsiders and for the benefit at the same time of the revenues of their state. But it seems incredible that the voters of any state will permit their legislature to neglect food laws for the protection of the health and purses of their own citizens. And yet this is possible. And it is the duty of everyone to give time, thought and influence to prevent such neglect. Let us fight it out to a finish now and get complete protection everywhere from impure and dishonest foods.

She who provides for the table of a family should take pains to know food good from food evil. It should be part of her training as a housekeeper to understand the comparative value of proprietary food products and just where she cannot afford to economize at the expense of health. She should take the trouble to know whether she is getting her money's worth or whether in paying for one thing she is getting another; whether she is being defrauded by that form of adulteration which only harms the purse. In delegating to the manufacturer the preparation of food for her family, she should at least see to it that she delegates it to honest manufacturers only. It seems to me that the very rudiment of housekeeping is to know food.

Another important consideration is the manner in which food is protected on its way from the factory to the home. It is little short of disgusting to witness the display of food in public places, especially such food as is not cooked before eating. There has been a great improvement in this matter. Scores of articles of food are now sold largely in packages that used to be displayed in bulk, open to the doubtfully clean fingers and other contamination of the passer-by. There is no estimating the amount of disease that has been disseminated by this practice.

Look at the food, for instance, displayed in the department and other stores subject to the impalpable dust always in the atmosphere of such places. This dust, falling on sticky food, clings for good and goes into someone's stomach carrying with it whatever it has of infection. And in such crowded places there are many other causes too disgusting to mention why food should be contaminated from the crowds by the worst of diseases.

Buy your food and goodies in sealed packages. That eliminates this danger. Do what you can to educate those about you to get their food home clean. When public opinion is active on these vital points, we shall have accomplished something in aiding our friends the Christian Scientists to abolish disease.

PRODUCE MERCHANTS IN ANNUAL MEETING

Interesting Survey of the Trade by the New President, A. A. Ayer, Montreal —A Retrospect—Suggestions for Betterment of a Great Industry.

Wednesday of last week the adjourned meeting of the Montreal Produce Merchants Association was held in the Montreal Board of Trade. After routine business the officers for the year, all elected by acclamation, were announced. A. A. Ayer, head of the firm A. A. Ayer & Co., is the new president; Fred Fowler, vice-president; Isaac Hibbert,, Canadian manager for Willer & Riley, treasurer, and J. Stanley Cook, secretary. The executive committee is composed of: John H. Scott, John A. Gunn, Thos. H. Ryan, F. Monette and the arbitration committee consists of: P. W. McLagan, J. J. Dickey, J. J. Kirkpatrick, E. A. Brice and F. Dorion.

A. A. AYER, PRESIDENT.

Retiring President H. A. Hodgson thanked the members for their support during his term of office. He said that he had missed R. M. Ballantyne on the Council of the Board of Trade, where he thought the association should always have two representatives. The produce trade was an important one and influenced many other commercial lines. Mr. Hodgson urged the members to join the Board of Trade.

President Elect Ayer then took the chair and read a most interesting address. He said:

"I thank you for the honor you have done me in electing me to be your president, a leader of one of the most important bodies of merchants in Canada. I am afraid we do not realize our own importance, that we have been too modest, that we forget what is owing to the men who have exported the produce that has brought into Canada during the past twenty-five years more than five hundred millions of dollars of gold, and that this association now stands at the head of the body of men whose exports have brought into Canada during 1906 more than thirty millions of dollars. Our influence should be far-reaching—not only among farmers, but among merchants and all classes, and incidentally we should receive a greater monetary reward for our industry and the good we do in building up the country. As president, I would like to help you do that which would be practical, which would last, and which would be of permanent value to the trade and to the country.

"Naturally, one who has been 40 years in business comes to be reminiscent. I am reminded that the first leader of men the world had was 40 years traveling about; that he had a bad time of it; that he met all kinds of difficulties, and made many mistakes. That journey has served to teach many practical lessons to mankind. In a few weeks it will be forty years since, in the exact spot where this building stands, I first commenced business in my own name, and two years previously, with my own hands, I shipped some of the first Canadian cheese exported. Such length of years ought to cover experiences and lessons of some practical value to those now in trade. As far as success consists in accumulating wealth, there has not come to any house in Canada in the butter and cheese trade the millions of profit that those in other lines of business have made as a reward of industry. We have the satisfaction, however, of helping to build up Canada in what has been to the farmer our most important industry.

Cause of Failures.

"Will you allow me, for a few moments, to point out to you what in my opinion has been the cause of many failures, and some of the reasons for the present condition of our trade? Any attempt to make profit by consigning goods or selling c.i.f., subject to British inspection, or in any way placing goods beyond one's own control, can only in the long run result in losses and final failure. Leaving the price to be paid to the judgment of country buyers will, as a rule, result in dear prices, overbuying and losses. Goods well bought will be easily sold, but depending on selling to men who ask for your offers, but who, as a rule, will only buy from you when you are cheaper than others, will soon put you out of business.

"There seems to be a species of insanity or disease in this business (which I have not discovered in any other) which impels some buyers to try and run up the price on the other fellow, and the farmer is happy when he can bring about such a meeting between two who are thus afflicted. Pay a fair price, live and let live—you can make money when you help your neighbor to make some.

"There has been among farmers a rapid growth of cheese and butter boards, or combinations where the produce is sold by a kind of mock auction—viz., where the farmer gets the highest bids, and then sells or not, as he pleases—but which, like most auctions, creates an unhealthy and blind competition.

"There is no greater combination today in Canada than the butter and cheese combination of farmers, first in factories, and then on the boards. How to meet this condition so as to buy at a fair price is a vital question for our association.

ISAAC HIBBERT, TREASURER.

"It is unfortunate and unhealthy that men with little experience can easily become very large handlers, and even very large exporters of cheese and butter. Unfortunate and unhealthy, I say, for themselves and for us, because of the severe and sometimes disastrous results.

Too Much Credit.

It seems to me that the banks are largely responsible for this. For some unexplained reason the banks seem willing to give large credits to anyone handling butter and cheese. Possibly they are not aware that at most boards a week's credit is given, his produces unhealthy competition and overtrading, and, as in other lines, many a house comes to ruin because they received too much credit. This is a cash business, where practically no credit should be given. Perhaps a little plain speaking on this question may be for the good of all.

"There is no unanimity or common agreement among the buyers whereby the law of supply and demand governs the price, and whereby the farmer can obtain a fair price all the time. Not only have the general conditions under which buying is done grown into an unhealthy state, but selling short or selling futures is creeping into the trade; or, in other words, selling for forward shipment what is not bought and cannot be bought from the shrewd farmers. I am sorry to say many British houses encourage such sales, and that houses not strictly in our business are among the largest sinners. The year 1906 has brought disaster to all such transactions (and to some houses), so that, let us hope, it has received a death blow. There have been a number of failures on both sides of the ocean, and unless trading in 1907 is done on a different and sounder basis, the difficulties of the trade will increase. Let us not forget that we are not in a manufacturing business, where the article increases in value during the handling from the raw material to the finished product, nor are we selling to a vast number of retailers in small lots, whereby a good margin of profit can be obtained, but we are obliged to be content if we can obtain a profit of 1 per cent. on our turnover, and sometimes with much less, and many a time must take a loss.

"Doubtless you all say these things are true, but how can we overcome them? In some cases we can all agree, and so remedy by united action; but, in the buying and selling, let each one act on sound business principles. You lead, and others will follow. No one can stay long in business who undersells or overbuys.

Room for Improvement.

"There are many things which we can do, and to which we should give our immediate attention. There are many model butter and cheese factories in Canada, which are a credit to our country, but it is to be regretted that in many instances there is neglect. Much fault has been found with the boxes used for Canadian cheese. These boxes in many cases are poorly made, and are too large for the cheese. There are very few factories that cut down the boxes until the lid touches the cheese. A very large number of factories mark the cheese very indifferently, using a pencil instead of stenciling the weights. Fault is also found with wrong weights on the boxes. This shows great carelessness in the weighing. The loss of weights, owing to cheese being shipped too green, is a serious question. No doubt the condition of some of our creameries, and the lack of lime washing or painting, has much to do with mold on butter. Poor parchment and poor boxes depreciate the value of Canadian creamery on the British market. A vast number of our cheese and butter factories need better drainage, better buildings and more attention to cleanliness. The question of licensing makers, and of having a regulation as to the kind of buildings that should be used either for butter or cheese making is a live issue at the present time, and so is the appointment of an official referee and direct cable quotations.

Freight Rates.

"Then there is the great question of equalizing freight rates and having the right kind of railroad cars. I never could understand on what principle the railroads, in their own interest, paid the terminal charges for a through shipper, and asked the Montreal shipper to pay his own. Perhaps the railway commission can tell us. It takes between 300 and 400 cars per week to handle the cheese and butter coming to Montreal—a large enough amount to require serious attention.

C. F. ROLAND.

"I hope to have your support as we try to secure due consideration of these and other questions in which we have a common interest, and thereby promote unity among our members, and prove to our country the usefulness of the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association."

C. D. Cowles, representing St. Charles Condensing Co., St. Charles, Ill., and Ingersoll, was in Toronto this week. During his visit he called upon The Grocer. Mr. Cowles' only complaint of business was that "we can't fill orders."

JOINS THE McLAREN CO.

W. E. Bidwell has joined the agency staff of the MacLaren Cheese Co., and, under the direction of Mr. Marshall, who has charge of the firm's brokerage business, will look after the firm's business in nuts. The MacLaren Co. have been seeking for some time a good man for this branch of their work, and when they got next to Mr. Bidwell they just "froze onto him."

Mr. Bidwell is a tall, athletic young gentleman and entered the grocery business by the brokerage door. He got his training with Watt & Scott, and admittedly there's no better school. For the past couple of years he has been in business for himself. Mr. Bidwell ranks as a South African veteran, having gone with the 3rd Canadian contingent. He is a hockeyist and now carries a sprained wrist, got in a practice match with the Brokers' team. Mr. Bidwell has cast his lot with a firm whose marching orders are "strenuous" but he looks like one who would make good.

WINNIPEG'S INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER.

Charles F. Roland, the new Industrial Commissioner of Winnipeg, was in Toronto on January 16th, after a visit to his old home in St. Catharines. Mr. Roland, who was formerly in the trade newspaper publishing business, was appointed to his present position at the beginning of January by the Winnipeg Industrial and Development Bureau, an organization made up of representatives from the Board of Trade, Manufacturers' Association, Real Estate Exchange, Bankers' Association and Grain Exchange, as well as the City Council and Board of Control.

TAKE TEA FOR A CHILL.

English Physician's Advice for Maintaining Winter Health.

Dr. Andrew Wilson, writing in "The People," an English publication, on preserving health in winter, says:

"If we suffer chill we should at once endeavor to counteract its effects, and to this end we should employ means to restore the circulation to its natural state. Nothing is better for this purpose, I think, than drinking a large cup of tea; but it must be very hot, as hot indeed as you can bear to drink it. At the same time, if we get into a warm atmosphere we shall be the more likely to obtain reaction, to cause the blood-vessels to dilate and restore the balance of the circulation. In a more serious case, the sufferer should go to bed between the blankets, taking a hot bath previously, and then a Dover's powder of ten grains. These measures will produce profuse sweating, and subsequent chill must, of course, be guarded against by providing a change of night garments if necessary. If tea cannot be had, then whiskey and hot water should be taken, or rum and hot water; but the advantage of tea is that it serves to exert a special action in restoring the circulation, and its use does not entail any subsequent depression such as is liable to follow on the use of alcohol."

PRIZE HOLIDAY WINDOWS

In Canadian Grocer Competition—Two Awards go to the Pacific Province—Fine Bovril Display a Window Dresser.

The December window dressing competition award has been somewhat delayed because it was thought best to include in it all the holiday displays entered. We believe the entries are the best we have ever had and show, as compared with other years, a distinct advance in window dressing in Canada. The first and third prize winners are British Columbia grocers and the second is a Toronto man.

The winner of the first prize was Dixie H. Ross & Co., of Victoria, B.C. The window was dressed by H. O. Kirkham, one of the company's staff of 18 clerks, and it is something to be wondered at and admired.

The second prize winner is Geo. Rogers, College street, Toronto. His, too, is a window every grocer will admire. It is handsome, both inside and out, and a display that well deserves its award.

Nelson, B.C., claims the third award, and the winner was Robt. M. Hood & Co., whose trade title, "The Store of Quality," is splendidly borne out by the front they put on.

Some of the photographs sent in are ill adapted to their purpose. If photographers when taking a window could resist the temptation to get in the whole store front they would render you better service. It is quite possible that the photographer has stood between some of the competitors and an award.

BAIN & ADAMS' BOVRIL.

Bain & Adams, Hamilton, have one of the finest grocery stores in Canada. It is one of those stores of appetizing odors, that combination of aromas encountered only in excellently managed groceries where the best classes of the world's foodstuffs are assembled. It is a broad store with two wide windows. These windows are looked after by Mr. Bain himself and are among the best cared-for windows in Canada. Mr. Bain is not strong on competitions, but he took a hand in the recent Bovril event, and the accompanying illustration shows the result. We are not informed what the result was in effect upon the store's sales of Bovril. We would like to know. Such a window as this must make an impression upon every passerby who has his sight.

GERMAN BOY MAKING GOOD IN CANADA.

The attractiveness of German grocery windows is proverbial, but when The Grocer published the Ludella tea window of Whitehead & Huether, Walkerton, some weeks ago, it had no idea that it was praising something which was almost "Made in Germany." Through the genial grocery traveler, President John Wilson Charles, of the Snack Club, The Grocer has learned that the display was arranged by John Goos, a German, who has been in Canada only since 1901. Mr. Goos was born at Owschlag, in the province of Schleswig-Holstein, 29 years ago. He started in the grocery business in 1893, in the town of Eckernfoerde, and after working in various towns and cities, including Wesselburen, Kiel, Hamburg and Itzehoe, he came to Canada in June of 1901. In August he joined the staff of Whitehead & Huether, Walkerton, starting as storehouse boy. From this position he quickly worked up to his present standing of head clerk. When Mr. Goos came to Walkerton he was unable to speak English, but he has made good use of his opportunities. He may still say his prayers in the home tongue, but he can sell in English to beat several of a kind. As a window dresser he has a future. The Whitehead & Huether window published in The Grocer recently was something exceptional.

ONLY REMEDY FOR FROSTY WINDOWS.

T. J. McCammon, Moose Jaw, writes to The Grocer :—

"I have seen from time to time comments on how to keep the windows from frosting. I would like to say during my fifteen years' experience in dressing and looking after windows we never had such a time as we have h[illegible] Winter, due entirely to such severe weather. The thermometer has stood around from 20 below to 55 below all Winter, and in order to keep our windows free from frost had to put in an electric fan, which keeps the window, which is 20 feet long plate glass, entirely free from frost, and this is the only remedy."

THE IMPORTANCE OF DISPLAY.

It is just as necessary that the hardware merchant should dress up his window and put on a "front" as it is for the haberdasher or the dry goods dealer. There is money in the show window, and it rests with each dealer to get it out. "Put your best foot forward" in commercial life as you do in the social world.

Don't, above all things, make an attempt to make a display unless you intend to do it right. Don't bundle a confused mass of articles into your window and "let it go at that." Make it a show window and not a "holy show" window. If you think you haven't the time or you lack the knack of arranging the articles in an artistic manner, encourage one of your clerks to try and develop ability in this line. It will be money well invested. What so quickly engages the public eye as a tastefully arranged store window? It acts as a magnet which draws the elusive coin to your till.

An Attractive Hamilton Window.

LONDON TRAVELERS AND THEIR SOCIAL SIDE

The Travelers' Club of London is a social organization. London is also the headquarters of the Western Ontario Commercial Travelers' Association, which is business from the drop of the hat. but those members of the association who are members of the club, cast aside all business cares when they enter the club-rooms even from the drop of the hat on the club hat-rack. "Hang hats. Hang care," might be their thought. They have a large clubhouse on Richmond St., and have a good time there all the time. Sometimes they let their friends know what good fellows they are. They are not so very clannish. They can mingle some and when they undertake the part of hosts there is no lack of guests. Three weeks ago Al. Davis, who travels for the Carling Brewing & Malting Co., had in charge a social evening at the club, when refreshments were served and a delightful programme of music presented. Over two hundred attended. More recently the club entertained twice that number of guests and the event was pronounced to be the most successful social function of the season there. On this occasion a ball, such as the club gives annually, was held in the City Hall with the Masonic Temple used as an annex. All arrangements had been perfected to the slightest detail. The decorating of the hall was done by Messsrs. A. Screaton & Co., and they are not likely to suffer any loss of business in consequence of credit being given where credit is due. Satisfactory music was supplied by an orchestra of twelve pieces under the direction of Tony Cortese and I do not know the name of the caterer who had charge of the midnight supper in the banqueting hall of the Masonic Temple, but he deserves credit, too. As for the work of the various committees who had charge of the affair it may have been hard or it may have been easy, but the result entitles them to an increase in popularity.

Mr. Fred S. Fisher was the honorary chairman, while Mr. H. W. Lind was the secretary. The conveners of the various committees were:

Finance—J. S. Townsend.
Reception—J. M. Ferguson.
Decoration—A. Tillmann.
Accommodation and halls—S. F. Glass.
Refreshment—J. A. Carling.
Printing—H. C. McBride.

H. N. Lind — G. H. Detlor, 2nd Vice-President — C. M. McGuire, President — J. S. Townsend, 1st Vice-President

J. J. Harkness — A. H. Brener — H. E. Buttrey — F. Fisher, Treasurer

Music and programme—J. J. Harkness.

The lady patronesses were: Mrs. Adam Beck, Mrs. Jeffrey Hale, Mrs. Charles S. Hyman, Mrs. H. W. Lind, Mrs. Arthur Little, Mrs. R. C. Macfie, Mrs. H. C. McBride, Mrs. C. W. McGuire, Mrs. Edwin Paull, Mrs. E. B. Smith, Mrs. E. R. C. Struthers, and Mrs. A. Tillmann.

The stewards were: James A. Angus. R. Arkell, Dr. A. V. Becher, J. M. Ferguson, George S. Gibbons, A. O. Graydon, A. F. Kerrigan, F. J. Lind, A. M. Masuret, C. Mathewson. A. H. Moran, Dr. A. Scott, W. Wright, A. Zimmerman.

Three-fourths of the officers of the Travelers' Club of London are Mystic Shriners, members of Rameses Temple. They are: H. E. Buttrey, Donald Ferguson, C. W. McGuire, Geo. Detlor, J. J. Harkness, A. H. Brener, L. C. Johnston, H. W. Lind and T. W. Edwards.

At the adjourned annual meeting of the Travelers' Club of London, Jan. 12, Vice-president J. S. Townsend was presented with a set of silverware and cutlery of 51 pieces as a token of the club's regard for him.

Donald Ferguson, manager of the Ferguson Lumber Company and president of the Maple Leaf Automobile & Electric Company, was for three years a director of the Western Ontario Commercial Travelers' Association. He is an ardent horseman and has for several years been prominent in promoting the interests of the London Turf Association.

A PROSPEROUS BUSINESS.

The sixth annual meeting of E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd., was held in the company's offices, corner King and Duncan streets, Toronto, on Thursday morning, January 17th. Out of three thousand shares there were represented in person and by proxy 2,457 shares. The stockholders present were thoroughly satisfied with the excellent showing made for the year just ended. The increase in sales was very large and their unique record of completing another year's business without any losses in the way of bad debts was again maintained. Owing to the fact that the large and up-to-date factory owned and occupied by this company is already too small for the business, building operations will be commenced before long and considerable extra space added. The following board of directors were elected, viz., Geo. H. Macfarlane, Wm. J. Underwood, Wm. S. Champ, Jos. R. Kirkpatrick and Wm. Dobie. Messrs. Hoskins and Westervelt will continue for another year as auditors.

After luncheon a meeting of the board of directors was held, at which the following officers for 1907 were elected, viz., Wm. Dobie, president; Geo. H. Macfarlane, assistant general manager; Jos. R. Kirkpatrick, treasurer; Geo. Hepburn, secretary.

QUEBEC GUILD MEETING.

Thursday of last week the Wholesale Grocers' Guild of the Province of Quebec, held a meeting in the Board of Trade, Montreal, President L. E. Geoffrion presiding. After the usual routine business, officers were elected as follows: President, Aug. Carriere, Que-Trade, Montreal, President L. E. Geoff-Montreal; 2nd vice-president, J. R. Gardner, Ottawa; sec.-treas., J. Stanley Cook, Montreal. The price committee: Albert Hebert, chairman; Arch. Miller, A. Allard. The delegates in attendance were: Aug. Carriere, Arch. Miller and A. Turcotte, Quebec; Albert Hebert, Alex. Orsali, S. J. Carter, L. O. Demers and Jos. Ethier, Montreal.

S. S. Arnold, one of the pioneer western travelers, leaves for the west this week in the interest of the Colonial Fluid Beef Co., Montreal. This will be Mr. Arnold's seventy-seventh trip through the west to the Pacific Coast.

COBALT—A DISEASE.

The United States Consul in the Transvaal in a report to the Department of Trade and Commerce, Washington, says: "Stock speculation on the part of everybody and wild cat gold and diamond mines have taken away money from everything save the barest necessities and in many instances reduced men to bankruptcy and poverty who two years ago counted their sterling in many thousands." Canada has a similar trouble. The gambling disease seems latent in the blood everywhere and a year or two hence many men will be cursing Cobalt as the cause of their troubles. It isn't the man who can count his sterling by thousands one need worry about; their case is sad, but they are comparatively few. The men to be pitied are the hundreds and thousands whose small savings or business go the way of speculation. Many a good business has been consumed by the disease and families in comparative independence because of a paying business are swept into the street. Of course here and there someone starts with a few hundred dollars and makes a fortune; but look at the losses that go to make his gains.

ORGANIZE.

Are the retail grocers of Canada as a body satisfied with the present conditions of their branch of the food stuff trade? Ninety-five per cent. of them are not. That doesn't mean they are soreheads or are disgruntled. It means they are progressive. It means they see where improvements can be made and have enough pride in their business and go in them to want to lift it to a higher level. Now how should they go about putting their ambition or dissatisfaction or whatever you have a mind to call it, into effect? The answer is plain as poster type:

ORGANIZE

We believe the trade throughout Canada is just waiting for some existing grocers' association to take the initiative and issue a call for a convention. Such a call would not bring together all the grocers from the east and the west and the north and the south. But such a call would quickly result in the organization of a provincial body, to be followed by similar results in all the other provinces, and upon that foundation would grow a national association that would be a power for good in furthering the rightful interests of the foodstuff trade and that is the interest of the whole country this day.

DATING CANNED GOODS.

Should canned goods be dated? We believe this question should be referred to the consumers. That means we think it should be answered with a view to the consumer's best interest. What do canned goods, canned fruits, and vegetables mean to the consuming public? They mean fresh vegetables and preserved fruits for eleven months in the year. We need not waste space here to discuss the dietetic importance of fruits and vegetables from the point of health. Everybody understands that. But people often overlook the importance of the commonest things and it is well to just draw attention to the fact that for eleven months out of twelve the tin can must stand sponsor for the supply of such vegetables as tomatoes, peas, and corn, and for vast quantities of fruit.

It looks as if to date the cans would seriously interfere with the supply of canned goods. If goods had to be discarded as soon as the next pack was on the market packers would be careful to underpack rather than overpack. That would mean almost constant shortages and consequent high prices and poorer classes would be forced to cut out much of the vegetable diet so essential to health.

On the other hand what would the public gain? The only possible gain would be in the quality of the goods, their wholesomeness. The evidence strongly bears out the claim that time does not affect the quality of goods properly packed. By dating, therefore, the consumer stands to lose much and gain nothing.

Now, how about the dealer? That question is easy. Grower, canner, wholesaler and retailer stand to lose a whole lot by dating the cans.

Mr. Minister of Agriculture: it is up to you!

EXHIBITION IN MONTREAL.

"Do the Citizens Want an Annual Exhibition Held in Montreal?" is the title of a booklet issued by the Montreal Business Men's League, which was incorporated and established six years ago—one of its objects being to advertise and bring people to Montreal.

An exhibition would no doubt attract a large number of visitors to the city and prove of great material advantage to the citizens. The position of Montreal is more advantageous than that of almost any city in Canada, for the bringing in of visitors from a distance. The Province of Quebec has a distinct link with the densely populated Eastern States. Thousands of the residents of that part of the United States would avail themselves of the incentive offered of visiting Canada upon such an occasion. Interest in the country, relatives and friends in Canada, cheap railway fares and former residence here, would all combine to bring to Montreal a vast number of well-to-do people, whose "ready-spending" characteristics would greatly swell the profits of merchants, hotels, boarding houses, etc. People go to the Toronto exhibition from all over America. Why not Montreal?

An exhibition in Montreal would not alone bring in a direct and important new revenue to the citizens in every conceivable way, but would serve to advertise the city abroad. Toronto exhibition has made that city widely known in all parts of the world, and has, in a great extent, advertised Canada as a progressive country.

Advertising pays, but more advertising pays better. If the Toronto exhibition helps to advertise the country in any way, it's only reasonable to suppose that an exhibition in Montreal would help along the good work the Toronto business men are already doing.

There is no part of the Dominion in which exhibitions in the agricultural districts are more successful, or better attended by the community in general, throughout the province, than in Quebec and it's up to Montreal to organize such an exhibition, to finance and manage it as a public enterprise for the benefit of the city, and of the province and Dominion at large.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Canned Goods—New prices effective.

Fish—Revised.

Dried Fruits—Firm.

Montreal, January 24, 1907.

Further orders received by the wholesale trade carry out what The Grocer said two weeks ago to the effect that after-holiday trade would be good. The state of trade at the present time is very healthy. Orders are of good size and numerous enough, and collections are satisfactory. The weather has been against the travelers more or less, it has been so changeable, but otherwise circumstances have combined for good business. New list prices of the canners are now effective. Grocers requiring new goods must pay the higher prices. Sugar is steady at last week's prices. There is a fair trade being transacted in this line. Molasses is quiet, but good orders are being taken for syrups. Teas are very firm. The currant market is by no means slack. Stocks are small and prices well maintained. Raisins are in the same position. Stocks in California are small, very considerably below those held at the same time last year. Nuts are strong. Evaporated apples continue interesting. Business in maple goods is fair. Beans are selling well at prices quoted.

CANNED GOODS — On Monday the new list prices issued by the canners were made official by the wholesale trade. Now on, any sales made will be at the advanced figures. It was not thought a week ago that this would come to pass, but it has. The grocer who bought his supply early in the season will not be affected. It is he who bought lightly, or late, who will suffer. The new prices will not affect the former for two months at least, as Fall stocks will last that time under ordinary circumstances. Speaking of the situation in tomatoes, one wholesaler in Montreal expressed it as his opinion that stocks were plenty large enough to take care of all business in this line. He thought that the demand which was so noticeable in December was but a temporary one, and that the fright some had at that time was quite unnecessary. There will be no trouble in filling orders up to the last moment. In fact, a drop in prices just before the new pack would not surprise him.

SUGAR—From present indications there will be no change in prices in the near future. Conditions may change and necessitate a jump or a fall in quotations, but at the moment the raw market is in good condition, and everything tends toward steady prices. Trade is fair.

TEAS—Blacks continue very strong and high in price. Dealers are doing a good business considering the season. Japan teas on the whole hold firm. The lower grades are going to be higher from present indications. Many wholesale houses were fortunate to buy at fairly low prices, and are now letting their customers have lower grades at prices at which these teas could not be purchased to-day. Such stocks are rapidly decreasing, and once they are gone, prices will shoot upwards.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—The currant market is practically bare of stocks, and is firm in tone. There is not likely to be any decline in prices. On the contrary, an advance would be more in line with the present atate of the market. The feeling is that raisins will go higher. Stocks on the coasts are exceedingly small—away below what they were last year. Some estimate the present holdings at twelve hundred tons, others say more, others less. Certain it is; stocks are limited. There is some speculation going on in New York for next Fall's crop, even at this early strong. As a rule they drop after the holidays, but this season, contrary to expectations, prices have advanced.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Slightly firmer.

All lines firm.

Toronto, Jan. 24, 1907.

Prices remain firm in nearly all lines. Business is good and collections are not complained of. Canned goods continue the feature of the market, but there is no change in the situation. The new prices are not exacted, but for a few fruits they are exceeded. For instance, some houses are holding their peaches at $2, and blueberries are also firmly held. The American sugar market is showing a firmer tendency, but no one is prepared to guess in which direction the next move will be. Dried fruits continue firm, but there is some shading of prices for currants. It may, however, be a matter of quality. At any rate there is no indication of an easier tone in the primary market. What news there is of Valencias from abroad is of an advance. Catsups are advanced.

CANNED GOODS—Goods are still obtainable at old prices except a few fruits which are above the canners' list. Some, however, are asking $2 for peaches, and blueberries are scarce. The feeling generally is very firm. Tomatoes are expected to go higher, but momentarily interest is not so keen. Last week Golden Wax and Refugees, 2s, were quoted by an error at 95½ to 90. The list price is 85 to 87½.

SUGAR—Nothing unusual has happened to change the situation within the week, but there is a firmer tone to things. Offerings early in the week were on a basis of 3.51½c., duty paid, New York, for centrifugals 96 degrees. Buyers were not prepared to give more than 3.48½c. The fact, however, that the parity between raw and refined is $1.12, and a year ago was 72½c. makes some dealers think there is room for a further decline. A year ago, too, refined sugar was 4.10c. here and now it is 4.30c. The world's visible supply, however, shows a decrease of 190,000 tons, from 3,910,508 tons to 3,720,413 tons.

At the close of last week Willett & Gray, New York, said: "Cuban sugars are on a very low level as compared with the parity of beet sugars (say .36c. per lb- below). but there is no indication of any improvement with such heavy offerings as naturally come with the crop being made so rapidly and this pressure to sell must continue for some time. Under the low parity with Europe, some sales were admissible to the U.K. for shipment direct of Cuba molasses sugar, basis 88, netting the shippers a full 1-8c. per lb. more than New York value. Generally it is thought that pressure to sell may be removed within another month and prices recover somewhat. European markets have not been influenced by Cuba, the beet quotations at the close being 8s. 9¾d., the same as at the beginning, but standing for several days at 8s. 11¼d. on a strong trade demand, as cabled to us from London. Afterwards Mr. F. O. Licht increased beet crop slightly and a small downward fluctuation followed."

TEA—Musson & Son received a cable from Colombo Wednesday stating in regard to medium goods that there was no easier tendency in the market. London advices indicate an easier tone for the higher grades. Consumption of tea in England during 1906 was a record. The average per head of population has risen to 6.18 lbs., as against 5.99 in 1905, and 5.99 in 1904. Re-exports of Indian and Ceylon tea were also a record, while the stock of all tea in the country has been reduced to 129,549,000 lbs., against 134,263,000 lbs. Thompson's tea circular, London, says: "The latest mail advices from India make it apparent that the total crop will prove to be heavier than was at one time expected, and considerably in excess of any hitherto secured. As matters stand, this is distinctly a cause for satisfaction to producers, for the increase has been mainly due to improved methods of cultivation, and not to a lower standard of quality, while the abundant supplies of good useful tea have forced consumption in countries, such as Russia, where a firm hold on popular favor was the great desideratum." Contrary to expectations, consumption of tea in ussia has greatly increased. England's tea exports to Russia increased last year eight million pounds and the total consumption increased 15 million pounds.

N. B. MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 19.

Business continues rather quiet, but that is expected. In markets there is nothing of particular importance. In staples lines, pork products and dried fruit are high. Flour and sugar tend easy. There are few lines, however, that can be called cheap. Rice for later shipment is now offered at rather lower than present figures. Cream of tartar is rather higher and firmly held. In spices, pepper and ginger firm, Jamaica ginger continues high. Cloves are high. Nutmegs are still cheap. Seeds have attention, from the wholesale grocer, rather earlier than usual. Timothy, particularly Canadian, quite light and firmly held. Red clovers are very high. Mammoths firmly held. Alsikes are not so high nor are they as firmly held as the others.

OIL—In burning oil sales still active. Values unchanged. Lubricating oils, except as regards future business, have little attention. Paint oils, very firmly held. Both linseeds and turpentine rather higher. Cod oil has little attention. The season has been quiet.

SALT—A few small shipments of Liverpool coarse salt are being received via the Winter port steamers. Prices firm at slightly higher figures. Very little Liverpool fine salt received, prices are too near Canadian. Sales quiet.

CANNED GOODS—Vegetables, particularly corn and tomatoes, firmly held. Fair stocks. In fruits, stock light and prices very firmly held. Gallon apples have shown a sharp advance. Meats, unchanged; little sale at this season. Oysters, scarce and high. Lobsters are extreme. Salmon, unchanged. In domestic fish market is quiet.

GREEN FRUIT—A fair business. Best apples bring full figures. Oranges are cheaper, particularly Valencias. Fine Jamaicas offered. In California navels, quite full prices. In lemons, price rather firmer; some direct shipments now here. Malaga grapes still offered.

DRIED FRUIT—Two cars carton prunes were received last week. These package goods are proving very popular. The price is but slightly higher than bulk goods. Raisins firm at the high figures. Bulk raisins of all kinds scarce. Few evaporated peaches or apricots held, prices are high. Dates a fair sale; package goods freely offered. Figs and peels quiet. Evaporated apples high and firmly held. Very few dried apples seen. Onions continue low.

SUGAR—No change since the decline last reported. There is just a fairly active demand.

MOLASSES—Sales for the year have been largely confined to fancy Barbadoes, stock of which is light and firmly held. Choice Barbadoes quite freely offered. Stock of Porto Rico not large.

FISH—Frozen herring scarce and high. Fresh cod and haddock rather lower. Some western salmon and halibut still offered. In dry fish, situation here is rather dull. Smoked herring low. In pickled herring, while outside markets are reported rather firmer, business here very quiet. Finnan haddies rather easier.

FLOUR, MEAL AND SEEDS—Flour unchanged since the decline last reported. Feed continues high. While oatmeal is firmer, price here unchanged. Cornmeal rather easier. Beans are firmer, particularly yellow eyes. In seeds, red clovers and timothy rather higher. Alsike quite freely offered.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS

Halifax, Jan. 22, 1907.

The principal changes in the grocery markets since last report are an advance in the price of potatoes, and a drop of ten cents in sugar. The demand for potatoes is very heavy, due principally to the small stocks laid in by the householders, and the jobbers who find their holdings being depleted are putting up the price. The stocks of beans held here are very light and the price is firm. Dealers here still have difficulty in securing sufficient quantities to supply their customers. There is a fairly good demand for canned goods. Jobbers say that tomatoes are scarce and higher prices are looked for. Lemons and oranges are both very low. The consumption of the latter is heavy, due chiefly to the price, which is within reach of all. Jamaicas, repacked, are quoted at five dollars per barrel.

APPLES—There is now a good foreign demand for apples, and those who hold good stock can find ready purchasers at high figures. The Annapolis valley growers were somewhat disappointed at the small returns for early fruit shipped to the British market. The fruit was marketed in poor condition and ripened so quickly that it had to be disposed of at low prices. There are still good stocks held in some sections of the valley, and the owners expect to realize well on them. The steamer Almeriana, which sailed from here last week, took 17,000 barrels. The shipments of apples this season up to the present time total about 170,000 barrels.

FISH—The announcement of Government for fish shipments to the Quebec and Ontario markets is well received here. There are always available here good supplies of fresh fish, and it is expected that by the new arrangements a portion of the weekly heavy shipments of live lobsters to the American markets will now find their way to the big Canadian centres. It will also have a probable tendency toward competition between the Canadian and American markets.

BUTTER AND EGGS—The market shows very little change. The demand for butter is a little easier, but the price is unchanged. The receipts of local made butter are very small, and as the weather conditions are very unfavorable, it is not expected that there will be any improvement for some time. Creamery prints are quoted at 25 cents, and solids ar 27 cents. Dairy rolls are quoted at 24 to 25 cents, and tubs at 22 to 23 cents. There is not much doing in eggs, fresh laid stock being scarce. Case eggs are quoted at 26 to 28 cents. The cheese market is firmer and the demand good.

CANADIAN BACON'S OPPORTUNITY

Shortage of Hogs in Great Britain—Report of Canadian Agent.

Writing of the hog situation in Great Britain, P. B. Ball, C.C.A. at Birmingham, says :—

According to the returns of the Board of Agriculture there is a striking decline in the production of pigs in Great Britain. I have it from an authoritative source that at the annual meeting of a large firm in Birmingham this week handling pork, a loss of £540 was announced on the year's working, due entirely to the high price of hogs which had been dearer than at any period during the last sixteen years. They had killed 870 pigs less than last year, and yet they had cost £7,500 more.

It was pointed out that there were 100,000 pigs less in England, Scotland and Wales than there were twelve months ago, and although Ireland showed an increase of 80,000, there was a shortage of 20,000 in the country.

It was also stated that the company in 1903-4 killed 18,434 pigs, which cost £77,500; in 1904-5, 16,330 pigs costing £74,719, and last year 15,462 pigs costing £81,863.

As Canadian bacon is now so favorably received in this country, there should be an excellent opportunity for increased pig raising and bacon curing in Canada. An even greater shortage is anticipated in the future, and Canadians should make a point of concentrating their energies on the markets of Great Britain.

MONEY IN SPECIALTIES.

"It is a far cry from the grocer fifteen years ago to the one of to-day. The former depended largely on staples for his trade and looked askance at the introduction of each new line. His business consisted principally of selling people what they had to have. The up-to-date grocer, on the other hand, treats staples largely as a secondary consideration. The profit on them has been continually decreasing. He realizes, of course, that he must carry them—even feature them; but he also realizes that his lines of specialties are expected to, and do, pay a profit for themselves and one for the sugar and other things that he has to give away."

This is from an advertising circular and it's good enough to hand around. A little while ago a grocer who had done business for years on a leading street in Toronto opened a branch in a residential section. He was surprised at the number of articles he found frequent call for that he never thought of selling at the old store. They were goods on which there was a large profit, too. The specialties in the foodstuff field to-day are almost countless. The grocer who makes judicious selection of them and pushes trade in those he selects is the man who is going to make money.

James McCormack has returned to Montreal from a few days in local provincial points.

PURE FOOD PROBLEMS UNDER NEW U. S. LAW

(From an address by Dr. H. W. Wiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry.)

The United States' new national Pure Food Law came into effect on Jan. 1. Most of the states have their own food regulations and naturally there is now a good deal of confusion. The national law is based upon the national control of interstate commerce and does not affect food that is consumed within the state in which it is manufactured. The food manufacturers, however, whose trade is confined wholly to the state in which they are situated are an insignificant factor in the food stuff trade of the country.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, Washington, and the leading food expert in the Republic, last week addressed a meeting of the American Chemical Society on the Pure Food Law. He is the chief executive officer for enforcing the new law. He said in part:

"Qustions of very great importance in connection with this work are to be decided by the Secretary of Agriculture in order that the inspection service may become effective. Upon him rests the burden of deciding first of all as to the wholesomeness or unwholesomeness of added substances, his decisions, of course, being always subject to repeal by the courts. It is evident, however, that no action could be taken in any case unless the secretary should come to some decision in that particular case. The decisions which the secretary reaches in these matters will be made public and published as food inspection decisions. Already nine of these decisions have been issued and others will follow from time to time. These decisions state simply the attitude of the secretary in these matters and indicate to the manufacturers and dealers what he regards as infractions of the law, both as to adulteration and misbranding. When these decisions are officially published, if they are neglected by the manufacturer and jobber it is a clear indication that it is not their intention to construe the law as it is construed by the secretary.

"This, then, will bring before the courts a clear case which will be the subject of prosecution and decision. The secretary has made it clear in his utterances that the law is to be executed in a spirit of fairness and toleration. All manufacturers and dealers who are earnestly trying to obey the law will be encouraged in every possible way so that their efforts may be successful.

Methods of Manufacture Must Be Changed.

"It will be necessary, without doubt, that many long established methods of manufacture and preparation be changed, but it is hoped that these changes may be made in such a way as not to interfere in any unnecessary degree with trade.

"Perhaps the most important question which will be decided by the secretary is that of preservatives and colors. In the case of preservatives under the meat law, which is practically the same as the food law, the secretary has already made his decision, and you are familiar therewith. It is to the effect that no preservatives shall be used in meat except the ordinary condimental preservatives, such as salt, sugar, vinegar, wood smoke, condiments, and, pending further investigations, saltpeter. It is a question, however, whether saltpeter is really a preservative. The weight of the testimony which has been secured is to the effect that it is used as a coloring agent, or as a preserver of color, and not as a preservative. It does not seem logical to suppose that the decision under the food law can be radically different from that under the meat law, and therefore it is only reasonable to suppose that the ultimate purpose of the law, as construed by the Secretary of Agriculture, is to exclude from food products the preservatives which are excluded from meat products.

"Among the most important of these is sulphurous acid in the form of fumes of burning sulphur applied during the process of preparation of certain food products. Among these the most important are molasses, evaporated fruits and wines. In the cases of molasses it is a very general custom to sulphur the juices from the canes, and a portion of this sulphur enters the molasses. In the case of evaporated fruits it is quite a general custom to submit the freshly prepared fruits to the fumes of burning sulphur before evaporation. In the case of wines, it is almost the universal custom to burn sulphur in the barrels or casks in which the wine is stored. These processes introduce into the food products greater or less quantities of sulphurous acid, free or combined.

"The investigations of the Department of Agriculture—and these are supported by the investigations of many other experts—show the injurious effects of sulphurous acid upon health. Hence, under the law sulphurous acid may finally be excluded from foods. It is only fair, however, to the trade and to the methods of manufacture, that due time be given to eliminate these injurious bodies, and especially that some toleration of them should be permitted as in the case of wines where the manufacture has been begun three, four or five years before the law was passed.

Elimination of Harmful Preservatives.

"Under the appropriation act the Secretary of Agriculture has authority to prescribe rules and regulations for the use of preservatives, and under this authority he may permit the use of some of these objectionable substances for a time which is deemed necessary to secure their complete elimination. In doing this, however, it is very probable that he will require that the name and the quantity of the preservative employed shall be plainly stated upon each of the labels. This is a concession which the manufacturer ought cheerfully to grant, when he considers that the secretary is dealing so leniently with him in permitting the continued use of a substance which apparently is deleterious to health pending the investigations of methods to eliminate it completely.

"It is not to be inferred from the above outline that the action cited has been actually taken by the secretary. I am only giving my own view of what will probably be recommended to the secretary and which, it is hoped, may receive his favorable consideration."

WHEN CANNERS GET TOGETHER.

Big Convention in Buffalo Feb. 11 to 16 —What Will be on Top.

From Feb. 11 to 16, Buffalo will be the hub of the canning and packing industry of America. It will be the rim, spokes, tire, washer, everything for within those dates will be held the annual convention of the National Canners' Association. The headquarters will be the Iroquois Hotel, and the machinery exhibition will be held in the State Armoury building. With the Pure Food Law just got going this will be a very important meeting for the canned goods trade and the machinery men will be more than ever in evidence. Here's what's going to be doing:

Business—Pure Food Law instructions. Uniform guaranty. Discount 2 per cent. instead of 1½ per cent. Uniform sizes of cans in all sections. Committee to investigate all charges against canned goods. Mutual insurance.

Machinery exhibit—Every mechanical device used. A number of new machines. Supplies of all kinds. A complete cannery in operation. All machinery working.

Entertainments — Lavish entertainments every evening by the various associations, and by different companies and firms.

BURMA RICE CROP PROSPECTS.

Wm. H. Michael, U. S. Consul General at Calcutta, writing in Consular Reports, quotes from the latest summary of the rice crop prospects issued by the director of land records for Burma that the state of the standing crops and the prospects of the harvest are generally favorable. The Burma rice fields embrace nearly 10 per cent. of the total area under rice in British India, and amount to 6,966,215 acres, which is an increase of 252,833 acres over last year. The total number of acres destroyed by floods during September and October was 181,556, and the number left fallow was 543,096 acres. On the whole, the prospects are good for an average yield in Burma.

BUSINESS MEN IN MUNICIPAL LIFE

No. 9

Joseph T. Joyce, mayor last year of the progressive and up-to-date town of Owen Sound, was born in Churchville, Toronto township, 42 years ago, and started his business life by entering as a lad the general store of Gooderham & Worts, at Meadowville. While in their employ he became thoroughly conversant with the general business in its multitudinous details. From there he went to Brampton, and later to Toronto. His business tact and ability becoming known to the trade, it attracted the attention of Mr. Good, of Chatsworth, who secured the young man, and Mr. Joyce remained in that village for about four years, managing Mr. Good's general store, grain and produce business. He came to Owen Sound in 1896 as a member of the C.P.R. staff, and while in their employ conceived and launched the firm of Joyce, Arms & Price. Withdrawing from that firm shortly afterwards he started business for himself and carried it on with marked success. While conducting this business he was induced by his many friends to enter the lists for municipal honors and was returned at the head of the poll. His first year's record as councillor has to its credit the settlement in a very satisfactory manner of some touchy points in connection with the work of the river harbor and railways committee, of which he was chairman. The second year he was made chairman of the police department, and of the committee for reorganizing the police force. The third year he was made chairman of the finance committee, and the efficient manner in which he discharged his duties brought him prominently before the electors to fill the important office of mayor, to which he was elected by a large majority last year. His munic'pal career has been somewhat unique in this respect, as it is an honor that has seldom fallen to the lot of any man in so short a period of public service.

JOSEPH T. JOYCE

A few months ago Mr. Joyce retired from business and contemplates re-entering it again in the west. A good test of a business man is his standing with the travelers. If the travelers like him and at the same time admire and respect him—well, he'll wear, that's all. No man in the north country stood better with the travelers than did Mr. Joyce. And it wasn't on account of any capacity for riotous living. That's gone out of fashion among traveling men; and anyway Mr. Joyce is a thorough paced temperance man, and was elected mayor to enforce the local option law. But the merchant who can use the salesman right has gone a long way towards success in business. A little thing came recently under the notice of The Grocer that illustrates Mr. Joyce's relations with his friends of the road. J. W. Charles, of the H. P. Eckardt & Co., received lately from Mr. Joyce a very handsome locket and this note :

"Upon retiring from business and the more strenuous life for a time at least, I feel that I cannot do so without expressing in some slight degree my appreciation of your abilities and many fine qualities as a man, as a business man, and as a personal friend. Our associations have been of the most pleasant and I trust of the profitable and enduring nature.

"I respectfully ask you to accept this charm as a slight token of the esteem in which I regard you and trust that it may remind you of a friendship which is much prized by myself."

This just shows the spirit of the man and it's the kind that's always on the square.

SHORT WEIGHT CHEESE AND THE ENGLISH TRADE.

Willer & Riley, large cheese importers of Manchester, have written to Dominion Dairy Commissioner J. A. Ruddick regarding the shortage of weight in cheese from Canada. They say :

"This year we have had to complain many times to our own people in King Street, Montreal, and to several other shippers from whom we have purchased cheese, with respect to the great difference of average loss between the invoice and the average loss when we receive the goods.

"Of course, the usual custom has been, up to lately, to claim for all over the 1 per cent. difference, but, owing to an arrangement with your government and the shippers in Montreal with regard to the official weigher, we can get no redress whatever now, as they hide behind the excuse that these goods were averaged by the government, and therefore they have nothing further to do with them after you have inspected same.

"Now this is all very well from the shippers' point of view, and we give you a few particulars, which show the great difficulties that we, along with many others on this side, have had to contend with this year.

"On September 7, 1906, we purchased, through our own Montreal house, 498 boxes of Canadian cheese. These were shipped per S.S. Manchester Trader to Manchester, and arrived here on the 20th, and averaged on the 22nd, and we found a difference of 492 pound between the average loss allowed and the actual loss.

"Again on September 27, we purchased 267 boxes, which were shipped per S.S. Manchester Commerce, and which arrived here on October 5, and were averaged on the 6th, showing a total difference of 230 pounds.

"Also on October 27, 285 boxes to Liverpool per S.S. Dominion, which arrived on the 7th instant, and were averaged on the 9th instant, and showed a difference of 228 pounds.

"These are only three instances of many that we could point out, which have actually put on the market value of these goods 9d. per cwt. on the invoiced price. It is a very serious matter to us, and one which should have immediate attention. Of course this year the factory men have been influenced by the high prices ruling all through the season, and it has been a great temptation to them to forward their goods out of the factory in a green state, and some of the cheese we have received have been spoilt, owing to being shipped in such a tender state ; and being placed in the chill rooms on some of the boats, it has completely spoilt their character and taste.

"We believe that owing to the short time the cheese have been allowed to mature on the shelves, and the average being taken so near to the date of the make, has been the cause of this great loss, which, unfortunately, falls on the people on this side. It is important that all the factories should keep their goods at least for ten days before putting them on the market. We know that goods have left the factory boxed and shipped aboard the steamer in four days from the time of being made, which is not conducive to creating a good impression with the consumer of your produce."

GRAIN MEN ELECT OFFICERS.

At the annual meeting of the grain section of the Toronto Board of Trade on Jan. 17, the following were elected officers and members of committees for 1907:

Chairman, C. W. Band; Vice-Chairman, A. V. Pearce; Secretary-Treasurer, F. G. Morley.

Executive—John Carrick, A. Cavanagh, L. H. Clarke, J. L. Fisher, E. Hannah, F. W. Hay, J. L. Love, W. D. Matthews, D. Plewes, D. M. Spink, C. B. Watts.

Complaint committee—C. W. Band. D. O. Ellis, C. Goode, S. McNairn, Hedley Shaw.

Market report committee—C. W. Band, John Carrick, E. J. Hannah, D. Plewes, W. Stark.

Membership committee—D. O. Ellis. J. L. Fisher, George Goldie, C. Goode, J. N. Hay, E. J. Hannah.

Collector—J. L. Fisher.

Elzear Turcotte, one of Quebec's most progressive retailers, spent a few days in Montreal lately. Mr. Turcotte has a fine store, and is always on the lookout for new ideas. His chief object in visiting Montreal was to look around the retail stores of that city in search of possible modern appliance in use, by using which he could improve his own store.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

KINGSTON.

Lew Glover, of the Pure Gold Co., is around on his regular trip, and a more esteemed and popular traveler never gripped a grip. He firmly believes there are no goods equal to Pure Gold goods. He says "Jellies come and jellies go, but Pure Gold goes on forever," and he gives your hand a squeeze to emphasize the fact.

The loose-leaf ledger system is being introduced in many stores here, and has many good qualities, one of which is that customers coming in on busy days wanting their accounts can get them in a moment, and it does away with daily posting—once a month does the work, and any accounts paid within the month don't need posting at all.

The permanent advertising in The Canadian Grocer of the four Canadian concerns is to blame for so many merchants writing for particulars.

Wholesalers and manufacturers who want trade should advertise in The Grocer. A traveler will say "Well, good-by; I will see you again in six weeks." Out of sight, out of mind. Not so with The Canadian Grocer. It calls on thousands of retailers every week, and not without getting good large orders, too. If a wholesaler takes his ad. out, the retailers think he has gone out of business.

W. G. Craig, wholesale grocer, and secretary of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, has again been elected alderman, and that without canvassing. The citizens recognize in him a man of too valuable qualities not to re-elect.

Every traveler claims there is need for a large hotel in Kingston. They say there is the biggest opening for a good hotel here of any place in Canada. Come along, capitalists. There is the prettiest site on the St. Lawrence for you, backed up by the best park in the Dominion. Come quick. $100.000 will do it. Kingston will put up half.

And now the grocers are busy taking stock, and anxious as the little boys on Xmas night to see what there is in it. Some, no doubt, will find they have made mistakes, but this is their chance to find the undiscovered leak.

Mr. Nasmith, the well known baker and confectioner of Toronto, is spending a few days pleasantly with his sister, Mrs. B. W. Robertson, wholesale grocer.

Mr. McLean, traveler for the Geo. Matthews Co., of Peterboro, is making his regular trip and taking large orders, especially for lard. Jim asked him if he took The Grocer. "Do I? Well I guess! We would rather go without lunch than miss The Grocer. It is the sun in the commercial sky that brings warmth and light to the grocers who read it. It gives them ideas of how to build, how to dress windows, where to buy everything, and how to run business and avoid the rocks."

LONDON.

At the Middlesex winter assizes, Jan. 17, Mr. F. L. Ross, of the Hamilton road, grocer, was awarded $350.00 damages against the Pere Marquette Railroad Company for the loss of a horse. The animal was killed at the Horton Street crossing last summer and Mr. Ross sued for $600.00.

W. R. Jex, C.A., for the past three years bookkeeper for Edward Adams & Co., wholesale grocers, left last week to take a similar position with Coates, Burns & Wanless. Mr. Albert Tripp succeeds Mr. Jex in the office of Edward Adams & Co.

Mr. Spencer Wilson last week purchased the grocery business of Mr. Frank H. Farnworth, 768 Dundas St., and has taken possession. Mr. Wilson was employed at Scandrett Bros. for several years and is well known to many Londoners.

ST. CATHARINES.

A lull in trade has developed during the past week, only necessary supplies being purchased. The wholesale grocers however, are kept busy furnishing their retail customers with goods.

The city council held its inaugural meeting on Monday last. Chas. Gibson, grocer, is a new member, this being his first appearance in municipal council affairs.

Mr. John Murphy has been appointed market clerk by the council. Mr. Murphy was formerly in the real estate business.

A LITTLE ESSAY ON NOT STOCKING UP.

(By a wire Grocer of Kingston)

Jim, the wise grocer, truly said: "We retailers carry too much stock, and the loss in waste, shrinkage, swelled heads, and so on, eats up the extra percentage gained in the 5 or 10 per cent. for buying in large lots, and, not only that, but interest charged on overdrafts carrying a line of discounts, etc." Yes, we as retailers must wake up, and stock up with cash instead of goods. For example, a linguist comes along and induces the merchant to take 25, 50 or 100 dollars' stock in a canning factory, for which he is promised an extea discount, and, in time, dividends. Well, the grocer thinks he will—it looks shiny and he does. What is the result? Stocked up with one make, perhaps quality is off, and anyhow the consumers want variety in canned goods just the same as in baking powders. Every customer has his pet label. Then the gem jar man comes along and whispers "Buy now," or you will be assessed a dollar a month if you don't." Then the soap man tells you to look out for an advance, and you load up, and instead of advancing they leave the price as before and take a shaving off the bar or press it a little thinner—like some of the manufacturers did for the trading stamp people. Well, let us soap we may be a little wiser in 1907. And again I say cut off poor-paying, balance-leaving creditors as you would trim your orchard in order to get better fruit—and don't carry so much stock.

NEW RAILWAY GOOD FOR TORONTO.

E. B. Sutton and Mrs. Sutton, of Bala, were in Toronto this week on a buying expedition. Mr. and Mrs. Sutton came by the Canadian Northern and it was their first trip by the new line. Mr. Sutton was outspoken in praise of the servive and he was sure the new line would bring the north country into closer touch with Toronto.

DEATH OF A SHIPPER.

Frank Hughes, for 15 years shipper for Warren Bros. & Co., Toronto, died at his home in that city Wednesday morning. He had been ill two months with kidney disease. He leaves a wife and one child. Mr. Hughes was highly regarded by everyone associated with Warren Bros. & Co.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

Since last report there has been no really noticeable change in the cheese situation. Canadian holders are still doing business with buyers on the English market at prices which hold firm. There is now every probability of higher figures than at present rule, and many are looking forward to a certainty of 14c. cheese before the new make appears on the market. The present strong feeling in the market must be attributed to the continued demand for cheese by the consumers in England. Sales to the public of Canadian cheese have been wonderfully well sustained on the other side according to advices received. The people all season bought the Canadian article at good prices, and although it was generally understood in the Old Country that there would be an advance in January, buying did not fall off materially, showing the confidence of the retailers in the continuance of the consumptive demand. Stocks are sinking, owing to the continued sales which are being made. Few care to give an estimate as to what amount of cheese is held in Canada, Montreal particularly, but all admit that the holdings must be very small. It is also the general opinion that if the present demand keeps up stocks will not last more than another three weeks at the most. This would tend to show the smallness of holdings. Canada is a large country and it is quite possible that stocks are larger than generally supposed, but there can be no doubt but that they are smaller than at this period last year by a very large number of boxes.

Early as it is, there is already talk around the cheese trade as to probabilities for the spring. Stocks are not disposed of, and the first of the new make of cheese is certainly a long way off, but most dealers are forming their speculative opinion as to the future. Some will air their views, but others prefer to wait a while in order to see whether their anticipations are likely to be realized before saying anything.

Speaking from present indications, prices at the opening will be high. Without doubt the stocks here will be cleaned up entirely by the spring, and the English market being in a receptive condition, good figures could easily be obtained for the first cheese offered. Conditions may change, however. The amount of Canadian cheese going into consumption may fall off between now and spring, leaving larger stocks of the Canadian article than shippers here anticipate, and as a result sellers may have to dispose of their holdings at the best price obtainable. But there is no reason why present conditions should not prevail, and the trade are in hopes of high opening figures, and the consequent profitable business which will follow.

Butter is a little firmer this week. Prices are quoted around the same level as last week, perhaps a shade higher in some instances. Sales are fairly satisfactory.

Last week only 150 boxes of cheese were received, while the receipts of butter were 1,114 packages. From May 1, 1906, to the end of the week, receipts of cheese amounted to 2,348,727 boxes, and of butter 603,067 packages. It will be seen that the receipts are gradually falling off, week by week.

PROVISION SITUATION.

The Ontario farmer rushed 35,000 hogs or more to market last week, apparently actuated by the idea that the price was at or near the top. He was probably right. This week the packers are paying from 15c. to 35c. lower. When prices were made for this week the figure was $6.50 f.o.b. country points, as compared with $6.65 last week; but Friday's cables showed the English market to be in bad shape, from 4s. to 6s. lower, and the price was moved down to $6.25 to $6.30. Some purchases had, however, been made for delivery this week at the higher figure. Quotations therefore are $6.25 to $6.50.

Packers differ in their views as to the course of the market in the near future. One says emphatically it will be lower next week; another guesses it will be steady or higher.

Deliveries last week were large, some packers say they even refused shipments. A good many of the hogs arriving have been overheld. A prominent packer, commenting on this feature this week, said :—

"This means a poorer quality of bacon, which, when it reaches the English market, will depress prices and hurt the reputation of the Canadian product. That must adversely affect the market and mean later on a lower price for the farmer."

The backward movement of the English market is due to large shipments from Denmark and Ireland. Because of bad weather and the Christmas holidays deliveries have been retarded from both countries and the accumulations are coming forward. The packers here don't like the outlook over there.

The domestic situation in hog products is unchanged, demand having not yet awakened.

Reviewing last week's produce market in the States, the New York Journal of Commerce says,:—

"There has been less activity in the option market for hog products the past week, and prices have been irregular, within a narrow range, apparently supported by packers on weak spots, while they, or some one else, has sold quite freely on strong ones, looking much as if they expected lower prices later on with a better hog supply, which has run during the week ahead of last year for several days at the leading points. There has been no anxiety, however, to sell, but rather cautious scalping of the market by the few traders, outside of packers, who indulged in this pastime; an any short interest, however small, is seized upon by the packers and forced to cover. The general feeling is that the advance has culminated, as prices are so high as to be considered the cause of a moderate falling off in consumption, notwithstanding continued activity in industrial centres, as the leading jobbers of the city admit trade has been very slow for the last month and is somewhat behind a year ago."

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

EGGS—New laid eggs were selling on the farmers' market here last Saturday at 25c. However, the supplies are not increasing and this week commission men are still getting as high as 30c. If the supply increases at all stored eggs will turn very easy. Last week a couple of shipments of new laid southern eggs were brought in from Chicago and handled at a fair margin for the importers. They are not as large as the domestic product and not quite as good stock as strictly new laid here because of the time taken for transportation. Prices here are practically unchanged except for new laid. Selected kept eggs bring as high as 27c.

A GREETING WORTH KEEPING.

A splendid piece of work is the wall hanger recently issued by the Quaker Oats Co. It is an engraving of the well-known Quaker who has so long represented the company and its products. This time he holds in his hand a parchment inscribed with hearty new year's wishes. The picture was first modelled in clay, then photographed and reproduced by the collotype, or similar process, on a fine quality paper, and the result is certainly an attractive advertisement.

Wheat Advanced Owing to Decreased Receipts—Car Shortage Worse Than Ever in the West—Grain Dealers Complain of Crop Reports.

Wheat has advanced 3c.. in Chicago and 2c. in Winnipeg from the low points of a few weeks ago. The situation continues firm owing to small receipts, and these are due to the car famine in the west. The C.P.R. has stopped all shipments east of Fort William. On Tuesday the receipts of wheat at Fort William and Port Arthur were only 28 cars and there should have been 250 anyway. One northern is now quoted with freight rates to Montreal and west, including milling in transit, at 87½c. The car congestion in the west is worse than ever. Bradstreets report a decrease of 6,487,000 bushels in the world's visible supply of wheat. In the United States last week saw strong grain markets throughout the list, on continued light receipts and offerings, owing in part to wet weather and bad country roads west, with light offerings by farmers and small receipts, while exporters have stood ready to take all the wheat and corn offered at hardening prices, though not bidding up prices in the absence of offerings. Oats have advanced on good buying in the west, by leading operators who apparently improved the depression caused by the last Government report to buy all the cheap oats offered, by both shorts and longs, until the latter had sold out, and the former began to want to cover in view of the decreasing movement. The advance in this grain has been quite sharp, on the covering of shorts and good buying for long account, though cash trade has been light owing to good stocks in second hands.

A deputation of Toronto grain men waited on the Ontario Minister of Agriculture recently to tell him that his crop reports were not accurate enough. They referred to barley particularly but included oats also. They were moved to that because of the light deliveries, which seemed to them to belie the crop reports. Hon. Mr. Monteith told them the crop reports were all right; that farmers were marketing their oats and barley on the hoof and that if they would continue to take the advice of the department there would be even less business for the grain men. He surprised some of the deputation by stating that the Ontario farmers were not now growing a kind of barley that was good for malting.

Short supplies have caused an advance in oats that seems to be justified by the situation.

TRADE GOOD ON PACIFIC COAST

Record Price for Butter—Dried Fruits High—Last of the Salmon Pack Goes to Australia—Fish Trade With Japan.

Vancouver, Jan. 18, 1907.

Prunes and creamery butter are leaders in market circles at the present time. Butter never went up so high locally before. The price now asked, and obtained readily, for fresh local creamery butter is 40 cents per pound wholesale. The very limited supply is perhaps the chief reason for the price going up, added to the fact that there is always a demand for the local fresh-made article, all the year round, and for quantities more than are ever produced. Price is a secondary consideration with a large section of the demand.

Because California dried fruits are well up out of sight in most lines, prunes are in big demand, and selling so fast that there is every likelihood of their becoming scarce enough to bring up the present quotations on this staple, which now sells at 5½c. to 9c. in wholesale way.

Shipments of salmon, both salted and canned, are still rather heavy, the last of last season's pack of canned fish going largely to Australia, the SS. Aorangi taking out a large consignment this week. The salted salmon, of the dog-salmon variety, largely, is shipped for the most part to Japan, where there is a big trade in this article, which is not marketable in this country for white trade. The Japs largely put it up themselves here, many of the little brown men being engaged in catching and curing the fish at several points, up the gulf and some points up north. This Winter, or rather for the past few weeks, heavy shipments of salt herring in barrels have also been shipped from Nanaimo, where the herring run is surprisingly large every year. These salted herrings go to Japan by the C.P.R. steamers, being transhipped at this point from local steamers which bring them over from Nanaimo. The Athenian, which sailed this week for the Orient, took out over a hundred tons.

In former years the Japs shipped herring not salted, to Japan, but that was a contravention of the fisheries regulation, which forbid the shipment of fish for fertilizer purposes. Now the fish are salted and are therefore supposed to be used for food.

The wholesale trade reports business this past week much better than usual for this time of year, and really not much of a let-up for them, though holiday trade is over. The retail merchants of course find some slackening off, but are all well satisfied with the total, as well as with the way collections have been coming in.

Prices show but little change from recent quotations. In California dried fruits, apricots may as well be called out of the market. The price is 23c. Peaches are 15½c. and scarce. Figs, cooking, are getting scarce, and selling for 6½c. Evaporated apples are quoting here lower than in the east, based on former California quotations. Present selling price is 9½c., but that will be raised soon.

In dairy goods, butter, local creamery, is 40c. wholesale; eastern creamery 29c. to 31c., while dairy is bringing all the way from 20c. to 25c., as to quality. Fresh eggs, are up again, with cold weather, the price being 55c. Case eggs are now 30c. A little Australian creamery came in last steamer, which sells at 32½c.

CANNED GOODS TO COST MORE.

Outlook for the Pack of 1907—Higher Prices for Raw Material.

The canned goods trade in the United States are already selling next season's pack. Consequently the probable cost of materials is already canvassed. The New York Journal of Commerce says:

"According to well posted authorities there is a general disposition to raise quotations on 1907 packing, throughout the list, at least 5c. a dozen over last season's opening prices, and in some instances an advance of 10c. and even of 15c. a dozen is held to be warranted by the conditions confronting packers. Heretofore the items of cans, boxes and raw material have figured in the calculation of packers as the basis of cost, almost exclusively, with the wages of labor, of course, counted in as incidental. But there are many small items of expense which heretofore have been given little consideration, which are now to be more carefully computed in the cost of doing business. The cost of maintenance, repairs, etc., has been figured by the most careful, but the average canner it is held has not attached the importance to these that must hereafter be given them, owing to the advance in the price of all supplies that enter into them. For instance, the cost of lumber needed for repairs and improvements to canneries has in the last few years increased about 50 per cent. and even nails, the consumption of which in the large and even average canneries is an important item, are much higher than they were when the era of general prosperity was younger. It is asserted by careful students of the situation that the packer who does not take all of these things into account when calculating cost, will find his balance on the wrong side of the ledger at the end of the season, and that the fact is becoming generally recognized is indicated by the movement among state packers to get better prices for their 1907 output. Of even greater concern to them is the question of labor. That commodity promises to be scarcer than it has ever been in canning sections, owing to the greater inducements in pay offered in other departments of industry. In New York State the opportunities offered to labor by the barge canal is drawing the supply from other less paying fields, and the canners are feeling or will feel this draft upon their supply of workers as much if not more than other industries that cannot hold out similar inducements in higher pay, without raising market values on their products. Similar conditions confront packers in all parts of the country.

Several new lines of grocers' and confectioners' specialties were successfully introduced by him, besides securing a number of very satisfactory orders for his company's maple syrups and sugars. Mr. Gardiner left for Hamilton, London and other Ontario centres.

GROCERY SHOW IN MONTREAL.

Advisory Committee Representing Various Branches of the Trade.

The provincial committee for Quebec, grocers' section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, has decided to hold an exhibition of groceries in Montreal from April 16th to the 29th, in the Arena.

In order to assure success and make this exhibition profitable to exhibitors, it has been decided that the general policy of the exhibition will be under the direction of an advisory committee of manufacturers, manufacturers' agents, wholesalers and retailers. The gentlemen in that committee are as follows:—A. P. Murray, of the Edwardsburg Starch Co.; Col. Labelle, Ogilvie Flour Mills; Harry Clark, Wm. Clark; Albert Hebert, Hudon, Hebert & Co.; Jos. Ethier, Laporte, Martin & Co.; S. Mathewson, of Mathewson's Sons; Wm. H. Dunn, of Wm. H. Dunn & Co.; M. Laflamme, of Rose & Laflamme; with the following retail grocers:— P. Daoust, Montreal; J. A. Chabot, Quebec; J. G. Chevalier, Joliette; U. Carignan, Trois Rivieres; J. A. Labonte, Montreal; J. A. Maynard, Montreal.

DECEPTION IN OIL AND WINE

U.S. Consul Reports That French Shippers Misbrand and Adulterate—Names Made to Order for Canned Goods Also—Law Permits It.

Bordeaux is the chief port of outlet from France of oil and wine. The American Consul there, D. I. Murphy, has sent to the Department at Washington an interesting report on the misbranding and adulteration of oil and wines. He writes :—

The use of fictitious names, or "contremarques," is common throughout France. The law of June 23, 1857, protects the French manufacturer in their use and authorizes him to employ such trademarks as he pleases, provided he has them duly registered. It is a common thing for manufacturers and exporters to label olive oil of secondary or inferior quality with fictitious names or trademarks, reserving their own proper names for their highest grade of goods. Many large American concerns order oil from the packers here with directions for special labels bearing some particular names or trademarks of their own.

Some Fictitious Names.

While immense quantities of olive oil are shipped to the United States under fictitious names, it must not be presumed that all, or any considerable portion of it, is adulterated. Many of the names herein given are well known to the trade and the public generally, being the trademarks of reputable houses. Some of the fictitious names bear a somewhat suspicious resemblance to the names of well-known houses, and their use may be intended to mislead. Two of them * * * may easily be mistaken for * * *, one of the most reputable concerns in all France. I have the assurances of the packers, however, that these misleading names are insisted upon by customers in the United States.

Canned GoodsAlso Named to Order.

Aside from those dealing largely in oils, many of the packers of canned and preserved goods export oil with trademarks of their own. In addition to these, many of the wine exporting houses supply their trade in the United States with olive oils, each particular concern having its own trademark. As in the case of the shippers of canned and preserved goods, only one or two of them manufacture or refine. They, too, have the large oil packers supply their orders.

What has been said regarding exporters of olive oil using their own proper names only for their goods of first quality holds true of the packers of preserved fruits and vegetables and of the wine merchants. It would require a volume to give the fictitious names used by them, the records of the Tribunal of Commerce showing hundreds and hundreds of registrations, and it would require another volume to contain all the names insisted upon by American dealers.

Misbranding and Adulteration of Wine

That there is adulteration of wine goes without saying, but to state the extent of or point out the parties engaged in it is a difficult proposition. It is known that certain unprincipled dealers or brokers buy up the entire output of some of the vineyards where good wine is produced, and with the addition of alcohol and water multiply the output many times over. On this subject in a recently published statement Mr. Guillaume Chastenet, in the French Assembly, declared the "overproduction of wine from which the wine districts of France are suffering is mostly due to fraud." The growers were suffering because of the fraudulent increase in the wine crop, and the manufacture of artificial wines had developed prodigiously. "To-day," said Mr. Chastenet, "the consumption and production of wines might balance if it were not for the fifteen or twenty millions of hectoliters (396,255,000 gallons to 528,340,000 gallons) of sugar wines, or manufactured wines of all kinds, made with the lees and sulphuric acid." Examination of the matter leads me to believe with Mr. Chastenet that among the growers there is practically no fraud. The trouble is with certain dealers or brokers who practise what is called "mouillage" or adulteration with water and alcohol.

French Minister Takes Action.

Quite recently Mr. Guyot-Dessaigne, Minister of Justice, addressed to all the prosecuting attorneys throughout the different departments of France a circular relative to the safeguarding of the public health. In this circular the Minister declares that "the Government is more than ever determined to repress all fraud, notably that which is too frequently practised in the wine trade." A number of convictions have been secured.

Wine Blending Harmless.

The blending of wines is carried on quite extensively, but this seems to be a natural and harmless proceeding, so long as no adulterants enter into the equation. Large quantities of Algerian wines are imported here, and while some of it is utilized as a blend by a certain few of the merchants, the bulk of it, I find, is shipped through to Paris and other parts of France. Of the amount of Algerian wine imported in 1905, approximately 140,000,000 gallons, only 8 per cent., remained in Bordeaux, according to official figures.

The Classed Wines.

There is undoubtedly considerable false labeling on what are known as the "classed wines." Of the Chateau Margaux wine there are at this time in stock in Bordeaux about 2,000,000 bottles of different years' vintages, but how many bottles so labeled and sent abroad really contain the excellent product of that famous chateau cannot be told.

The renowned Pontet Canet Chateau produces annually about 300,000 bottles, but much more than that amount is put on the market each year.

The Chateau Lafite output is about 200,000 bottles, but much of the wine masquerading under that label is innocent of contact with the well-known vineyard. And the same is true of most all the classed wines.

To prevent this false labeling it can only be suggested that in addition to the name of the producer and the chateau on the label, there should appear also the name of the merchant or importer who handles the product.

Salutary Effect of Pure Food Law.

Having given much time to the study of oils and wines, I am led to believe that olive oils exported to the United States from Bordeaux bearing the names of well-known and old-established firms are really what they purport to be—pure olive oils. And it may also be accepted that wines bearing the names of Bordeaux's high-class merchants are pure and free from adulteration. I have the assurance of men in the trade that they would be glad if the Government of the United States would forbid the use of any names on packages containing other than those food products of the exporters, the multiplicity of fictitious names arising in great measure from the demands of large American buyers.

"MUST" FOR SHIPPERS TO JAMAICA.

(G. Eustace Burke, C.C.A., in "Weekly Report")

It is much to be regretted that Canadian packers and manufacturers are so indifferent to the definite instructions given by indentors, the inevitable result being monetary loss and dissatisfaction one way or the other, and in the case of new goods being introduced, a valuable loss of future output. This market is a conservative one, and the sending of one thing or leaning to one method of pack or grade when another is called for can have but one result ; and that disastrous.

When complaint is made, and loss ensues, a common argument by the shippers in justification of the course they pursued is, "We have shipped thousands of pounds of the like grade of goods similarly packed to South Africa, and have never received complaint or suffered financially thereby." All that I can say is, that if such Dominion producers and manufacturers desire to successfully capture any portion of this island's trade for their products, they must learn to distinctly understand that the requirements of the Jamaica market differ very materially from that of South Africa.

GINGER IN JAPAN.

Alex. Maclean, C.C.A., in Japan, writes of the ginger industry there :

Ginger-root is largely produced in Shizuoka prefecture, and was first exported about twenty years ago. Owing to deterioration of quality, export almost entirely stopped. The quality having improved in recent years by more skilled methods, the export trade has revived, and cultivation is carried on more extensively with prospect of rapid advancement. Last year the total area of land devoted to ginger in the prefecture was about 8,025 acres, which produced 2,833,333 lbs., valued at $95,625. The dried ginger is exported chiefly to the United States, some going to Europe and India. In Japan the demand for ginger is limited, the consumption not exceeding 40,000 lbs. a year for medical purposes, in addition to a small quantity used for seasoning food. The producers in Shizuoka are said to be trying to improve the quality and quantity with the view to displacing West Indian and Cuban ginger on the foreign markets.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Orange Trade Eases Off a Bit, But Improvement Looked for Shortly—Fish Market Shaping for Lent.

Trade in oranges has been none too active during the past few days, but an improvement is looked for within the next week or so. The weather has been mainly responsible for the slow movement of stock. Montreal reports an advance in banana prices, but in Toronto they are, if anything, lower than last week.

With Lent now less than three weeks off, fish is in good demand, and several new lines are quoted.

The vegetable market shows very little change.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—The Jamaica earthquake has affected the fruit trade. Bananas are dearer. This week prices are 25c higher. The earthquake caused a lot of trouble to American importers, and affected the steamship service considerably. Bananas are in good demand. The apple market is rather slow at the moment. Oranges and lemons are selling freely. Valencias are considered very good value at the figures quoted. The market for cranberries in the States is a little off owing to weather conditions. Locally this line is slow. Pineapples are also poor sellers.

VEGETABLES—Demand for vegetables is fair and the actual business transacted is very good. Lettuce, spinach and tomatoes are in good demand at prices quoted. Potatoes are better than they were. In this province there is a scarcity on the markets. The farmers will not sell and dealers here have been bringing stock from New Brunswick. Prices have been pretty low, but it is not thought they will go down any further. Receipts at present are sufficient to take care of the demand. Considerable American cabbage is being brought into Montreal. There is a fairly good demand for this article.

FISH—Fresh haddock are beginning to get scarce. The run for the season is practically over, and supplies are none too large. Smoked haddies will, naturally, be short also in the near future. It is very likely that there will be higher prices in this line. Lake trout, cod fish, frozen herring, lobsters and boneless cod are among the new lines quoted this week. Trade is picking up rapidly as Lent draws nearer. Many grocers are wisely placing their orders early to ensure prompt delivery.

FRUIT—There is a large range of navel oranges this week. Tangerines are higher. Mexicans are quoted at $2.25 to $2.45, but a special shipment is offered at as low as $2. Marmalade oranges are listed this week. Canadian chestnuts are no longer quoted, although they are still selling in some localities at about 20c per quart, retail. Cranberries are slightly lower.

In one of their cars of frozen sea herrings last week, White & Co., Toronto, received a young shark caught off Newfoundland. It is a two-year-old, with two rows of extremely formidable teeth, as sharp as needles and razors combined. The two rows of teeth indicate its age, as the shark acquires an extra row of teeth each year. The fish was on exhibition in front of White & Co.'s warehouse, and attracted considerable attention.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS.

Election of Officers and Final Arrangements Made for Annual At-Home.

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association held its first meeting for 1907 in the Temple Building on Monday evening, Jan. 21. A letter from the secretary, D. G. Beaton, asking to be relieved of his office, was discussed, and finally handed over to the executive committee to be dealt with. Various matters in connection with the annual at home, to to be held in the Temple on February 6, were considered, and reports of committees were heard. Mr. Bell moved that article 7, section 1, of the association by-laws, be amended so that the nomination of officers shall take place in November, and the election in December, which would make it possible for all new officers to take their place at the beginning of the New Year. The motion was seconded by Mr. Thorne, and carried.

Discussion of other articles in the constitution followed, and Mr. Bell then gave notice of motion that a general revision of the by-laws take place.

An appropriation was voted for the decoration committee of the at home, and after the transaction of other business the elections were proceeded with. R. B. Snow was elected by acclamation to the office of president. The other officers chosen were: C. F. Thorne, vice-president; D. McLean, treasurer; Messrs. Coutts, Bell and Johnston, trustees; and an executive committee of J. S. Bond, H. D. Kelly, B. Panter, J. C. Beaumont, T. Clarke and R. H. Stewart, in addition to the president, lpast-president (R. VanLoan), treasurer and secretary.

The installation of officers then took place, and short addresses were given by some of the successful candidates. D. Bell was elected temporarv treasurer for the at home. It was decided not to provide cigars gratuitously for those who did not care to trip the light fantastic. Tickets were then distributed to those present and the meeting adjourned.

White & Barber, of Alton, have sold their general store business to R. L. MacKenzie, from Stouffville.

MERCHANT APPRECIATED.

The prominent members of the Methodist church, Inverary, assembled on Dec. 21st, and presented A. Ritchie and wife with two beautiful upholstered chairs. Mr. Ritchie has sold his general store and moved to 335 Brock St., Kingston, until spring, when he intends going west. Another presentation was made at the I.O.F. lodge, on Dec. 31st, when Mr. Ritchie, financial secretary, was presented with a handsome gold-headed cane. The family has always resided in Inverary, and will be greatly missed there.

F. W. Massington, of Orillia, has sold his grocery business to Johnston Bros., of the same place.

PEBBLE AND PHARAOH

The Paying Trade Cigars Build Up

Cigars were pleasing in the extreme. They may not be the best cigars on earth; but—they certainly are the best cigars ever marketed at the price.

The grocers who have not tested the Quality of my Cigars are not giving themselves a square deal.

The Payne Cigars are different and better—the Payne plan of doing business best of all. Do you know it? See issue Jan. 11th.

THE KING OF ALL TOBACCOS

That verdict has gone forth never to be recalled. The smokers of Canada have discovered a tobacco just strong enough to soothe and satisfy and fragrant enough to please women.

T. & B.

is that tobacco. There isn't a nip in a ton of it. So delightfully fragrant is T. & B. that a man can smoke it all over the house with impunity.

Shrewd grocers, realizing these facts, feature T. & B. all the time. They have another reason for talking T. & B.

THE PROFIT IS RIGHT.

HAMILTON, CANADA

TORONTO RETAILER REPLIES TO H. C. BECKETT

Toronto, Jan. 21, 1907.

Editor Canadian Grocer:

Dear Sir,—In your issue of January 18th you report an address given by Mr. Beckett to the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association.

Taking for granted the accuracy of the report one is naturally curious to know how the address was received by the audience. The implied insult to the intelligence of those who listened to Mr. Beckett in the words, that "ninety per cent. of the retailers don't know the cost of doing business" would in almost any city, be received by an average audience of modern retail grocers with feelings of resentment—but perhaps not so in Hamilton.

The statement that "the old school definition that profit is the difference between cost and selling price of an article is wrong" makes you wonder what school Mr. Beckett attended if no distinction was made between gross and net profits.

No one can take exception to the charges included in the expense account as itemized by Mr. Beckett—but in the example he gives does he not put the cart before thee horse? Does his hypothesis start from the right point? Expenses can be controlled—they are or can be made a fixed amount—turnover is an uncertain quantity, subject to fluctuations.

To anyone conversant with modern retail methods the question would be—given a capital of $3,000, an anual expense of $2,230, what is the greatest possible turnover and at what percentage of profit can it be made? Entering into the solution of this question are factors such as locality, competition, salesmanship, buying ability, general business acumen—and in deference to The Canadian Grocer—effective advertising.

Suppose that a business can be conducted, and there are such businesses, at an annual expense of $2,230, including all the charges given by Mr. Beckett and the turnover instead of $12,000 is $15,000, then in addition to earning 3 1-2 per cent. interest on capital, $800 per year salary, the proprietor shows a surplus of $770—of course provided the profits are 20 per cent.—not a bad showing.

If Mr. Beckett's contention that not over five per cent. succeed in the grocery business is correct, is there not a possibility that there are other reasons than inability to figure the cost of doing business? Are we to believe that 95 per cent. of the retail grocers of this country are incompetent and ignorant of the first principles of business?

No sir—a simple method of bookkeeping is, it is true, essential in any business—but failure in the retail grocery business can be attributed more to the restrictions put on the business by the wholesale grocers than to ignorance. Mr. Beckett, no doubt, is probably a gentleman of fixed principles—has fixed ideas in regard to the relationship of the wholesale to the retail trade—and with generosity worthy of a better cause, devotes some of his spare time to the education of the benighted retailer, and tells him the whole trouble originates in his, the retailer's, inability to deal with figures.

One of Mr. Beckett's fixed principles is that of fixed prices from wholesale to retail, an idea which he has foisted upon the trade, with what measure of success his brethren of the guild are best able to decide. It is upon this fixed price principle that the man who buys one barrel of sugar pays the same price as the man who buys fifty barrels, one hundred barrels can be bought as low as five thousand. The same rule is applied to tobacco, "association" canned goods, and other staple groceries. Under such conditions brains and capital are very secondary attributes.

Mr. Beckett, in conclusion, places the cost of doing a retail business at 22 per cent. of the total turnover. For the guidance of his Hamilton audience who have perhaps had time to digest all the facts and figures he loaded them up with, and readers of The Canadian Grocer, will he tell us on what margin of profit the wholesale houses sell to hotels and boarding-house keepers, so that we retailers may have a chance to compete?

The curse of business is said by Mr. Beckett to be price-cutting. This, however, is a much mooted question. Judicious and well advertised price-cutting has been responsible for many a merchant's success. The department stores are not in business for their health—but the sprat to catch a whale idea pervades their advertisements. Even staid and conservative wholesale grocers are not above holding out inducements such as free clocks, tea canisters, etc., as an inducement to buyers—a sure but indirect method of cutting prices.

Failure in Canada in the wholesale grocery trade is of rare occurrence, simply because years ago a combination was formed for so-called defensive purposes—one of the cows to be milked has unfortunately been the retailer.

The tide is turning—slowly perhaps, and the retailers are now getting together and may in the future be able to formulate some plan for the protection of that particular cow's udder.

Yours, etc.,

TORONTO RETAILER.

A DEPARTMENT TO DEVELOP.

Grocers Should Study the Possibilities of a Good Tobacco Business.

As with everything else, you must hustle if you are going to sell tobacco You're not likely to make a tobacco department a profit-bringing institution if you do not get right down to hard work and make it pay. Perhaps you have carried a line ever since you began business, and you cannot understand how it is that you have a good profitable trade in all other lines, while your stock of tobacco seems to stick to the shelves. There must be some reason for this, because tobacco is made to sell, not to ornament the store.

If you go right to the bottom of the matter, you will find, nine times out of ten, that you have almost totally neglected the tobacco section of the store. While devoting your time and energy to other branches of the business, you have allowed the tobacco department to run itself as best it might.

This is a mistake. You cannot afford to neglect goods which, when properly handled, will bring you returns larger than are obtainable from many staple grocery lines. Just figure it out. You will find that there is more actual profit and less labor in the selling of a quantity of good cigars than there is in disposing of, say, sugar of equal value.

Knowing this, don't you think you had better sit down and give the tobacco department a little thought? You can make it go if you will. It will require a lot of work and much thought, but it can be made to pay in proportion.

It's worth while starting over again. Obtain a stock of tobacco—cigars, cigaretes and other lines. See that the goods are the best value obtainable for the money. Then get to work. Keep your stock in good condition. Let the people know you have the goods and are after the business. Above all things hustle, and then after a fair trial, do some figuring and see how it pays.

THIS GROCER SAYS "ORGANIZE"

Not to Fix Prices But to Remedy Evils—A Call for Action—Opening for a Grocery Moses.

A leading Hamilton grocer is the author of the following letter to The Grocer, and it's in the right line:

Hamilton, Jan. 21, 1907.

Editor The Canadian Grocer:

Talking about grocers organizing, if they could only be made to realize the many advantages that would accrue to a real live grocers' association, they would wonder why they had been so slow. The average retail man can't see anything in it, but an arranged price for some or all commodities. Now in my opinion that is the poorest inducement of all, and no well managed association would listen to any such a measure. There are a hundred and one evils to combat, some large and some small, but in the main, if corrected, would lead to much more pleasant relations all the way from the producer to the consumer.

The individual grocer who now lays his complaints before the wholesaler or manufacturer is called a crank, but if one hundred cranks made the same complaint and made it as an organized body, they would be very quickly attended to.

Most jobbers are not satisfied with the legitimate trade, but sell to hotels, laundries, restaurants, etc. Wonder how many Hamilton grocers know that the department stores get special prices, rebates and rake-offs that even a few of the jobbers don't know of.

Organization is what we want; not local only, but provincial or, even better, national. Why, the retail merchants of Canada are the highest taxed people in the community—no legislation crops up for their benefit—but just watch the bills brought before both houses for the advantage of the farmer and the labor union men. Now, Mr. Canadian Grocer, allow me to congratulate you for your worthy remarks along this line in last week's issue. There is a move now on by the Retail Merchants' Association to hold a convention in Hamilton in March next. Why can't all the grocers get together and send some of their best men and get this big association going? The time is ripe; we just want a leader. What town will produce this Moses who will get all joined together and lead us up to a higher level? The Hamilton, association has the leading grocers in it—but only has about 75 members out of a possible 250.

Owing to a changing around of the traveling staff of Jas. Turner & Co., Hamilton, H. E. Toms who was looking after the firm's interests in Saskatchewan, is taking up a portion of Alberta on the Canadian Northern Railway.

FOR THE TILLSON TROPHY.

Games to Date in the Wholesale Grocers' Hockey League.

The first game in the Toronto Wholesale Grocers' Hockey League was played Friday night, Jan. 11, at Varsity Rink, when Kinnear & Co. defeated Jas. Lumbers & Co. by the smallest possible score of 2 to 1. The score at half-time was 1 to 0 in favor of Lumber & Co., but T. Kinnear & Co. were in better condition and pulled themselves together in the last half, scoring two goals. The teams were as follows:—

T. Kinnear & Co.—Goal, A. Legge; point, Minett; cover point, B. Brown; rover, R. Hocken; right forward, W. Ford; centre, C. Rennie; left forward, T. H. Kinnear.

Jas. Lumbers & Co.—Goal, Wess Lumbers; point, T. Kerr; cover point, S. Oliver; rover, D. Waites; right forward, R. Marshall; centre F. Lumbers; left forward, W. Corrigan.

Referee—T. C. Webber.

A very exciting and rough game was played Monday night, Jan. 14, at Varsity Rink, when Jas. Lumbers & Co. defeated the Brokers, last year's champions, by a score of 3 to 1; at half time the score being 3 to 0 in favor of Lumbers, but in the second half they were unable to add to this score, the Brokers having the best of the play during the second half. Lumbers' have a very strong defence in Wess Lumbers, Tom Kerr and Capt. Stewart Oliver. Had it not been for the phenomenal work of Wess Lumbers in goal the Brokers would have had many more goals to their credit as they had at least 20 shots on the goal nets. The Brokers had the same team as last year with the exception of their old captain, S. Bank's and Fred Donaldson, who made up the defence. Their forward line was the same as last year but could not get their combination going. They were, A. R. Millman, W. W. May, T. C. Webber and H. Thompson.

The teams lined up as follows:—

Brokers—Goal, H. Ferguson; point, Percy Millman; cover point, Geo. Hortop; rover, T. C. Webber; right forward, W. W. May; centre, A. R. Millman; left forward, H. Thompson.

Referee—C. Rennie.

Goal empires—Walter Lumbers, M. Warwick.

SOAP and its PRICE

All soap-making materials have been for some time and are now very high in price : Tallow, Cotton Seed Oil, Cocoanut Oil, and many other articles.

Good quality Soap cannot be made except at a serious loss if sold at the price which has been ruling and unchanged for a good many years.

"SURPRISE" Soap has been advanced in price to meet conditions as they are and have been for some months past. High-grade quality soap, such as "SURPRISE," must be made of high-grade materials.

There are a great many adulterations for soap. Low-grade soap can be made and sold without a loss at the high-grade soap price if buyers can be found. A cut-weight soap, two or three ounces less than the usual weight of cake or bar, can be sold at the full-weight price with a profit, but "SURPRISE" Soap, the same quality for over twenty years, and the size and weight of cake not changed, can only be made and sold at an advance in price to meet the cost of production.

This is the "SURPRISE" Soap point of view. We insist on quality for "SURPRISE" Soap. It pays to give what is paid for. Your customers when they buy "SURPRISE" know they are getting real "SURPRISE" : Not changed in quality or quantity.

We think it pays to tell the truth ; to be honest with customer and consumer. Don't you

"Batger's"

Strawberry Jam

If you carry this line of jam on your shelves it sells itself. The appearance of the new style glass jar is good and the Whole Fruit inside invites tasting.

It is made from the finest English garden strawberries and granulated sugar, by a firm that has been in the business for over 150 years.

Once tasted, Batger's Strawberry Jam will be ordered again. If you are not already selling Batger's, why not order a trial case of 4 doz. and see for yourself?

Four Reasons why INVICTUS FIBRE is the BEST FIBRE PAPER on the Market

1. Invictus Fibre is made from personally selected pulp wood cut on our own limits.
2. This special pulp wood is again rigidly culled on arrival at our mills
3. The pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made is manufactured in our own pulp mill and transferred at once to the paper mill, avoiding all drawbacks of transportation.
4. Invictus Fibre will increase in strength and not grow hard and brittle as does fibre made from sulphite pulp. This is a quality of the peculiar and selected pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made.

A trial order will convince you that we are correct. See that each package bears the words "Invictus Fibre." Every ream contains 480 sheets

They Cost Less Than Nothing

Literally, ALLISON COUPON BOOKS cost less than nothing. By using them a mistake is impossible, thus saving many times what we charge for them. Hence, by absolutely saving a great deal more than you pay for them, they not only cost less than nothing, but you receive a great, big premium with every book you buy.

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? THE E. D. MARCEAU CO. LTD., Montreal

A few reasons why Ozo Jams should be and are considerably better than any others now being made in Canada:

1. As Montreal is by far the largest buying centre in the country, enormous quantities of all kinds of fruit are sent to be marketed here, and as ripe fruit has to be disposed of within 24 hours of arrival a glut is sure to occur in some fruit every day—it might be peaches to-day, or strawberries to-morrow—some fruit is sure to be over-shipped, which we can buy at a price averaging as low as the mere cost of growing it; and buying fruit at this price naturally we can afford to use more of it.

2. Our plant is the largest in Canada, contains the finest, cleanest and most modern equipment, which enables us not only to turn out an enormous quantity but give far better quality as well.

3. We can buy sugar on the wharf at a great saving over what it would cost if freighted west, and consequently are enabled to put in a much larger proportion in the cheaper qualities.

4. Having the turnover, we are able to purchase our packages at the very lowest price.

5. As we believed that these natural advantages would enable us to take the lead in the Jam business, we sent to England for the most expert Jam cook we could find. As money was no object, we got him and placed him in charge of our Jam Department, where his 28 years of practical experience are enabling him to turn out goods which are a revelation to the trade, and are causing a large increase in sales in this line with the people who are handling them.

6. Notwithstanding our ability to turn out a product equal to any made in the country at a lower price, our aim is to put this saving in the cost of production into bettering the quality of the goods, thus putting purchasers of our goods beyond the reach of competition.

With this information at hand you can readily see why so many of the largest wholesalers have placed their Jam contracts with us, and we think you will also see that it will be to your advantage, and that of your customers, to place your Jam business with us.

We quote Standard Brand Jam

Dear Sir:—One of our wholesale customers called us up on the 'phone the other day, and mentioned that one of his country customers had sent some Poultry for our Aylmer factory in his care, and that the price was to be 10c. per lb. "I had no idea," said he, "that your "people pay such high prices for your Poultry. Some "retailers and consumers seem to have the impression "that all Canned Poultry is made up of all kinds of scrap "meat, and if they were acquainted with the facts that you "pay such high prices for your Poultry, and insist on the very best quality, "it would increase the consumption very much." We assured our esteemed customer that our Canned Poultry was absolutely guaranteed to be exactly what it is represented to be, and that taking into consideration the trouble in cleaning Poultry, waste of bone, etc., our Canned Poultry is very much better and cheaper than Poultry in its fresh state.

Aylmer Poultry is especially recommended for invalids, as owing to being thoroughly sterilized there is no danger of any bacterial trouble of any kind, as with Poultry not canned. Aylmer Chicken Soup is recommended by physicians from coast to coast. Every retail grocer in the country should keep these high-grade products in stock, and should lose no opportunity to place their merits before his customers.

Yours faithfully,

THE FOLLOWING ARE THE PERCENTAGES OF INCREASES OF "SALADA"

Tea since we first placed it before the public fifteen years ago. What can speak more strongly for its quality?

We had 123 per cent increase in 1893 over 1892
We had 145 per cent increase in 1894 over 1893
We had 115 per cent increase in 1895 over 1894
We had 85 per cent increase in 1896 over 1895
We had 86 per cent increase in 1897 over 1896
We had 39 per cent increase in 1898 over 1897
We had 34 per cent increase in 1899 over 1898
We had 18 per cent increase in 1900 over 1899
We had 15 per cent increase in 1901 over 1900
We had 11 per cent increase in 1902 over 1901
We had 25½ per cent increase in 1903 over 1902
We had 12 per cent increase in 1904 over 1903
We had 18 per cent increase in 1905 over 1904
We had 23 per cent increase in 1906 over 1905

Our 23 per cent increase in 1906 over 1905 amounted to more pounds of "SALADA" Tea than our total output was in the years 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895 and 1896 combined.

For the first four weeks of this year we have an increase of 16 per cent over the corresponding period of last year.

DID YOU EVER WEIGH

the matter in your own mind and consider what a difference it would make in your annual profits if you were able to secure orders from your customers for ALL their requirements in your line. For instance, are there not some who persist in going to the OTHER store for their COFFEE? They have the impression, rightly or wrongly, that the other grocer suits their taste in Coffee better than you can do, the NET RESULT being that the other fellow gets the profit—Coffee is a profitable line, too.

TRY GREIG'S WHITE SWAN BLEND

and see what a difference it will make in your trade. It is the kind of Coffee that people come back for. Only the other day a lady bought a pound tin of it in a store, not 100 miles from Toronto, the second day afterwards she returned for four pounds more "for fear it should all be gone." That's the kind of Coffee it is. Try a sample lot and see how your sales will grow.

The 1-lb. tins are handsomely embossed and decorated, and just as high grade as the Coffee itself.

NATIONAL ORDER RETAIL GROCERS

Address of President John A. Greene, before the Grocers of the United States, gathered at Dallas, Texas.

The National Association of Retail Grocers of the United States held their 10th annual convention at Dallas, Texas, last week. The attendance of grocers and their friends was over 2,000. President Greene in an address that struck the grocers "where they live," dwelt at length on the premium evil, declaring that if association members would evolve a programme, and stick to it for three months, at the end of that time such a thing as a premium would be unknown in the legitimate grocery trade. He paid his respects to the mail-order houses and their efforts to secure the passage of a parcels post law, advocated mutual insurance and an amendment to the bankruptcy law, and placed himself on record as favoring a policy of absolute independence.

What he meant by "absolute independence" may be seen from the report of Secretary Gray, in which he said: "An impression is abroad that this has been a year of independence, and it is true that for the first time the treasury box has not been passed to the manufacturers. Still, of the $5,960 received, over half, or $3,318, was contributed by manufacturers, collected under the old system by former Secretary Mason. The receipts from the per capita tax were $1,742, and various grocers' associations yielding to the request of President Greene, granted contributions of $897. This left a deficit, however, which the funds collected under the old plan made good. No further donations have been solicited."

Mr. Gray suggested that if 10 cents had been ordinarily sufficient as a per capita tax, a per capita of 25 cents would leave the society with riches.

The National includes 1,400 local associations.

President Greene said in part:

"There is coming into our association the very best element in the grocery trade. When I say the very best element, I mean men of large capital interest; men whose position carries with it influence and dignity. These men, I say, are coming to the support of the association and taking the greatest interest in its affairs.

"During the past year it has been my privilege to come in contact with many of the manufacturers of the United States, as well as the jobbers, and when I received an invitation from the president of the National Association of Wholesale Grocers to attend their national convention in Buffalo the early part of June, the question came to me, not as to whether I should go there and have a good time, but as to what I should say so as to place the retail interest as represented by myself to the very best advantage before the jobbers and the many manufacturers of the country who were present at the convention, and I had faith and pride enough in our organization and its membership to say before that great body of men that you were equal to any body of business men on the face of the globe.

Co-operation With Jobbing Interest.

"We realize every day the necessity of co-operating with the jobbing interest as well as keeping in the closest touch with the manufacturers of the United States. By so doing, we strengthen our position, and working in co-operation can accomplish much for the benefit of both. Co-operation should be our watchword.

"It may mean a willingness on the part of both to give up a little of what he is pleased to call his right; it may mean that each must recognize the existence of the other, a willingness on the part of both in buying and selling to remain within his own sphere of action.

"We ourselves must do our part in this co-operation to the extent that they may feel that this co-operation is justifiable and of benefit to all concerned. Every retail dealer should co-operate with his neighbor; every wholesale dealer should see it to his advantage to co-operate with the retail interest.

"How much can be done jointly by the wholesaler and retailer to combat the evils that confront us, we little realize, but I am sure that a co-operation of these interests will form a protection and benefit to all concerned.

"The tendency of the times is toward concentration. It is but recently that one of the large mail order houses declared its stock to be forty millions of capital and threw it onto the market for public purchase. That means that small investors throughout the different parts of the country, believing the concern to be a money making affair, are apt to buy its stock, thereby becoming patrons of the concern; and not only is that true, but they use their influence in behalf of the establishment in which they seem to have a moneyed interest.

Legislative Work.

"The National Association of Retail Grocers has done everything in its power to meet conditions as they arise. Much effort was put forth during the Congress to pass the Dixon bill, also to have an amendment to the Bankruptcy Act, to defeat the efforts of the Postal Progress League in their efforts to pass a parcels post bill, and to assist in passing the Pure Food bill.

Department Store Buying.

"I believe that the time has come when the state organization should take up for the locals any difference that might appear between any other concerns that we are doing business with, and the local association affected; that if this cannot be adjusted by them that the National Association should be brought into play; that such a thing as the large department houses buying from firms whom we are trading with at a figure less than the entire trade can buy for, thereby being in a position to retail at practically our cost, should not be tolerated. Such conditions, I say, should be an impossibility, and, if persisted in, the state and nation should be in a position to treat with the manufacturers who are guilty of any such practice, and be able to bring our influence to bear in such a manner as to make such conditions impossible.

"Did you ever stop to think that with all the great business boom, when the manufacturer has received his profit, and the laboring man has steadily had his wages increased, and the prices of commodities have risen in value, that the grocer is plodding along in the same old rut, on the same old percentage basis, and in many cases no percentage at all.

"Every retail merchant would like to see such progress made in the betterment of conditions which affect his business as will permit him to increase his income to the same extent that the organization of labor and capital have increased theirs.

Legislative Influence.

"But this can be done when you are thoroughly organized, and no sooner. Yet, the grocer, through his organization, has forged his way into the front ranks of the business men of to-day; he is respected, looked up to, honored among his fellows; he exerts a great influence through his contact with the great mass of people.

"I have advised the use of this influence in the selection of the men who should represent us in the Congress just elected. There is none of us but that realize the fact that it is easier to accomplish results through pledges made before election than by all of our combined efforts during the session of either State Legislature or National Congress.

"It is time that we look to our own interests. To know that the man who represents us does not cater to the element that is antagonistic to the interests of the business men.

"Many complaints have come to us from the retailers in all sections of the country, some complaining of short count pickles, short weight cheese and a great many complaints of a similar nature."

The Pure Food Law—Exact Weights.

After outlining the work of the association in an unavailing effort to get Congress to place a clause in the pure food law compelling the marking the exact net weight on each package, Mr. Greene said:

"The law does not represent all this association contended for, but it is a long step in advance, and you are to be congratulated on having secured legislation which will cure a large part of the evils which have gradually arisen in the retail trade. After accomplishing so much for ourselves in this bill, I would respectfully recommend that a resolution be adopted and sent to the pure food commissioners assuring them of our support to the fullest extent of seeing that the provisions of the law are enforced, and I would respectfully recommend that everything be done in our power to enforce the law, rather than to undertake to add or amend in any possible manner.

The Premium Evil.

"Could the officers have the support of the entire trade for three months in the opposition to premiums, the evil would be entirely stamped out. I would respectfully call your attention to an answer to a letter received no later than November 16 which contains the following words :

" 'We had therefore commenced packing in a large size family package this brand without chinaware or premium plan of any description. It is our desire to build up a business with this package on the basis of its high quality, and the strong advertising back of it ; thought it could be done. Having a large force of salesmen, we succeeded in putting this package into a large percentage of the country retail stores, but we utterly failed in making the goods sell. In view of the retail grocers' frequently expressed objection of premium goods, we felt justified in asking the help of the retail grocers in making this package without premium a success. Notwithstanding all these efforts, the package in its original form, as stated to you in the conversation referred to, was a failure, simply because the class of consumers we endeavored to reach demanded chinaware with their rolled oats. The experiment cost this company many thousands of dollars. In the light of this experience, the only thing left for us to do, being determined that our package should sell, was to offer it to the consumer in exactly the manner he desired it. As manufacturers, we must offer our wares in the form in which they will appeal to the consumer the strongest. We, therefore, have commenced packing high-grade chinaware in this five-pound package. This means two things. First, that we have complied with your request and have packed and placed our goods on the market without premiums and they have failed to sell. We know they will sell with premiums, consequently, although against your wishes, we feel compelled to go back to our old method of doing business.'

"I have not mentioned the firm name of the package referred to, because I do not think it right to single out any one firm when all others are doing the same thing. I sincerely hope that some way will be presented and the matter thoroughly discussed as to how to proceed effectively. I would say if there is any other side to the question, if there is any one who believes it is a good thing to give premiums with their goods or to handle goods with premiums in, let them bring forth some resolution or make some statement which will throw some other light on the subject.

The Dixon Bill.

"In our efforts to pass the Dixon bill we were not as successful as we had hoped to be, but as soon as we began to agitate the passage of the bill an order was sent out from the authorities saying that the employes should make arrangements for settling their accounts, and we received information, through the Washington association, that one employe had been discharged for nonpayment of his bills. So that you see while not passing the bill, we brought to the attention of the authorities the fact that many of their employes were defrauding their creditors, and brought forth the order that would not have been brought forth had we not taken the steps we did.

Bankruptcy—Amendment or Repeal.

During the last session of Congress there was introduced a bill making it impossible for any one to take advantage of the Bankruptcy Act unless they owed more than $300. While this was not at all satisfactory, yet we felt that it was a great step in the right direction, and immediately began to use our influence and efforts toward the passage of the bill, but while we were assisted by many outside of our own organization, we were unable to remove the bill from the committee.

"We do not wish to injure or interfere with the law as it extends to any business or affair other than our own, but we do not propose to sit idly by and see thousands take advantage of the law to defeat the retail dealer. This law never was enacted for this purpose ; its intent was the very reverse of the use being made of it by people who were seeking to rid themselves of debts incurred for the necessaries of life. This bill was passed to protect an honest merchant. That its intent has been abused there is no question. If this bill can be amended and passed so as to provide for a $500 clause, then I say let us use our influence in the passage of the amendment ; but if we can get no redress in any other way than by total repeal of the law, then I say repeal the law.

MONTHLY COMPETITION.

Window dressing, we believe, is one of the most important parts of the grocery business. It needs encouragement in Canada. For that reason The Canadian Grocer is holding a monthly window dressing competition. Three prizes of $5, $3 and $2 will be awarded each month. Those wishing to enter the competition will send photographs of their windows to THE CANADIAN GROCER, 10 Front St. East, Toronto. accompanied by a written description.

This is a chance for the clerk. No department of the grocery trade offers larger opportunities for advancement than window dressing. If you don't know what you can do, try. If you don't surprise yourself the effort will be a great advantage in any case. No grocer is up to his business if he cannot dress a window. Get into the competition.

National Grange and Parcels Post.

"It will be remembered that at their convention at Atlantic City last year, the National Grange voted $10,000 to advocate and assist in the passage of the Parcels Post Bill. There seems to be but one object in view, and that is the defeat of the express companies, forgetting that the entire retail interest of the United States are placed in the greatest jeopardy—forgetting, or not realizing, that the enormous amount of money drained from the community in which the members of the Grange live, is so much of the life and wealth of that community put into the large trade centres and the coffers of the mail order houses.

"The attack on the express companies is nothing more than a cover for their nefarious designs, thinking that by throwing mud or odium at these companies the real facts would not come to the surface. It is a mystery why a great body of intelligent men and women should not see the true inwardness and iniquity of this measure. It is the duty of the National Association of Retail Grocers to find some means of drawing to the attention of the people the injustice and unfair situation the passing of such a bill would cause. A combination of the retail interests must be brought about in anticipation of this great movement.

Organization.

"Our organization has added greatly to its numbers. Every state has had an increased attendance at their conventions, and the reports have been of the most encouraging nature.

"The future of the association is full of promise, and it will be but a short time before we shall be what our name implies—a great national association of retailers.

"There is a tendency everywhere in all lines of the retail trade to organize. Personal contact by merchants with men who understand thoroughly the needs of organization is what is needed.

New World of Business.

"We are slowly drifting into a new world of business, new methods and ways, and a system of education is necessary to enlighten and educate the retail dealer up to those new methods.

"The success of our association is everywhere apparent, and in the next few years we shall see every town and state in our country organized.

"The passing of the Pure Food Bill with the guaranty clause was a great accomplishment for the retail grocers of the United States. The defeat of the Parcels Post was no less.

"We are no longer a small fraction in organization work, but we are a fast growing and influential body, and it neeeds a firm hand, a conservative mind and withal a great kindness of disposition so that we shall be flexible to all kinds of conditions.

"Don't let us underestimate our own importance, nor any acts of ours interfere with the humanizing influence which our association has sown broadcast through the country.

"Don't let us fritter away our opportunities. Let us give to our officers every assurance of our confidence and the support that will accomplish results. Let us bring our hearts into the sunshine, see nothing but the best intent in everybody, then will our organization be ideal and a source of great good.

"Let us renew our vows to our association and to those who have entrusted their affairs in our hands ; unfurl our banner to the breeze with our fundamental principles on its folds, honesty of purpose, integrity in business, and financial independence. Let us concentrate our energies to fight for that which we think right, and victory will crown our efforts."

F. W. Hudson, president of the Canada Brokerage Co., Toronto, is very ill at his home with pneumonia.

MEN AND METHODS IN THE GROCERY TRADE

Special Staff Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.

A member of The Grocer staff took a couple of days off last week and went visiting. His first objective point was Burlington, but the railway and radial schedule conspired to land him in Hamilton with an hour or two to spare.

W. J. O'Brien has a most attractive store on James street north, and it was the first place to attract The Grocer's attention. It is neat inside and out, and the stock showed careful selection. Altogether, its appearance was most inviting. Mr. O'Brien knew The Grocer well—in fact he believed he ranked among the "oldest subscribers," as he had taken the paper since its first year. Punctuated by the entry of customers, Mr. O'Brien's conversation was an interesting one. He did not believe that December of 1906 was up to the average for Hamilton in the way of trade, but he considered January highly satisfactory. The Grocer was shown a display of Jacob's biscuits in the window, and samples were tested to prove their worth. "This is my third shipment direct from Dublin," said Mr. O'Brien, "all as the result of an advertisement of Jacob's in The Grocer. I find that they sell well, and the demand is growing." Biscuits sell at remarkably low prices in the Old Country, and the prices here are sometimes double what they would be for the corresponding goods in England, but Mr. O'Brien has found that the Briton who takes up his residence in Canada will pay the prices asked, even if they do seem exorbitant to him, just to have what he used to get at home. It is among these people that the imported biscuit has most sale. Mr. O'Brien has found one easy-selling biscuit in the "Alphabet" assortment that came along with the sample case. While the customer places his order for various goods, or talks on general topics, Mr. O'Brien carelessly picks out various biscuit-letters from the little glass box before him on the counter, and gradually assembles them to spell the customer's name, or something else of common interest. The visitor is attracted, and in nearly every case a sale results. Mr. O'Brien says the imported "animal" and "alphabet" biscuits show a much smaller percentage broken in shipment, in spite of the long voyage, than those made on this side of the water.

He went on to say how important he thought it was for every grocer to read the advertisements in the trade paper. "Customers have fancies now and then, and they like to see changes or additions to the stock. The advertisements give the storekeeper ideas." The market quotations, he had found, were not always the closest obtainable, but they gave the general trend of prices, and he told how in his first year as a subscriber to the paper he had saved enough on one deal, by showing "what The Grocer quoted," to pay for his subscription for the rest of his life.

Bain & Adams' window showed to splendid advantage, in its magnificent trim of green and blue grapes—imitation, but so close to nature that you could believe yourself in the vineyard.

The big store of John O. Carpenter, opposite the city hall, looked more than usually enticing, but the customers were lined up two deep inside the store and The Grocer man deferred his visit with J.O.C. until he goes that way again.

Burlington claimed some time from The Grocer. A village of a few hundreds, with half-a-dozen grocery stores, and every one of them doing well, deserves attention. Burlington has a large Summer population, and the business brought in by it is sufficient to make up for a dullness of considerable length during the Winter months, but in reality, although trade does fall off with the close of the Summer season, all the merchants state that there is no really dull period in the Burlington year. The village is only seven or eight miles from Hamilton, and the Radial Railway makes the city easily accessible, so that, as C. N. Murphy, whose store is near the tracks, remarked, it is necessary to sell at Hamilton prices or lose the trade. A large number of Burlington men have business in Hamilton every day, and although not actually disloyal to Burlington, they are easily tempted to buy in the city. Mr. Murphy pays special attention to the tobacco and pipe trade, while in the Summer he adds a confectionery department to his grocery business and dispenses cooling draughts to the thirsty Summer visitor.

J. Galloway & Son have a large general store nearly opposite the Gazette office. They know The Grocer, and gave its representative a pleasant reception, but had little to say for publication.

A neat store on the corner, near Galloway's, is conducted by Mr. Hubbert, formerly in business on James St., Hamilton. Mr. Hubbert is strongly opposed to migration from the country or small town into the larger cities. His move in the opposite direction has satisfied him in every way. His expenses are small, and his trade is growing; he had a successful year during 1906, and looks forward to better things still.

W. Kerns & Co. have the largest store in Burlington, and it is a credit to the town. Mr. Kerns was enthusiastic about this year's January trade, and stated that collections during the month had been exceptionally good. The flour and feed business had greatly increased. He believes that this is due in large measure to the fact that he now buys direct from Manitoba millers. Mr. Kerns also put in a claim to be ranked among the oldest Canadian Grocer subscribers. He knows the president of the MacLean Company personally, and is much interested in the new venture, The Financial Post. The visitor was particularly struck with the attention paid to customers by the staff of the Kerns store. It is the kind that makes you want to call again.

The Grocer was sorry to note that W. Little, of J. E. Lawrence's store, on the lake front, was suffering from a bad attack of la grippe. In spite of his cold, Mr. Little proved an interesting conversationalist. He thought the window-dressing department was an especially good feature of the paper.

Taylor Brothers have a good-looking store, on the lake front, where they have been located nearly a year, having opened in March last. An authority in the town says they are hustlers.

The electric railway timetable made it impossible for The Grocer representative to stop at Bronte. Accordingly he went through to Oakville, and it did not take long for him to learn that there is "something doing" there. The business section of the town will gain a splendid addition when the new store of Jas. L. Hewson reaches completion. Mr. Hewson was interviewed in the midst of building confusion, as he spends considerable time overseeing operations, in order that the results may be completely satisfactory. Mr. Hewson's old store would do credit to any business community, but the new building will totally eclipse it. He expects to be in the new premises by the middle of February, and asked The Grocer to call when everything is complete. The store front is particularly attractive. It is the work of the Luxfer Prism Co., Toronto, and will give the window-dresser the best possible chance to display his skill. A pressed metal ceiling and up-to-date fixtures and equipment will make the interior all that could be desired.

W. Joyce, general merchant, and T. Harker, grocer, reported a satisfactory Christmas trade. The Joyce store is a large one, and has a good situation, being nearly opposite the postoffice. Mr. Harker has occupied for the past year or so the store formerly conducted by Coote & Tuck.

The late W. B. Smith, of the Davidson & Hay Company, Toronto, received unstinted, heartfelt praise from Mr. and Mrs. Gates, of G. Gates' grocery store. Both had known him for many years in his capacity of traveler for the firm mentioned, and had come to look upon him as a real friend. On the very morning that the announcement of his death appeared in the papers, they received a card from Mr. Smith, stating that he would call upon them that afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Gates were not the only ones who referred to the sad suddenness of Mr. Smith's death, but their conversation testified in a marked degree to the esteem in which he was held by the trade as a whole. Mrs. Gates stated that although in no especial hurry to dispose of the business, both she and her husband feel that they have reached an age when they have earned the right to a rest, and should a favorable opportunity occur, they will in all probability retire from active business life. For the past few months Mr. Gates has been far from well, and his ill-health makes the work of conducting the store very hard on Mrs. Gates.

The Grocer met George Moulton on the street, and was introduced by another citizen of the town. Mr. Moulton is master of one of the larger steamers in the Toronto Ferry Co.'s fleet. He is engaged in this capacity during the Summer months, when the grocery business is carried on by Mrs. Moulton, but in the Winter Mr. Moulton directs his energies along business channels, and apparently makes an equally good helmsman.

The Freeston store, near the old music hall, has a most attractive appearance, and Staley's grocery and confectionery shop also has an inviting look about it.

John Wales' is one of the older firms in Oakville, and does a large business in the flour and feed line.

Dave Lebar is one of the few storekeepers who have ventured to establish themselves on the west side of the 16-Mile creek. He is a new man in the trade, and is certainly progressive.

Henry Wilson has one of the largest and oldest-established stores in the town, and is also one of the oldest subscribers to The Canadian Grocer. Like a good many others, Mr. Wilson is a firm supporter of anything produced by the MacLean Publishing Co., but, unlike most of them, he believes in passing on his knowledge of a good thing when he strikes it. He has been especially interested in The Busy Man's Magazine, and as a result has added several subscribers to its list. He brought it to the attention of the Library Board who immediately added it to their list of periodicals. The Financial Post is another paper which has attracted Mr. Wilson's attention. In the disastrous fire which visited Oakville four or five years ago, the Wilson store was totally destroyed, so that the present building is practically new. Mr. Wilson reports a splendid Christmas trade, and an extraordinarily good January business. He had noticed that certain quotations in The Grocer were not always what they should be, but could quite understand how difficult it would be to have them perfect in all lines, all over the various provinces, and realized that in some cases actual opposition had to be overcome in order to obtain quotations at all. He regretted that the Oakville grocers were not organized, that they might do their share in fighting the various combines which are making the retailers' life more miserable every day. Mr. Wilson has been suffering from a prolonged attack of rheumatism, but The Grocer was pleased to hear that he felt considerably better now than he did at this time last year.

In Port Credit, the general store of Hamilton Brothers is by far the largest establishment, and its equipment is in keeping with it. Among other things, there is a Dayton computing scale, and a Bowser oil and gasoline tank. Mr. Hamilton says they would not be without anything that saves time and labor, and they find they have struck two good allies in the articles mentioned. The Hamilton brothers subscribe for three MacLean papers: Hardware and Metal, The Dry Goods Review, and The Canadian Grocer. They report an excellent Christmas trade, and have found January, 1907, better than the same month last year. The Toronto & York Radial Railway now runs from the city to Port Credit, and The Grocer was interested to learn the effect of this upon trade in the town. Mr. Hamilton believes that not only will there be no desertion of home market for those of the city, through frequent railway service, but that the population of the town, especially in the way of Summer visitors, will actually increase. During the past Summer, even the daily visitors from Toronto increased receipts to an appreciable extent.

C. Robinson was quite satisfied with the Christmas trade, although the larger part of his business is in flour and feed, which is not greatly affected by the season.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

CALGARY.

Mr. Murdoch, who has been traveling the west for Chase & Sanborn coffee, along with his brother, has taken over the grocery carried on by Brown & Knight. Mr. Brown is now a partner in the firm of Donnelly, Watson & Brown, who have bought the business of Dingle & Stewart, wholesale commission agents. Mr. Knight is representing Plunket & Savage, wholesale fruit merchants.

The Imperial Cash Grocery Co. have opened a store in the Imperial Block. Messrs. Wilson and Holmes are proprietors.

Mr. Garrett has opened a store in the opera block, Centre street. Mr. Hull has had stores fitted up in this block and rooms above.

Calgary bank clearings for week ending 17th inst., were $1,209,737.

KINGSTON.

In the death of Alexander Gunn, ex-M.P., and post master of Kingston, a deep feeling of regret is felt in the breasts of all Kingstonians, especially merchants, and outside of Kingston as well. A general favorite, he had a kind and encouraging word to all, children in particular. As a wholesale grocer his genial manner and good advice always drew men to him. It was a pleasure and profit to meet him. He was not the kind that would try to palm off inferior goods on you. You could depend on his word. All who can say "I am that kind of a man" hold up their right hand. Well, never mind, we won't count this time. Alexander Gunn was a Scotchman by birth. He became a partner with the late John Carruthers in 1854. Mr. Carruthers retiring in 1872, a new company was formed, under the name of A. Gunn & Co., consisting of A. Gunn, Samuel Harper and W. G. Craig, which continued till 1905. He had the honor of defeating the late lamented Sir John A. Macdonald.

The Kingston Locomotive Works, at present employing between 600 and 700 men, are to be enlarged, and will take in the old-established and well-known wholesale grocery warehouse of W. G. Craig & Co.

The Board of Trade are taking up the summer hotel problem, and it is to be hoped the bubble won't burst this time.

The Kingston Dairy School is in full blast, and with 50 students from all parts of the world makes a busy scene and is well worth a visit. The first impression one feels on entering is the great cleanliness everywhere. The students and instructors wear spotless white caps and coats, and it certainly gives one a relish for cheese and butter to see how cleanly and carefully it is handled. Prof. Mitchell, as head, is a busy man, and with Prof. Publow, in the cheese department, and Mr. Stonehouse, of Port Perry, looking after the butter, you can rest assured of good results. The Victoria Creamery, of Lindsay, is sending all its cream down to be made into butter, as the dairy cannot get sufficient from local sources to meet its demands.

The Government Dairy School at Kingston is a fine brick building, and its large lawn, with choice tufts of shrubbery here and there make it a pleasant spot to look at in summer time.

The storm of a week ago played havoc along our water front. Cakes of ice are piled up for miles along the shore, in places as high at 30 feet. Our Board of Works were down feasting their eyes on iced cakes and jam, and the engineer is preparing plans and estimates for reconstruction.

Jim the Grocer thinks the Government should hold a thorough examination of canned goods. Some of the overripe tomatoes put up by some canners are not fit for human food. The death rate in Canada will certainly be increased if something is not done. The cheap lead-lacquered tin is responsible for a lot of the trouble. Nearly every can of corn or tomatoes you open, you find the bright tin off. Where does it go? Why, into the fruit or vegetable, then into the consumer. Retailers cannot be too careful in choosing canned goods, but if it is true that labels are put on indiscriminately, what are we going to do?

Owing to the severe weather of the past few weeks, our local markets have been very small and prices consequently high. The local potato supply in stores is practically exhausted, and unless moderate weather comes people will have to use up some of the stale Saratago chips on the grocery shelves. Butter is worth 25 to 30 cents a lb.; eggs, 28 to 40 cents a dozen.

Nature sometimes shows little mercy, and Jack Frost got to work at the water pipes in Phil Haffner's grocery and cracked, ripped and tore them to pieces and spoiled a cellar full of potatoes and apples and good things to eat. We feel sorry, for Phil is a good fellow.

B. Derbyshire, one of Odessa's leading general storekeepers, has bought the handsome residence of the late Lawyer Mudie here, and will move in shortly and take a well earned rest. No one is more deserving of rest and recreation than the storekeeper who works and worries from morning till night in feeding the hungry public.

ST. CATHARINES.

G. & J. McLean have made improvements to their building on James St., and now carry a large assortment of first-class groceries. These enterprising brothers, since taking over the business conducted by their mother for many years, have greatly enlarged their scope and increased their patronage.

John J. Timmons is succeeding remarkably well in his new venture as a retail grocer.

Mr. Buchanan has transferred his baking and confectionery business from Geneva street to James street, where he has enlarged premises, with greater facilities for his works, and a modern showroom.

Large gangs of men are at work cutting ice, which is now seven inches thick, and with teams are storing their supplies for the coming season. Brewers and hotel proprietors who have ice houses, are laying in their own supply.

Edward D. Voisard, a former wholesale grocer, but later manager of the Sterling Bank in St. Catharines, has retired from that position and is living retired.

Frederick Howse, for a number of years past a buyer for the Simcoe Canning Company in this city, who was recently appointed a sessional writer for the Ontario Legislature in Toronto, has entered on his new duties.

John Austin has opened a general meat market in the Bunting block, on King street.

There is no marked change in market quotations.

NEW FOUNDLAND.

It is w ith sincere regret that we chronicle the death of Josiah Manuel, of Exploits, who died in St. Johns at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. C. Crosbie. Mr. Manuel was a typical Newfoundlander whose home was always open to his friends. He was one of the best-posted men on the colony's business to be found, and was the friend of rich and poor. Mr. Manuel was a man whose word was as good as his note 365 days in the year. His genial countenance will be missed. He leaves a widow, two sons and two daughters. The Grocer extends heartfelt sympathy to the family.

R. D. MacRae was in the city for a few days recently. Mr. MacRae was one of the largest shippers of the staple from Labrador this year.

Your correspondent is in receipt of a very neat calendar from the Magic baking powder commissioner, T. T. Cartwright. May his shadow never grow less !

Old Home tea has made a hit here. It is a very popular tea.

Boyd & Simms, of St. Anthony, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Boyd will continue the business.

Several of our outport merchants will leave for Nova Scotia and Gloucester in search of schooners to prosecute the fishery this year.

Sydney Blandford has been appointed agent for Newfoundland for the Arcadia Fire Insurance Company.

C. F. Taylor, who was on a short trip to New York, returned by the express.

W. E. Bearns, of Haymarket Square, reports business as exceptionally good, his Christmas trade being very large. Mr. Bearns carries a large stock of all kinds of groceries.

W. Duff, the manager of the Atlantic Fish Cos., Limited, who has been at Bay of Islands for the herring fishery, says his company will buy all the herring offered, which looks as though the colony could get along without the Americans. Mr. Duff returns to headquarters at Lunenburg in a few days well satisfied with the year's business. Mr. Duff is a son of the president of the Wm. Duff Sons, Limited, Carbonear, one of our most successful outport houses.

A. W. Lake, of Fortune, arrived in the city for a few days. He reports a good year.

J. J. St. John, the popular Duckworth St. merchant, has been under the weather but is reported much better.

R. Wright & Son are pushing the sale of Marcella coffee, which is meeting with good demand.

Hearn & Co. have just received the first shipment of new raisins, which they are offering to the trade.

Job Bros. & Co, are offering quite a number of schooners for sale.

T. & M. Winter report the demand for 5-Roses flour as larger than ever.

E. J. Horwood has received a large shipment of poultry, which he is offering at attractive prices. Mr. Horwood does a large business and is very popular.

Hon. G. Knowling is offering special inducements on tea and coffee.

Frank McNamara has a large shipment of all kinds of cattle, feed, oats, etc., just arrived.

Thos. Smyth Co., Ltd., are offering a large quantity of fruit, tobaccos, cigars, biscuits etc. This company handles large quantities of Lang's biscuits.

T. & M. Winter have just received another large shipment of Royal yeast cakes and Magic baking powder. They report their sales for Gillett's goods as far in excess of any previous year.

Geo. Neal, the wholesale grocervman, has some fine prices on poultry. He says business was never better. –

NOVA SCOTIA.

Yarmouth shippers of lobsters have had a busy season. Every steamer for Boston takes 200 to 300 crates of lobsters. The prices in Boston make it a very profitable business. The lobster canning trade has also had a successful season.

Wm. Law & Co. are doing a large business these days, their traveler, Mr. Wyman, covering the South Shore every three weeks.

Dickie & McGrath, of Tusket, are cleaning up their last year's busines. They report a good year for lumber, and are making larger calculation for 1907.

Parker, Eakins & Co. have received a shipment of molasses in small barrels which are very popular sellers.

A recent visitor to the city was T. T. Cartwright, special Royal yeast cake ambassador. This was Mr. Cartwright's first visit in five years. His many friends in the grocery and other trades were pleased to see him and no doubt his order book showed that the trade had not forgotten him.

A. W. Banks, the popular representative of Emerson & Fisher, wholesale hardware dealers, has been doing the shore. His many friends—and they are legion—will be sorry to hear that he had to return home to St. John, being considerably under the weather. Everyone wishes him a speedy recovery.

W. Ross, representing a Quebec dry goods house, is making his annual January trip around the South Shore. He reports business good.

Tom Elliss, representing E. J. Spinney, hardware, Yarmouth, is doing the shore. Tom's trade is steadily increasing.

Some fine improvements have been made of late to stores around the shore. We note particularly those of W. McMillan, Lockport, and A. Cox, Shelbourne. These stores it would be hard to beat anywhere. Both do a large business.

The King Hotel, Lunenburg, is one of the best equipped hotels in the Maritime Provinces and is very popular with "the boys." Jim King knows how to run a hotel.

The Halifax and South Shore Railroad, part of the Mackenzie & Mann system, is a great boon to the merchants and travelers on the South Shore. Its trains are run on time, and with first-class accommodation. They have built very comfortable stations all along the line, which are kept warm and clean.

One of the most attractive stores around the south shore of Nova Scotia is that of H. C. Barnaby & Son, Bridgewater. The goods are displayed with judgment and taste.

CHATHAM.

An esteemed citizen, a successful business man and a veteran Oddfellow passed away on Monday, January 28th, in the person of Richard Wing. Deceased was born in Hertfordshire, England, over 75 years ago, and came to America in 1855, removing from Detroit to Chatham 42 years ago. For most of that time he conducted a bakery in the city ; for the first 12 years in partnership with his son, William, now of Detroit, and latterly alone. He was for 35 years a member of the I.O.O.F., occupying the post of noble grand in 1866, and receiving some 10 years ago, the veteran's jewel for 25 years' membership. He is survived by a widow and six children. Edwin E. Wing, baker, of this city, is a son, while the wife of Fred W. Ward, the popular clerk in H. A. Andrews' grocery, is a daughter. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 from the late residence, Centre street, to Maple Leaf cemetery, Rev. W. L. Rutledge, of Park street Methodist church, officiating.

The Kent Canning Co. will shortly establish a branch factory in Amherstburg. Hugh Malcolmson, president of the company, states that this will not in the least interfere with the local concern, the branch being merely necessitated by the extension of the business.

On Feb. 1st Harry A. Andrew, formerly of Gordon's dry goods establishment, assumed charge of Heyward's grocery, latterly conducted by Mr. Geo. S. Heyward, whose father, the late Andrew Heyward, formerly of Morpeth, founded the business many years ago. The deal was put through in December last. Mr. Heyward becomes local representative of the Queen City Oil Co.

Jos. A. Wilson, the Queen street grocer, has been reappointed by the Whitney Government to the West Kent License Board.

A well-attended meeting of the Chatham Fruit Growers' Association was held in Harrison hall on the 23rd, a number of matters of interest being discussed. The company reported a successful year. The old officers were unanimously re-elected.

NEW BRUNSWICK MERCHANTS AGAINST C.O.D. PARCEL POST

News of the Grocery Trade in the Province by the Sea—Markets Quiet—Prosperous Times—Death of a Promising Young Wholesaler.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 26, 1907.

Probably the cold weather, which was succeeded by heavy snow storms, accounts in a measure for the dull markets of the past week. Sales have been slow and prices generally steady. Eggs continue scarce and are quoted at from 22 to 30 cents. Butter is firm, 21 to 26 cents being asked. The majority of the wholesalers and reatilers have finished stock-taking and are well pleased with the showing of the past year. Steady markets and good trade conditions all over the Maritime Provinces make last year's business almost a record-breaker, and the present year is expected to be an even better one

It is only necessary to visit the various wholesale houses here and note their prosperous appearance, the increased number of employes, better equipped warehouses, etc, to realize that this is indeed St. John's growing time, and what applies to this city is applicable to the whole province. From all quarters comes the same favorable report.

There is considerable opposition here to the proposal of introducing the c.o.d. system in the post-office department. The country stores especially look with distinct disfavor on the contemplated action of the postal authorities. At a recent meeting of the Board of Trade the matter was considered. The proposition to introduce a cheaper parcels post was favorably commented upon. Several of the members expressed themselves as being of the opinion that the prevailing postage rates on percels were excessive and that a lowering of the same would be advantageous to all. The second part of the contemplated bill was almost as unanimously opposed. It was thought that the retailer was at the present time at a sufficiently great disadvantage in competing with mail order concerns without the post-office aiding by a c.o.d. system. The matter was finally postponed for future consideration.

A very interesting case that has been attracting considerable attention from grocers in this section of the Dominion, and will no doubt be of interest to dealers everywhere was heard in the exchequer court here last week. What is perhaps the most interesting feature of the case is the fact that the dealer who claims he was forced to pay a higher duty than should have been charged could only get redress through the exchequer court, the cost of the suit amounting to about three times the amount sued for. According to the law the plaintiff has to pay his own costs thus paying out about $4,000 to recover $1,308.

The case is that of L. G. Crosby vs. the King. It commenced before Mr. Justice Burbidge on the 16th and continued three days.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley and A. I. Trueman, K.C., represented the plaintiff, and E. H. McAlpine represented the Crown.

I. W. Taussig, of the Taussig Company, New York, the real plaintiff in the suit, was present with his solicitor, Leo Levy, of New York.

In May, 1904, L. G. Crosby imported from Taussig & Company, 116 casks of molasses. He represented at the customs that the molasses was in the original packages in which it had been shipped from the port of production in Porto Rico, and that it had not been mixed during transportation, and the authorities accordingly entered the molasses as liable to a duty of one and three-quarter cents a gallon. They subsequemntly claimed, however, that the molasses had not been received here in the same packages in which it had been originally shipped, and that it had been mixed during transportation. Mr. Crosby was, therefore, required to pay the higher customs rate of three quarters of a cent. a pound, which increased the duty by $1,308. The action of the customs officials was sustained by the minister of customs, but Mr. Crosby, not being satisfied, the minister referred the matter to the exchequer court. A number of witneses were examined on both sides. The plaintiff claimed that the goods were not tampered with in transportation. Among the Crown witnesses was Mr. V. Paddock, analyst, who testified to having found a large percentgge of sulphur in the molasses. In summing up the evidence the judge intimated that the claimants had shown that the molasses had not been mixed, and most of the argument was therefore directed toward the question as to whether in New York the molasses had been placed in other packages than those in which it had been originally shipped from Fajardo. Judgment was reserved.

A large concourse of friends followed the remains of Harry H. Fairweather to their last resting place last week. Very general regret was expressed when the announcement of the death of this well-known groceryman was made on Friday. He passed away on Thursday evening at his home, King St. east, about 10 o'clock. He was in his thirty-eight year. He was a son of the late C. H. Fairweather, one of the founders of the firm of Hall & Fairweather. He had been connected with the firm of Hall & Fairweather for twenty-one years. For over two years he represented the firm on the road, traveling in both Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Since the organization of the firm into a joint stock ocmpany the deceased had held the position of vice-president. A few years ago he contracted tuberculosis and for the past eighteen months had been in declining health. He sought improvement at various health resorts and last winter paid a visit to the West Indies. He was, however, unable this winter to leave his home. Mr. Fairweather possessed in a marked degree the faculty of making and holding friendships and in his work on the road as the representative of his firm was one of the most popular men traveling out of St. John. He was bright and cheerful in his disposition and won the esteem of all who knew him. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. He is survived by his mother, two sisters, Miss Fairweather residing at home, and Mrs. Alfred Morrisey, also of this city, and one brother, Frank R., of Tilley & Fairweather.

C. B. Duffy, of Tipperary (Ireland), formerly manager of the Finn Valley Agricultural and Dairy Company, was in the city a few days ago on his way to New York to visit relatives.

Mr. Duffy has been in Canada for nearly a year, making a study of dairying, with a view to bettering his own standing as an agriculturist. He is a graduate of the Royal College of Science, Dublin, and his faith in Irish institutions is great.

Mr. Duffy said that the weak point in our creamery system was that there was no provision to prevent farmers sending contaminated milk to be made into butter. He said this was a matter requiring legislation, as well as education. Asked about Ireland, Mr. Duffy said that conditions there had wonderfully improved within the past ten years. The land policy instituted by the Government had worked out well. In dairying great progress had been made. Irish butter now rivalled the famous Danish product.

The community was shocked on Tuesday to hear of the tragic death of Roy A. Nobles, a former representative of the McCormick Biscuit Manufacturing Company. He had been employed as a checker in connection with the winter port business and was burned to death in an oil shed on the docks. It is believed that he went into the shed and fell asleep after lighting a pipe and in some manner set fire to the building, which burned like a torch and prohibited all attempt at rescue. He was in his twenty-first year and had a large circle of friends. His father, D. W. Nobles, mother, a sister and brother survive.

SOAP-MAKING AND THE SITUATION IN CANADA

The soap situation in Canada is one of the things the grocer should keep his eye on. Pretty nearly everything that enters into the manufacture of soap has greatly advanced in price. Tallow is up 50 per cent. within the year. Rosin is higher. Soda is up. The wood for boxes has gone away up, and the price of labor has advanced perhaps more than anything else. Under these conditions it was only to be expected that the price of soap would advance or else that the manufacturer would take other means of protecting his profits. There are two other means, reducing the size of the bar, as the English soap trust did, or reducing the quality of the soap.

The weight of a bar of soap is easily determined and every grocer should know what he is selling a customer. Indeed, it would not be a bad idea if the manufacturers were required to state plainly on a bar or its wrapper the net weight of soap. Like bread, it would weigh less as the moisture in it evaporated, but the green weight could be stated.

The quality is a matter for chemical analysis.

To-day few industries are more thoroughly scientific than soap-making. The soap industry as we know it to-day is a development of comparatively recent date. Twenty-five years ago the ashman with his high-boxed wagon traveled the rural roads and gathered the wood ashes, saved against his coming. For these he would barter a few bars of very brown, resinous soap of his own boiling. Modern soap-making is based on the work of two French chemists, Leblanc, who made soda from salt, and more especially Chevreul, who worked out the chemistry of fats. That was about the beginning of the last century.

Soap is a salt made by the action of an alkali upon the acid in fats. This action is termed saponification. Alkalies will act similarily upon the component acids of resin. The chemical operation involved in the cleansing action of soap is not yet very well understood, but the results are supposed to be obtained by the emulsifying action upon the greasy matters which always accompany dirt in clothes.

Soap is referred to in the Bible, and Aristophanes, a Greek writer, who lived about 434 B.C., mentions it. A soap-boiler's plant was found in the ruins of Pompeii. But the art seems to have made little advance until the chemical discoveries mentioned were made. There are a lot of substances used as fillers to cheapen commoner soaps. Water is one of them. A well-made sample of laundry soap will average about 20 per cent. water, but in low-grade soaps the water may reach even 35 per cent. of the whole.

Resin is used as a filler also, but a certain amount of it is necessary. The best laundry soap is made from tallow, and it requires resin to make it stand up and give it washing quality.

Makers of high grade soaps cannot afford to endanger the reputation of years by lowering their quality and so the price has advanced of Surpeise, Eclipse, and the laundry soap of the Crown Mfg. Co., of Winnipeg. The English soap trust was a sixty-million-dollar affair and started in to corner the market for raw material and that's what commenced the advance. There are still some manufacturers in Canada who have not advanced prices. It will be interesting to see how they will meet the situation.

MONTREAL BOARD OF TRADE.

George Caverhill, of Caverhill & Learmont, was unanimously elected president of the Montreal Board of

GEO. CAVERHILL

Trade at the annual meeting held Tuesday afternoon. Other officers are: 1st vice-president, Thos. J. Drummond; 2nd vice-president, Farquhar Robertson; treasurer, C. B. Esdaile. Members of council: A. A. Ayer, J. R. Binning, Geo. L. Cains, W. W. Craig, J. S. N. Dougall, Geo. A. Kohl, J. P. Mullarkey, J. L. McCulloch, Edgar McDougall, Alex. McLaurin, Alex. Orsali, and J. A. Richardson. Members of Board of Arbitration: Jas. Carruthers, Sir George Drummond, Geo. E. Drummond, W. I. Gear, E. B. Greenshields, A. J. Hodgson, F. H. Mathewson, R. W. MacDougall, Alex. McFee, John McKergow, Alex. Ramsay and Jas. Thom.

BOAR'S HEAD ADVANCED.

Boar's Head compound lard has been advanced ⅛c. Prices now are: Tierces, 9¾c.; half barrels, 10c.; tubs, 10c.; 20-pound pails, $2.05; 20-pound tin pails, $1.95; cases of 3's, 10¾c.; cases of 5's, 10⅝c.; cases of 10's, 10½c.

SEEDED PRUNES.

There's something new in prunes. It is a seeded prune, and the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. are putting it on the market in Canada for Guggenhime & Co., who have purchased the sole rights of the machine that does the trick. The seeded prunes are put up in pound cartons, and a pound of them is equal to a pound and a third of ordinary prunes. It is claimed that the seeded prune is going to revolutionize the business, because it will make the fruit much more available for pies, puddings, etc. They will retail at about two pounds for a quarter.

SENATOR DANIEL GILLMOR.

Montreal Coffee Man in the Red Chamber—Thorough Business Man.

Senator Daniel Gillmor is one of the latest appointments to the Senate of

SENATOR DANIEL GILLMOR

Canadian Manager of Chase & Sanborn, Coffee Importers, Montreal.

Canada. That the new senator is a man who will satisfactorily and honorably fill the place, nobody who knows Daniel Gillmor will doubt. He is a business man of experience, one who has met and dealt with people in all parts of the country. He makes friends everywhere he goes—and keeps them, which every politician cannot always manage.

Although his business claims a great deal of his attention, in fact the greater part of it, for he is Canadian manager for Chase & Sanborn, the coffee importers and roasters, and has numerous other interests, yet he finds some time to devote to political matters. Politics run in the Gillmor family, for his father was a senator before him. In 1904 Mr. Gillmor opposed Mr. Ganong, M.P., in the race to represent Charlotte county. He was beaten, but made a great fight, considering the short time, three weeks, at his disposal before the elections came off.

Mr. Gillmor is a native of St. George, County Charlotte, where he first saw the light in 1849. There he received his education and entered the business field. He became a partner in the firm of O'Brien & Gillmor. It is some twenty years since he first came to Montreal, and during that period he has had a wide experience with men and things, experience which he will find of the greatest value to him in his new post.

A WINNIPEG TRIUMPH.

Winnipeg retailers have an organization that does things; they are not content with holding meetings and making speeches which result in no definite action. They are organized because they believe that things can be accomplished by united effort which would be impossible without it; and they have proved the reasonableness of their belief.

Reference has been made before in these columns to the fact that Winnipeg retailers—and particularly grocers and butchers—have been put to great expense to have their garbage removed. Garbage is removed by the city from all private residences, but the dealers were forced to remove it themselves. They were held up by the scavengers and several stores were paying $4 to $5 per week for service that was very unsatisfactory. This grievance was taken up by the retail associations in the city and some time ago Secretary Coulson and a large deputation of dealers waited on the Winnipeg city council and asked that the city remove all garbage from stores and apartment blocks free of charge. The request was taken into serious consideration, and now the announcement is made that the city will remove garbage free of charge for three months. If the cost should be found to be too great to charge against the regular business tax a small special tax may be charged. In any event the city will assume the full responsibility for the removal of garbage and this was the main contention. Dealers were unable to get satisfactory scavenger service and were liable to fines in consequence. All this has been changed by united effort. The moral is obvious.

COMPULSORY INSPECTION NECESSARY.

Connected with the closing session of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's convention, held recently in Ottawa, there arose a small incident which, happily, was settled in a right and satisfactory manner. A few of the cheese men present made a protest against the compulsory inspection of factories. Just why they found it necessary to do so is not at first sight apparent. It is against the interests of factorymen to oppose anything which ensures the maintenance of high quality in all cheese of Canadian manufacture. Systematic inspection of factories by competent Government inspectors is one of the surest means of keeping up the high standard of Canadian cheese. Let the cheese go out of the country in poor, and possibly unsanitary, condition, owing to lack of cleanliness in the factories, and in a very short time Canada's growing trade in dairy products will come to a standstill. One black-eye such as this would undo the work of years. The majority of the delegates present at the convention favored compulsory inspection; favored it and showed in a practical manner that they did so. They passed a resolution calling upon the Provincial Government to approve of a complete system of factory inspection. By all means let us have compulsory inspection!

WESTERN RETAIL CONVENTION.

Western retailers, whether members of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada or not, should make a point of attending the annual meeting to be held in the board room of the association in Winnipeg on February 14th. Business of importance will come up for discussion and it is desirable that a representative gathering of western retailers should be present.

GROCERY TRADE NEEDS A LEADER

A grocer is a grocer pretty much over North America and trade conditions are not much affected by the international boundary line. In the States, however, there is a powerful organization, the International Association of Retail Grocers, composed of state organizations, which in turn are made up of hundreds of local associations. The tenth annual meeting was held last week in Dallas, Texas.

In Canada there is here and there a local organization. But to what purpose.? A speaker at Dallas said the locals were like the letters of the alphabet. Singly they were of little moment but together they were the greatest force in civilization.

Some grocers in Canada are alive to the importance of organization. They will read with interest President Greene's address showing the year's activities. The association took an active part in the pure food law campaign; it has fought the mail order houses' parcels post schemes; it has agitated for a better bankruptcy law, and it has dealt with many internal trade questions.

Why hasn't Canada such an organization.? Because the grocers here are not ambitious enough. The need to-day is for a grocer with broad conceptions of the duties and functions of the grocery trade and with energy to take the lead for a national organization.

SIC 'EM.

"The trouble with some business men," remarked a manufacturer who is well known for his enterprise and business enthusiasm, "is that they are lacking in the quality of energy. A man cannot do anything in business unless he has got some energy about him, and the more he has the better. There are some dogs that will bark at a tramp but the moment the tramp makes a movement towards them they will turn tail and get around the corner of a house. Take a fox terrier, on the other hand, and sic him on, and he gets right down to business and sails right in. When I hear business men talking in gloomy tones and displaying apathy, I just say, "Sic 'em. Sail in and tackle your difficulties."

P. C. LARKIN FOR SENATOR.

The Globe's Ottawa despatches of Tuesday contain the interesting information that P. C. Larkin of Salada tea fame is mentioned among others for the vacancy in the Senate, occasioned by the death of Senator Dobson. As an aggressive and successful business man Mr. Larkin would be a notable addition to the august body in the Red Chamber.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Fish—Revised.

Teas—Very firm.

Evaporated apples—Strong.

Montreal, Jan. 31, 1907.

Business during the week was not so good as it has been of late. Orders are very fair in size, but are not numerous. Grocers are apparently well supplied for the present. Probably most of the larger Montreal jobbers are just as glad that this is the case for they are now in the depths of stock-taking. The grocery market, taken as a whole, is practically without feature. In canned goods there is little that is new. Teas are exceedingly firm, and it is not now possible to buy at anything but good, round figures. Sugar is steady at prices quoted. There is not, from present indications, likely to be any change in prices. When figures do move, however, it is likely that they will go upwards. Currants are advancing slowly but surely. Reported as arriving in the city this week are a few lots of seeded raisins. Nuts are without change. Evaporated apples are still quoted around the same figure, but an advance is likely to occur any day. Beans are still firm at quoted prices.

Collections are said by some houses to be satisfactory, but other jobbers say they have the greatest difficulty in collecting their outstanding accounts at the moment.

SUGAR—That sugar has about reached bottom is the general opinion expressed in the trade. It is not thought that prices will go any lower. From present indications the market will likely hold steady for some little time, but, of course, there is no telling what may happen to change the course of events.

TEAS—Continued firmness characterizes the tea market. The manner in which the situation holds continually strong is surprising. All teas, practically, are stiff as to price, and it is difficult, if not impossible, to obtain goods unless good, high prices are paid. Ceylon greens are high. They are now three and four cents higher than they were eight or nine months ago. Japans are also exceedingly firm.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—Trading is rather quiet, but there is always something of interest going on in this market. Spot stocks of currants are still very limited, both locally and in New York. Liverpool prices have been adhanced 1s. owing to the fact that the 10 per cent. reserve stock in Greece is now being drawn upon. Some arrivals of raisins are reported this week. Stocks, however, are not large. Valencias are now about cleaned up. Inquiries for seeded have been numerous and some sales are said to have been made at good figures. In California, according to one authority, there are at present not more than 150 cars of raisins and 500 cars of prunes. Filberts are a little lower, but otherwise nuts are without change.

CANNED GOODS

Montreal—Considering the season, business in canned goods may be considered satisfactory. Grocers are in most sections well supplied, but occasional orders are received for certain lines in need of replenishing. There is some talk to the effect that the consumption of Canadian and American canned salmon has fallen off in England to a great extent since the Chicago disclosures and the general upheaval which followed. This news is late in arriving at this side, to say the least.

Toronto—Some jobbers here report an unusual demand for canned goods, both salmon and vegetables. The consumption of salmon it is thought, is still being increased by the distaste for canned meats following the Chicago revelations. The high price of fresh meats and pork products is another factor. Some jobbers think they see an increased consumption of peas due to the low price as compared with corn or tomatoes. The firm feeling in regard to tomatoes continues and some jobbers are demanding the recent advance for them, although most lines are still selling at old prices. Some fruits are getting scarce and holders are inclined to advance prices. Blueberries are quoted as high as 95 to $1, though they are still obtainable at old prices. There was a sale of a carload of gals. for Winnipeg at $4,25 f.o.b. Toronto. Peaches also are being held by some for higher prices, $2 for 2's yellow, $3 for 2½'s yellow and $3.10 for 3's yellow. Strawberries are said to be changing hands amongst jobbers at $2.50.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Most markets steady.

Sugar—Uncertain.

Good demand for canned goods.

Trade generally quiet.

Toronto, Jan. 31, 1907.

The new year seemed to start off with a rush, but things have settled down and the usual report this week is that trade is quiet. But collections continue satisfactory. Some jobbers here say the demand for canned goods is unusual at this season. The firm feeling continues, especially in regard to tomatoes and there is a tendency to insist on $1.17½ as the bottom price. Sugar is quiet and the situation does not show a strong leaning either way. Considerable shipments of prunes are arriving here now and prices are on a basis lower than fruit bought now could be sold at. Sultana raisins in Turkey are three times the price they were for the crop before the present one and the price continues to advance. The seed business has not yet waked up, but something is expected to be doing shortly. Hides are lower, tallow is higher, and most furs are moving upward.

SUGAR—The market is quiet and there is some difference of opinion here as to the probable course of the market. Some jobbers would not be surprised at a slight decline, but representatives of the sugar interests assert that at present prices the refiners are losing money. To substantiate that it is said the refiners had declined unusually large orders for refined at present quotations.

The market in raws continues about steady, Cubans being still considerably below the parity of European beet. This is probably due to the rapidity with which the Cuban crop is being harvested. At the end of last week 172 centrals were grinding, against 169 the week before, and 120 last year. Receipts at six shipping ports for the week were 56,000 tons, against 45,000 tons the week before, and 23,000 tons the corresponding week last year. Stock in island was 102,000 tons, against 31,000 tons last year, but considerably more than this stock is already contracted for shipment, so that no actual unsold stock has yet accumulated in the island. The present basis for raws at New York is 2⅛c. c. and f., for Cuban centrifugals, 96 degrees test. Refiners are still willing to pay that, but sellers are asking 1-32 more.

TEA—London mail advices of Jan. 18 say: The market has proved unequal to the heavy strain placed upon it during the last fortnight, and has shown a distinctly weaker tendency, especially during the last few days, all grades being very irregular with frequently lower quotations. The exports of Indian and Ceylon tea from Great Britain during last year were 41,877,150 pounds, against 27,945,783 pounds in 1905. It is most gratifying to see that some of the largest foreign markets are drawing such heavy supplies from London, the chief increase being in Russia.

Locally tea is in good demand and trade is active.

COFFEE—The market is quiet. Brazil crop receipts have fallen off and are only half what they were a few weeks ago. Locally, prices are unchanged.

DRIED FRUITS—Considerable shipments of prunes are now arriving on this market and prices are corrected to a slightly lower basis for this fruit. These prices are firm because the orders cannot now be duplicated at the coast. Higher prices are looked for. Other lines of dried fruit are firm. There has been another advance in Sultanas on the primary market. A mail advice to P. L. Mason & Co. states that absurdly high prices are asked for mere sweepings. The prices are now three times what they were in September, 1905.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 24, 1907.)

In spite of the cold weather and snow blockades the railways are still accepting freight from the wholesale houses for all western points. Deliveries are, of course, very uncertain and complaints are numerous from all parts of the country of the difficulty in getting supplies. The unfavorable weather is retarding both wholesale and retail trade, and it is sincerely to be hoped that present conditions will not long obtain. Commercial travelers are still at various western points and business is suffering not a little from the present tie-up of the transportation systems.

Evaporated apples have been advanced sharply to 10½c. per lb., an advance which was not unexpected owing to the scarcity and high prices of all foreign dried fruits.

"Golden West" soap has been advanced 5c. per case by the manufacturers.

CANNED GOODS—Owing to the scarcity and high prices of all dried fruits there is an unusually heavy demand for all lines of canned fruits. Canned pork and beans are quoted at lower prices, which will be noted below.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS— Stocks of several lines of California dried fruits are running low and difficulty will be experienced in obtaining new supplies. At present high prices consumption has been greatly lessened, the demand having been diverted to corn syrups, evaporated apples and canned fruits. Prices continue unchanged.

EVAPORATED APPLES—The price has been advanced sharply to 10½c. per lb. in 50-lb. boxes, and 10¾c. in 25-lb. boxes.

CANDIED PEELS—Prices have been advanced to following figures :

Lemon, per lb	0 13½

SALT AGREEMENT ENDED.

Manufacturers Withdraw From Dominion Agency and Each Sells His Own.

Two years ago the salt manufacturers of Ontario agreed to place their product in the hands of a selling agency and the Dominion Salt Agency, London, was created for that purpose. The agreement ended yesterday at midnight and to-day every salt manufacturer is disposing of his own product. This means also that the salt agreement with the Grocers' Guild is at an end. The product thus controlled represented 90 per cent. of the salt output in Canada.

For three years prior to the agreement just ended the salt trade was in the hands of the Canadian Salt Co., of Windsor, and R. & J. Ransford, Clinton. During 1902, 3 and 4, these two firms by arrangement took the entire output of the other producers. The production began to increase and the new arrangement was made.

The Toronto Salt Works have been the Toronto representatives of the Dominion Salt Agency and they will continue to handle the output of the Canadian Salt Co., Windsor, and perhaps of another large producer.

Just why the selling agreement has been terminated has not been made clear. It is claimed that prices have not been enhanced by it and that competition will not cause any decline in the price of table salt, though from to-day some lines of common salt may be a little lower. Price lists are not yet available. The cost of raw materials has advanced greatly so that the profit on salt is claimed to be already pretty fine.

The Dominion Salt Agency comprised R. & J. Ransford, Clinton; the Canadian Salt Co., Windsor; and the Empire Salt Co., Sarnia. The agency purchased and sold the salt made by the Saginaw Lumber & Salt Co., of Sandwich, the Sarnia Bay Lumber & Salt Co., Limited, of Sarnia, the Western Canada Flour Mills, Limited, of Goderich, and the Ontario People's Salt Co., Limited, of Kincardine.

Some American and English salt is brought into Canada, but the American duty is high enough to prevent Canadian producers doing any business south of the border. The Canadian duty is 5c. and 6½c. per cwt. and the American 8c. and 12c. Twenty years ago large quantities of Canadian salt were sold in Chicago for packing purposes.

NOVA SCOTIA NEWS.

Halifax, January 29, 1907.

Michael Dwyer, of the firm of John Tobin & Co., wholesale grocers, gave a brief review of the past year's business of the wholesale grocery trade in this province, at the recent annual meeting of the Halifax Board of Trade. Mr. Dwyer, who is chairman of the board's wholesale grocery committee, said : "Business generally is on a most satisfactory basis, in fact it was the best for years. The volume of trading was larger, the collections good, bad debts fewer, and the markets generally favorable. During the year many opportunities offered for making money in the staple products handled by the trade."

The markets at the present time are in a healthy condition and the volume of business passing is quite large for the season of the year. The price list is practically stationary in all lines. There is a fairly good demand for canned goods, both in the city and at outside points. There is an abundant supply of case eggs on the market, but the sales are now very slow, and the price prevents free trading. For good stock 27 cents is quoted, but other stocks can be bought from 24 to 25 cents. The receipts of butter are small and the weather conditions are against any prospective increase.

The Canadian Government's contribution for the Kingston earthquake sufferers and the sailing of the steamer Beta from Halifax with supplies, was a good thing for the wholesale grocers and the commission men of Halifax, as will be seen by the following supplies which were purchased here and shipped on the steamer : 500 barrels flour, 200 barrels corn meal, 100 barrels white beans, 100 bags split peas, 100 bags rice, 200 barrels No. 1 Family Pilot, 50 barrels mess pork, 50 barrels family beef, 200 cases corned beef, 100 cases condensed milk, 50 cases preserved salmon, 50 cases lard, 50 tubs butter, 25 cases cheese, (small size), 200 barrels potatoes (Cornwallis), 200 tierces codfish, 200 barrels herring. The value of the shipment was about $16,000.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEETING.

C. A. Chouillou has been re-elected president of the French Chamber of Commerce, Montreal, at the annual meeting held in the Board of Trade. Other officers elected were : Vice-president, G. des Etangs ; secretary, A. F. Revol ; treasurer, J. Salone. The council was re-elected by acclamation. In his address the president called attention to the prosperity of Canada, and to the good work being done by the Chamber. Trade relations between Canada and France are rapidly developing. It is hoped that in the near future a new commercial treaty may be made with France whereby trade between the two countries will be increased.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

Cheese still holds firm. Last week, as during the past month, the market was in a very healthy condition. Montreal houses have been in receipt of cables and correspondence from English firms from Monday to Saturday. The market was a little stronger the first part of the week, though not much, than it was from Wednesday to Saturday. Possible buyers on the other side have not been quoted a figure any lower than has been ruling for the past while, but on the other hand it is difficult at the moment to obtain higher prices. English houses understand that Canadians will ask and hold out for high prices, but they are not anxious to buy as long as they have stocks to last for the time being. Proving this, their cables held around the one price for a considerable time. They fully realize on the other side, however, that no easy feeling is the feature of the market in Canada.

Houses in Montreal have been doing some trading among themselves, but have not succeeded in obtaining anything above 13c. Several good sized lots changed hands at this figure. There are many who are anxious that the price should not be higher than it is now. The evil of selling ahead is making itself felt. Some have booked orders at prices for which they could never possibly buy at this date, and if they are to fill their contracts they must do so at a loss. To these, talk of a fourteen cent market gives a feeling which can be imagined.

Stocks are becoming lighter with every week. Shipments of actual sales to the Old Country have been maintained in a remarkable manner and the result is that stocks held in Canada are going down by leaps and bounds. While there has been more or less talk of holdings running out before the end of the season, actual figures would tend to show that the amounts at present held by different houses if totalled would figure out at nearly 100,000 boxes. In many quarters stocks have been estimated at as low as 75,000 boxes, but the former figures are more nearly correct. It is interesting to note that shipments from December 3, 1906, to January 26, 1907, inclusive, were less than during the corresponding period in 1905-06 by over 100,000 boxes. To be accurate, the shipments this year were 143,022 boxes, against 244,448 boxes last season. Shipments via New York, a large percentage of which cheese is Canadian, have also fallen behind. Figures for this season are 11,934 boxes, and for 1905-06 15,351 boxes.

Everything considered, no one can doubt the fact that the cheese situation as it is to-day is a very healthy one, and the majority of produce men are quite satisfied with the manner in which things are going.

Butter this week is steady. The market has apparently recovered from the slight weakness which was experienced recently and is now in good condition. It is difficult to obtain prices even a shade higher than those ruling, but the figure which is accepted as the ruling price to-day is obtainable easily enough. The fact that stocks are not really heavy is sufficient guarantee in itself that the market is not likely to break very much. Large rolls are more plentiful this week and sales are reported good locally. Considerable creamery is held and is regarded as good property.

Week by week receipts of butter and cheese are dwindling until they are becoming insignificant. Only 22 boxes of cheese arrived week ending January 26, and 628 packages of butter. Total receipts of cheese from May 1 last to date are 2,348,749 boxes, and of butter 603,695 packages.

PROVISION SITUATION.

Despite a very unsatisfactory season for Canadian bacon in England the price of hogs is not getting down very fast, and George Puddy, of Puddy Bros. Toronto, on Tuesday expressed the view that on account of the high price in the States the price here would not go below 6c. "Next week," he ventures, "the price might be 10c. higher or 10c. lower." Last week the price was unsteady and ranged between $6.35 and $6.65, though $6.35 was the nominal price. This week it is steady at $6.35 except in Eastern Ontario, where western and Montreal interests overlap; there the price is $6.50 and farmers would not hesitate to acclaim that competition is the life of trade.

This week deliveries promise fair. Last week in Ontario they were 32,000, which is said to have been 5,000 more than the week before.

The situation in England is "rotten," to use the expression of a large packer. No one seems prepared with a reason why. "The market has got on its back and won't get off." Canadian bacon is bringing less money than any other bacon in the world and there really isn't any explanation. "Prices went down last October and the packers haven't yet been able to get them up. Canadian hogs are to-day the cheapest in the world yet one packer averred yesterday that the Canadians were losing 2c. a pound on bacon marketed in Great Britain." That would be 8s. a cwt. The spread between Danish and Canadian is now 5s. or 6s. a cwt. Sometimes the prices are even and the Canadian has been known to be ahead. Danish and Irish deliveries in Great Britain at present are moderate. Logically the market should be in favor of Canadian but the facts are against us.

The inexplicable vagaries of the English market are partly accounted for by the fact that especially in London which is the important market for Canadian bacon, it is a habit of the retail trade to advance or lower the price 1d. if any change is to be made at all. That is 8s. or 9s. a cwt, and offers considerable latitude for vagaries.

In the United States last week the market for hog products did not vary materially until near the close, when it advanced quite sharply on buying of ribs and lard by the Cudahy Packing Company, while receipts of hogs were liberal early in the week but fell off the latter half, causing an advance in raw material. The packers seemed to be still on the bull side of the market and supported it, early week, on the weak spots and bulled it later on the strong. Stocks, so far this month, however, have increased for meats and pork, though they have fallen off for lard, which is attributed to the operations of the pure food law which compels the disuse of all adulterations in packages branded as pure.

CHEESE—The cheese market is in an exceedingly healthy condition. Things are booming. Good steady demand comes from the Old Country, and holders on this side are very strong in their ideas. They are inclined to wait for higher prices, and from indications now apparent they are likely to obtain a higher figure if they hold their stock a sufficient length of time.

BUTTER—The situation and prices are unchanged except in regard to second choice dairy. Receipts of this line are heavy and commission men find it hard to dispose of. It is accumulating here. Merchants outside have been holding in the hope of better prices and it is coming forward now considerably faster than the market can absorb it. Creamery solids shipped to England, returned to Canada, and made over into prints have been sold on this market at a price that paid the English importer 2c. to 3c. a pound better than if he had sold it on the English market. It brought nearly the highest creamery price.

POULTRY—The market is very unsatisfactory. Commission men say they never saw so much poultry coming forward at this season and so little demand. Before Christmas the farmers held off to wait for higher prices, and the opportunity seems to have passed. The Hebrew demand for live hens and the Chinese demand for live ducks is holding up the prices at these points, otherwise the market is lower.

Wheat is Further Advanced—Business East of the Lakes Greatly Curtailed for Want of Supplies—C.P.R. Short of En gines Instead of Cars.

While the Chicago bulls are killing next year's winter wheat crop in the South Western States, there is a real scarcity of Western wheat in Canada east of the great lakes. The Canadian Pacific will not promise shipment out of Fort William under two months. Practically everything stored east of the lakes is sold and awaiting shipment, much of it on order a month ago. G. R. Crowe, Winnipeg, president of the Northern Elevator Co., in a recent interview in a Winnipeg paper, stated that what the C.P.R. wanted was not cars but motive power. Information in Ontario bears out that statement. The company has just placed an order for a hundred locomotives but it's a year late. An eastern grain merchant has bought by all-rail since the close of navigation 14 cars of western grain. Last year in the same time he bought 130 and this year he could have sold many more could be have secured delivery.

Last week the visible supply of wheat in North America decreased 729,000 bushels from 45,360,000 bushels to 44,631,000 bushels against an increase a year ago of 42,000 bushels. The total on Jan. 28 was 5 million bushels less than a year ago.

Flour is still unchanged in price for the domestic trade, though the export basis is advanced a few cents. Trade generally is good and steady.

MONTREAL.

GRAIN—Oats are very strong. An advance is noticeable. Corn has not advanced since last report, but the market is firm. There is no demand for peas, prices for which are purely nominal.

WILLIAM DOBIE, NEW PRESIDENT OF E. W. GILLETT CO., LTD.

Wm. Dobie, president E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd., is a Canadian, having been born at Woodlands, Ont., on the St. Lawrence river, about 20 miles west of Cornwall, where the whole family, including three sisters and two brothers were born. When a young man he left for the United States, and in 1879 became connected with the business of the late E. W. Gillett, Chicago. His work on the road was of a character to warrant his employer placing him in charge of an office, established upon Mr. Dobie's advice, in St. Louis, Mo. There he remained two years, building up a very large and satisfactory business.

The climate of St. Louis is proverbially trying and Mr. Dobie returned to Canada. In March, 1886, nearly 21 years ago, he started in a very small way to manufacture for E. W. Gillett Co., Chicago, at 32 and 34 Front St. west, Toronto, occupying three small floors. The busines under his sole management kept expanding, and floor after floor of the building was taken in—Previous to opening up the Canadian branch, in 1886, Mr. Dobie had called upon the wholesale trade in Canada, all shipments of orders being made from the Chicago factories.

WM. DOBIE, TORONTO.

In the great Toronto fire of 1904 the Front street factories were consumed, and the present handsome premises on King and Duncan streets purchased.. In 1892 the business of E. W. Gillett was incorporated, and this work reflects great credit upon Mr. Dobie's business tact, as this company is unique in the Industrials as having as its shareholders wholesale and retail grocers throughout the entire Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland. The late E. W. Gillett was the first president of the incorporated company and Mr. Dobie, general manager and treasurer. On Mr. Gillett's death, three years ago, his son, Chas. W. Gillett, was made president. It was the wish of the directors, as well as Chas. W. Gillett, at that time that Mr. Dobie should take the presidency. This honor was, however, declined, but at the recent annual meeting Mr. Dobie was unanimously elected for the post.

To-day Gillett's goods are the best advertised grocery specialties before the trade. Gillett's lye, Magic baking powder, and Royal yeast are as well known throughout Canada as No. 1 hard wheat or Niagara. This result has been attained by carefully directed high-class publicity. No wonder Mr. Dobie is a strong believer in advertising. He knows how and has made a success of it. It is very satisfactory to recall that the first Gillett advertisement in this country was in The Canadian Grocer, and only the other day Mr. Dobie wrote :

"Speaking generally in regard to business of this company may say it could not be in a more satisfactory or flourishing condition. The year just about ended, from present indications, will be by far the best in the history of this business in Canada. All Canadians have a great deal to be thankful for and we, like all others, are hoping that the good times will continue for many years yet. To make a real success, all business concerns connected in any way with the grocery line should by all means advertise in The Canadian Grocer."

Mr. Dobie has a remarkable faculty for detail and a capacity for work that is amazing. These qualities, coupled with his keen business acumen and large grasp of affairs based upon thorough experience and sound judgment have placed him among the leaders of Canadian industry.

RULES LEADING TO SUCCESS.

Take as much interest in your employer's business as if it were your own.

Do your work well to-day—you won't have to do any of it over again to-morrow.

Do not expect to get all you can and give nothing. Do a little more work than is demanded.

Do not let your thoughts be always wool-gathering if you expect to earn an increase of salary.

Be prompt. Show that you have an interest in your work above the desire for an extra half hour in bed in the morning. You can't come down half an hour late every morning and impress your employer with the idea that you are a wide-awake, active man or woman with an interest in your work.

Be cheerful and willing. A sullen countenance is not pleasant to look upon by either an employer or a customer. Remember, your pulling power with a customer is one of your assets. The reserve will be your loss. Be courteous. Do not thrust your troubles and inharmony upon those around you. It is a poor investment.

H. L. Heath, of Huntsville, is selling out his stock and is going out of business in Huntsville. He thinks of going west.

FIRST-PRIZE CHRISTMAS WINDOW

Display by Dixi H. Ross & Co. Victoria, B.C.—It Shows How the Grocery Trade in the West is Doing Things.

This is the first-prize window in The Grocer's December or Christmas window-dressing competition. It hails from "the coast," its home being Victoria, and it was trimmed for Dixi H. Ross & Co. by H. O. Kirkham, one of the eighteen clerks employed by the firm. The Victoria papers took notice of it, as well they might, and visitors from the east in Victoria at the time were loud in their praises of it.

The centre of the ground floor display is formed of the best quality currants, inlaid with boxes of crystallized fruits, ginger, stuffed dates, Jordan almonds, Smyrna figs, bottles of cherries and extracts and other good things, with a centrepiece of finest Malaga clusters. On either side of the currants, divided by rows of orange, lemon and citron peel, are golden Sultanas, and set in these are boxes of glace cherries, crystallized angelica, plum puddings and fruit cakes in tins, and numerous other little boxes of Christmas dainties.

Farther back will be noticed large bottles of fruit in their natural condition. The centre bottle is "Royal Anne" cherries, the others are plums, pears, peaches, Logan berries, apples grapes, and currants of all kinds.

The floor of the back part of the window is covered with large cranberries, and in these are set boxes of prunes, peaches, pears, nectarines, apricots, and figs, also fancy boxes of bonbon crackers, Christmas candles, etc.

The articles are not set straight, but diagonally, across the window, with a pillar at each end and one in the centre (which does not show very well in the photo). Then on these pillars above the arches, is a shelf, also diagonally set, with a centrepiece on which is seen the 29-pound turkey. On either side of the turkey were placed bottles of corn on the cob, green peas, cranberries, etc. The rest of the shelf is filled with flowers and Christmas delicacies, making a very effective back for the window.

The arches and all the woodwork were trimmed with white puff-bunting, with strips of delicate green.

Natural plants and strings of smilax in the window produced a remarkably pretty effect and gave color to the window.

The upper part of the window was also something original. A shelf was constructed, circular at the ends and V-shaped in the centre, and on this shelf goods were placed. The frosted glass at the back was draped with white puffed bunting and autumn leaves, then under this shelf hung clusters of grapes and grape vines, and a bunch of mistletoe in the centre, also the cards with Yuletide greetings. The side shelves and mirrors do not show very well in photo.

AUSTRALIAN BUTTER IN CANADA

Single Shipment of 56,000 lbs. Relieves the Situation West of Winnipeg—Canners and Merchants Against Dating Salmon.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 26, 1907.

Provisions of the Pure Food Bill, now before the Dominion House, which, if enacted, would compel the dating of all salmon cans, are strenuously objected to by the salmon canning industry here, and the wholesale grocers of B.C. have joined in pressing the objections upon the attention of the Government. If possible, the bill will be defeated unless amended by striking out the objectionable clause, for the canners claim that grave injustice would be done the industry if enacted in its present form and enforced.

The Wholesale Grocers' Exchange, of B.C., passed a resolution favoring those portions of the bill which provided for rigid inspection of canned salmon, but opposing the proposal to have all cans dated. The resolution, which was forwarded to Ottawa, sets the seal of approval on the inspection of canned salmon, "believing that the guarantee thereby given to the public as to the sanitary and healthful conditions under which the article is packed will tend to increase the demand."

"But," the resolution proceeds, "we earnestly and emphatically protest against any regulation enforcing the marking of cans of salmon with the date of filling, as it would serve no useful purpose in respect to quality, and would completely paralyze sales of salmon held over from year to year. The brokers and wholesale houses of Great Britain who handle the bulk of the B.C. salmon pack, would decline to handle the tins so marked and the result would be most disastrous to the canners."

British Columbia has a great deal yet to accomplish before that satisfactory stage of development has been reached when the province is producing all, or nearly all the butter, etc., which home consumption demands. But when the prairie provinces of Canada have to import their fresh butter, or any butter, as a matter of fact, it is subject for surprised comment.

A representative for an Australian shipping house states that he has taken orders all the way to Winnipeg for supplies of fresh Australian creamery butter. These will be filled from the stock which arrived by the steamer Moana yesterday. She brought in 1,000 packages of 56 pounds each. Much of this is for consumption in B.C., but, as stated, a portion of it will be distributed to various prairie cities back as far as Winnipeg.

The SS. Moana brought, beside the 1,000 boxes of butter, 4,000 cases of frozen mutton consigned to local wholesale butchers, 875 tons of raw sugar from Fiji for the local refinery, 30 cases of pineapples, and sundry other produce.

Being the Antipodes, as near as may be, of our Dominion, the Australian commonwealth is now at the season of greatest production of such lines as butter, and in position to ship large quantities and of excellent quality. As a matter of fact the quality is superb, even if the price is high to make up. Apropos of the quality of the butter, and of the fact that much butter is sold as "Australian" which is faked, with false labels, a very good story is told by a wholesale man who handles large quantities of this article, when the season for importing it is on. Australian butter is made in Australia in three grades, and at this season when conditions are perfect, there is perhaps 80 or 90 per cent. of the creamery output good enough to rank first grade. For that reason, and for the name it has, the dealers in Australia ship none but first grade to Canada.

At the very best figuring the price is high. But some crude Canadian artists wishing to meet popular demand at all hazards, "put up" three grades, which they sell, very naturally, below the legitimate dealers' price for Australian. It chanced that a customs man who had seen the manifests and invoices for the importations, when being cleared, was in a store where Australian butter was very prominently advertised, and he found the price was 30 cents per pound. "But," said he, "it costs that to get it here. How, then, can the importer make a profit, sell it to you and let you make a profit, in selling it to me at 30 cents ?"

The dealer frankly admitted that there was nothing to it but the label and that was false. They had simply bricked up ordinary butter of inferior grades and wrapped it in faked label paper. The moral is obvious and applies to more than faked Australia butter.

Scarcity has marked the produce lines in local markets for the past two weeks or more, owing to the cold snap, which has happily this week given place to balmy spring-like weather, with a sunshine and occasional warm rains. The frost has disappeared and only on higher altitudes is any snow remaining.

The butter supply has been cut down to a minimum and the trade is living from hand to mouth, while the consumer is paying whatever price is named and feeling thankful to get anything. The receipt of consignments of 1,000 boxes of Australian fresh grass creamery butter, by the S.S. Moana, noted elsewhere, has relieved local conditions for the time. No eastern butter can be expected, and in view of Australian butter being shipped to most of the leading prairie towns as far as Winnipeg, no further supplies can come from there at present. The local production has not been down to such small compass for many seasons. The fact is evidenced by the wholesale quotation of 40 cents for fresh local creamery. The Australian butter has been wholesaling at 32½c., northwest creamery is up to 30c., while dairy butter is from 25 to 30c., and but little offering.

Eggs were entirely cleaned up on the market this week. There was a car came through, heated, from the east, but the heating system is not proof against the severity of the recent cold snap across the prairies. The stock was received in bad shape, which was the fate of a car which came in some time previously.

The only stock in sight at the present moment is some due to arrive from California. These are strictly fresh ranch eggs, not cold storage, for all the storage stock has been disposed of long ago, and there is not a case west of the mountains in all the coast states. The California eggs will sell about 45c. to the retailer. Of course these prices will not hold long as southern supplies will soon be liberal. The local fresh eggs are 50c. per dozen wholesale, when any can be got, but there are very few on the market.

In fruits, receipts of oranges are still liberal. No reports of injury to the California crop have been received since the cold snap. The Australian steamer brought in a quantity of pineapples. Other receipts of fruit are light. Prices are steady, Malaga grapes having gone down $1 to $6.50 per half barrel. Oranges, all navels yet, are $3 to $3.25 per box; apples, $1.25 to $2; pines, $3.25 to $4.25 per case; Cape Cod cranberries, $12 per bbl.; bananas, 5½c. per lb.; lemons $4 to $4.75.

Potatoes have been short on local markets lately because no deliveries were made. Now the cold weather is over, reports are coming in that frost has injured many, owing to insufficient protection against such an unwonted degree of cold. This would indicate that higher prices will be asked, though very low figures have been quoted till this week. The lower mainland stock is $16 per ton, while fresh quotations have not yet been made on Agassiz and Ashcroft grown potatoes, the old figures of $18 and $24 still prevailing.

Hothouse lettuce has been held back for some time too, and the price is 25c. higher, $1.75 being asked.

NESTOR ON THE ICE.

It's no wonder the Lumbers team is ahead. James Lumbers is one of the best, and certainly one of the oldest, skaters in town. He's the only wholesale grocer on the ice. Every fine afternoon when the ice is good and the weather passable finds him in the John D. Rockefeller class on Moss Pork rink. If it wasn't just that he wants to give the young chaps a chance he would be on the hockey team.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Decline in Orange Prices—Marmalade Oranges Arrive—Vegetable Market Feels the Cold Weather—Satisfactory Fish Trade.

Several lines of fruit show a decline this week, Toronto markets being particularly affected. Montreal reports fairly good demand for oranges, but the market is not yet entirely satisfactory to Toronto dealers. Almeria grapes are almost off the market, while bitter oranges and strawberries are the only new lines.

The vegetable market has felt the cold weather of the past week very keenly. Potatoes and cabbage have suffered particularly.

All markets report a good trade in fish.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Oranges and lemons are in good demand at current prices. Good orders are being taken for nearly all varieties of oranges. Bananas are being sold quite freely in the city, but country trade is slower than it has been in the past. Grape fruit is firm in price and likely to be higher. Florida oranges are also said to be on the verge of an advance. Almeria grapes keep high.

VEGETABLES—Some dealers are complaining of the potatoes which have been received lately. Goods were shipped during cold weather and are arriving frost-touched. Choice stock is obtainable, however, when the price quoted is paid. Tomatoes are in good demand at quoted figures. Some dealers expect lower prices but cannot say for a certainty that they will be able to make offers lower than at present. Cabbage is selling freely despite the high prices asked.

FISH—Business has not been as good as it now is for many months, according to reports of dealers. Prices hold steady in nearly every case. Orders are of good size and there is a generally healthy feeling in the fish market. Large frozen sea herring are selling freely at figures quoted. New tomcods are higher this week, as much as $1.10 being asked.

FRUIT—With the exception of Jamaicas and tangerines all lines of oranges are lower this week. The first shipment of marmalade oranges is now on the market. Almeria grapes are no longer quoted. NEW FISH SHIPPING PLANS.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries has taken practical measures for carrying into effect a scheme that has been under consideration for years past for the transport of fresh fish from the Maritime Provinces to the markets of Ontario and Quebec by means of cold storage. A vote of $25,000 has been placed in the estimates to encourage the railway companies to establish the necessary cold storage service, and the Hon. Mr. Brodeur is now in communication with the railway companies to secure their co-operation. The service will go into effect next Summer, and will, it is hoped, fill a long-felt want in Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, and other interior centres.

CANADA'S CARIBBEAN TRADE.

Better Shipping Facilities Provided—Flour Not Satisfactory Yet.

Geo. C. Yuille, of Watson, Boyd & Co., Port of Spain, Trinidad, writes:

Dear Sir,—"The Chamber of Commerce in Trinidad has within the past few months, in conjunction with the Canadian Government Agent here, associated itself with a movement which is general throughout most of the West Indian Islands and Demerara, for better trade relations and shipping facilities between the islands of the Caribbean Sea and the closer parts of the South American Continent and the Dominion of Canada, but we do not know that anything very special so far has been consummated. Certainly the "Pickford & Black" Steamship Co. has inaugurated a two-weekly service of steamers in place of the recent irregular service, and this is doing much towards the desired end. What we in Trinidad want to see is the drawing of all our foodstuffs from Canada instead of as at present from the United States, but, unfortunately, there is a deep-rooted prejudice against Canadian flours on account of the past experience of the ill-keeping qualities of most brands. This prejudice must be removed and we are glad to say there is a tendency in that direction."

BOARD OF TRADE OFFICERS.

HAVE A BOX OF CIGARS ON ME

Mr. Grocer! It is generally admitted all over this continent that Pebble and Pharaoh Cigars are just about as good as good cigars can be. There may come a time when better cigars will hold the centre of the stage, but that time is not yet.

The PEBBLE and PHARAOH Cigars

are the best I know how to make. Incidentally that explains the enormous sale of these cigars during 1906. Bu —I want to tell you about my better way of doing business and the cigars are on me if you do not unhesitatingly endorse my plan just as soon as you know it. See issue Jan. 11th for The Payne Plan. 1881	607	3,278,475	6,122,208
1880	839	4,700,372	9,340,929

The above statistics go far to confirm the advices of large trade and good profits in Canada in the past year. There were 1,232 failures in the Dominion in 1906, a decrease of 13.4 per cent. from 1905, while the liabilities were $9,540,915, a decrease of 31 per cent. from the preceding year.

CANNING TO COST MORE.

Commenting on the increase this year in the cost of packing vegetables, Strasbaugh, Silver & Co., Aberdeen, Md., say: "The price of cans has at last been named and is 25 cents per hundred higher than last year. Solder will be 33 1-3 per cent. higher, with prices for raw stock and canning house labor still unsettled. Growers are asking as high as $10 and $11 per ton this year when the prevailing price per ton for 1906 was $8, which means 5 cents per case for each $1 advance, and, as labor is in such demand and at higher rates all along the lines, canning house labor will also expect its proportionate advance and being in such demand the quality obtained will necessarily be much inferior, leaving the packer in the position of paying higher wages to less skillful workmen, which will increase the cost of production in a way altogether unexpected and make sad havoc of anticipated profits."

MOVED ROUND THE CORNER.

Rose & Laflamme, commission merchants and agents, have moved their Toronto office from the Board of Trade building to 23 Scott street, where their telephone number is Main 7310. The Toronto manager, W. T. Merrick, will be pleased to receive all the firm's old friends and any number of new ones at his new quarters.

OTTAWA BOARD OF TRADE.

The Ottawa Board of Trade has elected these officers: President, J. W. Woods; vice-presidents, P. Whalen and D. M. Finnie; treasurer, John R. Reid; council, A. W. Ault, James Ballantyne, C. J. Booth, James Davidson, W. H. Dwyer, G. C. Edwards, Chas, Hopewell, Geo. S. May, M.L.A.; John McKinley, D. Murphy, G. C. Orme, Geo. Southam, Board of Arbitration, Thos. Ashwith, T. C. Bate, N. A. Belcourt, M.P., J. R. Booth, Geo. Burn, Fred Cook, F. H. Chrysler, James Davidson, G. B. Greene, D. MacLaren, G. H. Perley, M.P., P. D. Ross.

A GREAT INCREASE.

The Salada Tea Co. report that the total increase in their business in 1906 over 1905 amounted to twenty-three per cent., all branches combined, and that this increase constituted a larger business than their entire output made in the first five years they were in business.

In the Toronto branch, which handles Ontario and western business, and which was established nearly fifteen years ago, the increase was twenty-six per cent. So far during 1907, it is said, the company have had an average increase of over 6,000 lbs. per week in the Toronto branch alone.

LUCERNA CHOCOLATE.

John Bearns, Ltd., Winnipeg, are handling for the whole of Canada the "Lucerna" Swiss milk chocolate manufactured by the Anglo-Swiss Milk Chocolate Co., of Hochdorf, Lucerne. The Canadian Grocer can vouch for the fact that this Swiss chocolate is toothsome, for to taste is to know. The manufacturers are a very wealthy company and it is their intention to push the sales of their product vigorously in Canada. Grocers and agents will find their efforts seconded by an aggressive advertising campaign. The billboards will shortly declare the merits of the chocolate as attractive posters are being prepared.

Agents to sell to the wholesale trade are wanted for some territories.

E. A. Shoebotham, representing the Battle Creek Health Food Co., whose Canadian factory is at London, was a caller at the Toronto office of The Canadian Grocer the other day.

Three Good Games of Hockey—Standing of the Toronto League to Date—Lumbers & Co. Lead for the Tillson Trophy.

On Tuesday evening, January 15th, at Varsity rink, Davidson & Hay won their first game in the Toronto Wholesale Grocers' Hockey League by defeating T. Kinnear & Co., 3 goals to 1. The game was keen and fairly fast, and Referee T. C. Webber, the Brokers' fast forward, had no trouble in keeping it under control. Only two men were ruled off for rough play. T. Kinnear & Co. started off with a rush which did not last long, their condition not being as good as Davidson & Hay. T. Kinnear & Co. were shy three of their best players. For the winners Gould and Bilton were the stars. These teams meet again on Feb. 4th.. The teams lined up as follows :

T. Kinnear & Co.—Goal, Legge; point, G. H. Rennie ; coverpoint, T. H. Kinnear ; right forward, Holken ; centre, Tulford:; left forward, C. Rennie.

Referee, T. C. Webber.

Brokers Were Strong.

The game Monday night, January 21, played at 'Varsity rink between T. Kinnear & Co. and the Brokers, was looked forward to with great interest, as these two clubs were the strongest in last year's league, they playing off for the championship at the Mutual street rink last Winter, the Brokers winning out and carrying away the Tillson trophy and the handsome gold medals presented by Col. Jno. I. Davidson. This year it is hard to say which club has the better team, all four being much stronger than last Winter. To date Jas. Lumbers & Co. head the league, having won two games and lost one.

Monday's game was not what you would call a rough game, yet referee S. Oliver had to penalize four of the players. The Brokers had a new man on their line-up, Charlie Morrow, agent for Quaker Oats, who plays point for the senior Argonauts, and was a tower of strength to their defence. The first goal was scored by a zig-zag rush of Morrow's, then passing to Bill May, the Brokers' fast forward. After five minutes' play the Brokers scored another, and just before half-time point Percy Millman took the puck down and passed to Tom Webber, who banged the nets for another, making the score at half-time 3 to 0 in Brokers' favor.

Shortly after the second half started Bert Brown, T. Kinnear & Co.'s coverpoint, broke his skate and had to retire, Morrow going off to even up. At this time Kinnear & Co. were playing much better hockey, and on a pass from Humphrey to Rennie to Kinnear scored their first goal and repeated the trick in 2 minutes. This wakened up the Brokers once more, and while Tom Kinnear and Billy May decorated the fence, Webber and Ade Millman took the rubber from centre and Millman opened the nets for another. Score 4—2. After five minutes' play Humphrey took a shot from centre and added one for Kinnear. Score 4—3. Brokers and Kinnear each scored another, making the score 5—4, and three minutes before time was called May took the puck from Humphrey and shot another, making the score at the finish 6 to 4 in favor of Brokers. The line-up :

T. Kinnear & Co.—Goal, Legge; point, G. Humphrey ; coverpoint, B. Brown ; rover, W. Ford ; right forward, C. Rennie ; centre, T. Kinnear ; left forward, Tulford.

Referee, S. Oliver.

Lumbers & Co. Win Again.

One of the best games of hockey played in the W.G.H.L. was pulled off last Friday night at 'Varsity rink, when Jas. Lumbers & Co. added another victory to their list by defeating Davidson & Hay's husky team 4 goals to 2. The ice was keen and fast hockey played all through and at times rough, there being six men penalized. Bilton, Davidson & Hay's point player, was ruled off a second time for rough-house playing. Referee Webber should have watched this man more closely and made his penalties heavier.

These teams were very evenly matched in the first half, the score at half-time being 2 all, but in the second half Jas. Lumbers & Co. proved to be in better condition and played an errorless game. The playing of S. Oliver, Fred Lumbers and A. Johnston was particularly noticeable, and through their hard work two more goals were scored, making the score at full time 4 to 2 in favor of Lumbers & Co. For Davidson & Hay, the playing of Bilton, Gould, and Robinson in goal, was brilliant. The teams lines up as follows :

Jas. Lumbers & Co.—Goal, Wess Lumbers ; point, T. Kerr ; coverpoint, S. Oliver ; rover, F. Lumbers ; left forward, R. Marshall ; centre, A. Johnston ; right forward, W. Carrigan.

Referee, T. C. Webber.

BIG BLAZE IN WINNIPEG.

A handsome 5-storey structure, in Winnipeg, occupied by the western branches of a number of eastern firms, was destroyed by fire Monday. Among those burned out were the Copeland, Chatterson Co., Toronto; W. Paterson & Co., biscuit manufacturers and confectioners, Brantford; F. F. Dalley & Co., Hamilton; H. J. Boyd, wholesale crockery; and the J. D. King Co., Toronto. The total losses are placed at $210,000.

THREE NEW TRAVELERS.

Lately Joined the Staff of H. P. Eckardt & Co.—Fields of Operation.

Three new men have recently joined the traveling staff of H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto. G. L. Scott, who has been added to the city selling staff, steps from the retail to the wholesale department of the trade. He was one of the brightest and most promising grocery clerks in Toronto. He was with Swan Bros. for 10 years and could have had no better tuition. Ambitious, enterprising and industrious, with a pleasing address and a thorough working knowledge of the trade, Mr. Scott is assured a bright future.

A. M. Cowling, of Colborne, who recently sold his business there to Bradd Bros., is now representing the firm in the Niagara Peninsula and on the main line of the Grand Trunk south, as far west as Ingersoll.

Mr. Cowling conducted his Colborne business successfully four years. His sunny smile and genial ways will make his paths pleasant. He follows Bert Milner who recently left the road to go into business for himself in his home town of Brampton. If Mr. Cowling keeps the grass from growing on Bert Milner's territory he'll do.

The third man is G. J. Gould, formerly with Douglas & Ratcliff. He takes up the task laid down by "Bill" Bradley in Central Ontario north. Mr. Bradley is going into business for himself in the metal trade in Ottawa. In that he simply follows the family bent. Mr. Gould was laid up this week with grip.

NOVA SCOTIA MERCHANT DEAD

James A. Gass, for Thirty-five years in Grocery Trade in Halifax.

James A. Gass, aged 60 years, a prominent business man of Halifax, passed away at his home in that city last week. Mr. Gass was a native of Shubenacadie, but came to Halifax some 35 years ago and has since conducted a crockeryware and grocery business, first on Argyle street and afterward on Granville street. He was a prominent Mason and belonged to Royal Sussex Lodge, A.F. and A.M., and was a Past Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia. He was also a member of the Scottish Rites and belonged to the Knights Templars. The deceased was also a member of North British Society and of the Halifax Lodge of the Knights of Pythias. In every organization to which he belonged he was well liked and always took an active interest.

The deceased, who was a man of sterling character, is survived by a widow, one son and two daughters, Misses Florence and Jean. His son, J. Edward, was in partnership with his father, in the firm of J. A. Gass & Son.

E. D. Marceau Company, Montreal, are offering good values in Japan teas. Some choice lots are on sale. The coffees of this company are also quoted.

Kings county, N.S., has invested in fishing gear $20,515. The catch of fish last year amounted in value to $63,244.

Clean Oil and a Clean Store

You don't have to put up with dirty, greasy floors and furniture, contaminated merchandise and odor-laden atmosphere, simply because you store and sell oil in the same room with your stock. Neither do you have to sell your customers oil which is full of dirt and grit and only half as efficient as it ought to be on account of evaporation, simply because you store the oil yourself for a time.

The Bowser Self-Measuring Oil Tank will store your oil and keep it pure and clean and secure from evaporation. It will pump the oil directly into the customer's can without funnel or measure and it will keep the store as clean and free from odors as if no oil were sold there.

The pump can be placed where it is most convenient and the tank can be on the first floor, in the cellar, out doors or underground, in fact, anywhere.

Scrupulous cleanliness
Mac Laren's Imperial Cheese
Because Imperial Cheese is prepared with all the regard for cleanliness which could exist in your own kitchen, and because it is a nourishing food, we have warrant for saying,
"It's as good as it tastes."
In 10 cent jars and upwards.
MACLAREN IMPERIAL CHEESE CO., Ltd.
Detroit, Mich., and Toronto, Canada
CHEESE SALAD No. 3
One-half pound English Walnuts. Stalk of celery, small portion parsley chopped fine. Add jar of Imperial Cheese No. 1 size.

GOOD!
MACLAREN'S IMPERIAL CHEESE
to the very last bit.
From the opening of the jar to the last morsel you scrape from the bottom,
MacLaren's Imperial Cheese
retains all the delicacy of flavor and rich creamy taste that makes it the perfect table cheese. The opal jar in which Imperial Cheese is put up keeps the cheese always as pure and sweet as it was when you broke the seal—never becomes hard or dry. And the fresh, clean, inviting look of the jar itself gives it an appetizing appearance on the table.
Imperial Cheese is ideal food, for it combines the highest percentage of nutrition with a taste so delightful that one wishes there were more such dainties.
From 10c the jar up; at all grocers

SAFETY IS THE FIRST CONSIDERATION

RISING SUN AND SUN PASTE

STOVE POLISH STOVE POLISH

Some manufacturers of stove polish try to induce you to sell an inferior article—often a highly inflammable, dangerous and explosive polish, which is liable to severely burn your customers, possibly horribly disfigure them and perhaps burn them to death. These deaths and accidents from explosive stove polishes are not rare by any means, as we can prove to any one from the news columns of the daily papers.

Remember, that RISING SUN STOVE POLISH and SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH both give you a good margin of profit and are absolutely safe in the hands of the user. You can carry them in your stock with safety. Insurance companies are liable to object to paying losses in stores where inflammable goods are kept on the shelves without permits. DON'T TAKE ANY CHANCES.

Q. E. D.

Every shoolboy remembers these letters as they appeared at the foot of some mathematical problem.

They stand for "Quod Erat Demonstrandum"—which was to be demonstrated.

Applied to a sum in business, it has been demonstrated that stand among the foremost of the popular-selling goods of the day; that the best is none too good for the great purchasing public; that seeking for the best, they are sure to find it in WOOD'S COFFEES.

Four Reasons why INVICTUS FIBRE is the BEST FIBRE PAPER on the Market

1. Invictus Fibre is made from personally selected pulp wood cut on our own limits.
2. This special pulp wood is again rigidly culled on arrival at our mills
3. The pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made is manufactured in our own pulp mill and transferred at once to the paper mill, avoiding all drawbacks of transportation.
4. Invictus Fibre will increase in strength and not grow hard and brittle as does fibre made from sulphite pulp. This is a quality of the peculiar and selected pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made.

A trial order will convince you that we are correct. See that each package bears the words "Invictus Fibre." Every ream contains 480 sheets

Executive Offices: Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New York City, U.S.A.

THE BRADSTREET COMPANY gathers information that reflects the financial condition and the controlling circumstances of every seeker of mercantile credit. Its business may be defined as of the merchants, by the merchants, for the merchants. In procuring, verifying and promulgating information no effort is spared, and no reasonable expense considered too great, that the results may justify its claims as an authority on all matters affecting commercial affairs and mercantile credit. Its offices and connections have been steadily extended, and it furnishes information concerning mercantile persons throughout the civilized world.

Subscriptions are based on the service furnished, and are available only by reputable wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns, and by responsible and worthy financial, fiduciary and business corporations. Specific terms may be obtained by addressing the Company at any of its offices. Correspondence invited.

Place your orders NOW for spring shipment of Jams, Jellies, Marmalades, Catsups, Etc.

1st. To ensure early shipment.

2nd. To secure your requirements before any possible advance in prices. Jam Stocks are very low, and some varieties are even now exhausted.

Aylmer and Simcoe Jams, Jellies and Marmalades are the most popular goods on the market, because they are the BEST.

The sales of these Jams in 1906 were nearly twice as great as in 1905, and four times as great as in 1904. QUALITY DID IT.

Ask your wholesaler for Aylmer Pure Fruit Preserves. They are equal to the best imported.

CATSUPS

Aylmer and Delhi Catsups have captured the market solely because of their superior quality, and attractive appearance.

Look at this record.—Sales of 1906 were nearly two and one-half times as great as in 1905, and over four times as great as in 1904.

Quality Did It.

CANADIAN CANNERS,
LIMITED

A few reasons why Ozo Jams should be and are considerably better than any others now being made in Canada:

1. As Montreal is by far the largest buying centre in the country, enormous quantities of all kinds of fruit are sent to be marketed here, and as ripe fruit has to be disposed of within 24 hours of arrival a glut is sure to occur in some fruit every day—it might be peaches to-day, or strawberries to-morrow—some fruit is sure to be over-shipped, which we can buy at a price averaging as low as the mere cost of growing it; and buying fruit at this price naturally we can afford to use more of it.

2. Our plant is the largest in Canada, contains the finest, cleanest and most modern equipment, which enables us not only to turn out an enormous quantity but give far better quality as well.

3. We can buy sugar on the wharf at a great saving over what it would cost if freighted west, and consequently are enabled to put in a much larger proportion in the cheaper qualities.

4. Having the turnover, we are able to purchase our packages at the very lowest price.

5. As we believed that these natural advantages would enable us to take the lead in the Jam business, we sent to England for the most expert Jam cook we could find. As money was no object, we got him and placed him in charge of our Jam Department, where his 28 years of practical experience are enabling him to turn out goods which are a revelation to the trade, and are causing a large increase in sales in this line with the people who are handling them.

6. Notwithstanding our ability to turn out a product equal to any made in the country at a lower price, our aim is to put this saving in the cost of production into bettering the quality of the goods, thus putting purchasers of our goods beyond the reach of competition.

With this information at hand you can readily see why so many of the largest wholesalers have placed their Jam contracts with us, and we think you will also see that it will be to your advantage, and that of your customers, to place your Jam business with us.

Black, Green, Mixed

But when we expressed the conviction, some short time ago, that "SALADA" Green Teas would displace Japans, we were laughed at by many in the trade. Credit and Money

Nine-tenths of the grocers who sell Windsor Salt (pure, white, crystaline, won't cake) have money in the bank. They discount their bills. Their credit is "A, Number One." Happy grocers they!

Windsor Salt plays its own little part in bringing about this contented state of things. It never disappoints the grocers' customer who buys it. It serves to hold confidence in the quality of a grocer's general stock. It establishes permanent family trade. It helps a grocer's credit—it brings him money. It is the "Salt that's all Salt."

Glowing health is a capricious goddess; but she never forsakes the lover of

Ceylon Teas

Yes, there's health and joy in every cup of Ceylon Tea. Millions of tea drinkers declare that Ceylon possesses an aroma and a flavor absolutely unique and unrivalled. There's a difference, a big series of differences, between Ceylon Teas and any other grown on this planet. The difference in sales interests you most of all. There is more Ceylon Tea sold on this continent than there is of all other teas on the market. Tea is nearly always profitable. The grocer who pushes Ceylon Tea takes out a policy assuring success.

A MORAL ISSUE

An Address by Wm. Judson, President of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association of the United States before the recent Dallas Convention of the National Retail Grocers' Association.

Wm. Judson, president of the National Association of Wholesale Grocers appeared before the Dallas convention of the National Association of Retail Grocers and delivered an address that will be read with as much interest north as south of the line. The address was enthusiastically received, and the feeling it created among the delegates, to quote an American paper, was "that in the future the chain and department stores, together with the cut-rate and premium people on both sides of the line, are going to have a hard time of it." Mr. Judson said:

"I greatly enjoy such occasions for social intercourse. I highly appreciate the business instruction which may be gained by this meeting. It is a big work to get this grocery crowd together. I believe we may say some things to each other which will create a feeling of personal friendship and cement more closely our business relations. At home we are keen competitors. In a national meeting we are upon the basis of good fellowship. At home, as we go our busy way, we drift apart and possibly forget the better side, which is always underneath. If you were called upon to give a justification for your existence it could be found here and now.

"I am very much impressed with this great meeting and with the possibilities of the association. In its organization, in the creation of the necessary machinery for its control, your officers have shown strong executive ability. Evidently men of genius for the work have been up and doing. President Green and his official staff, and others who have worked before them, are worthy of the highest consideration—I believe I may say affection. It is a high privilege to enjoy this opportunity to grasp your spirit and to partake of your enthusiasm. In this fair city of Dallas you will set your pace to an uplift of your affairs. You have left far behind you the word failure; you have learned to rise above discouragements. The word impossible you do not know—it is not American.

The Ideal Salesman.

"I am instructed by the executive committee of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association to extend greetings and Godspeed to the National Association of Retail Grocers. We wish you good will and your patronage, and we fully realize that, if we gain the one and keep the other, we must safeguard your vital interests with the same fidelity that we do our own. Intelligent merchants and thoughtful department managers are constantly educating traveling salesmen to become in the highest degree constructive merchants.

"The ideal traveling grocery salesman of today is a man of high character and broad experience—one whom the retailer and the wholesaler are proud to meet upon the basis of social equality and personal friendship.

"While the respective services rendered the public by retailers and jobbers differ materially in character, the fact remains that their interests are mutual in the accomplishment of a laudable and common purpose.

Wholesaler's Requirements.

"I feel that it is not only opportune, but eminently fitting, that I should avail myself of this opportunity to impress upon you the large resources and the versatile talent now required on the part of the jobber to properly conduct and adequately and conscientiously serve the retailer with the innumerable food commodities demanded by the public.

"In the first place ample capital and a high order of organizing and administrative ability are fundamental requisites. With these available, the utmost discrimination as to quality of goods, eligibility of business location, convenience of transportation facilities and expedition of handling must have the most painstaking and constant attention.

Up With the Times.

"It is not only the province but the duty of the jobber to keep fully abreast of the times in regard to the requirements of the public and the merits of the multitudinous commodities which are constantly appealing for popular favor and sift the good from the bad, the meritorious from the fraudulent, and in this manner protect the interests of the retailer and the health and pockets of the public.

"I feel that your knowledge of the correctness of these statements will bear me out in the further assertion that this vitally important service on the part of the conscientious jobber is, as a rule, entirely overlooked or taken as a matter of course. Innumerable are the trials of the jobber in spite of his most painstaking efforts to avoid deception and imposition, and equally innumerable are his trials and vexations in always establishing himself upon the firm foundation of unimpeachable merit and unquestionable quality.

Staples Without Margin.

"Such inducement on the part of irregular salesmen is invariably for the purpose of selling some other commodity with the price and quality of which the retailer is not familiar, and, as a rule, he does no better in the transaction than if he purchased the commodities from his regular house. Furthermore, having obtained some staple article in this manner, is it fair, the next time the travelling salesman of your regular jobbing house visits you, to refuse to buy a staple commodity from him unless he will let you have it at the price quoted by the comparatively unknown salesman who named the price in question solely with a view of making it up on some other line of goods that he was trying to popularize?

A Moral Profit.

"When the jobber sells staple commodities to his customers without a proper margin of profit, it is a temptation to the retailer to pass the goods on to the consumer at prices practically yielding him no profit and make the articles so called 'leaders.' Knowing, as you do, that you cannot do business without a fair profit any more than the jobber can do business without a fair margin of profit, I submit that the most normal and satisfactory condition is fair margin of profit, which commodities, including staples, at a price yielding him a fair margin of profit, which commodities you, in turn, retail regularly to the consumer at a fair margin of profit. Such transactions ensure a regularity and stability to trade which is by far the most desirable and satisfactory condition for all concerned.

Competition for the Best.

Alfred Weyerstall—lc

"On the other hand it is the province of the retailer to distribute direct to the consumer the commodities he obtains from the jobber. In so doing he relies in a large measure upon the character of the jobbing house and its wise discrimination in selecting the quality of the goods he offers his trade. It is with a feeling of pride that I say that no class of men within the range of my knowledge take more honest pride in giving their customers their money's worth, than do you, my friends, the retailers. It is a matter of conviction with me that no class of business men indulge in keener competition with each other to give their respective customers the very best and most meritorious articles which the bounties of nature and the skill of the manufacturer can produce than you do. I will go even further and say that the incessant and ever intensified demand from you for quality, merit and attractiveness in the goods the jobber furnishes you is a constant spur to the heads of departments of the jobbers' organizations for better qualities, more meritorious product and more attractive packages, and that this demand keeps their wits and ingenuity ever on the alert, and, through them, the originality and the ingenuity of the manufacturers in complying with these demands.

Ridiculous Competition.

"This now brings me to a matter of mutual interest which I desire to discuss with you in perfect frankness and good will. For many years there has been a growing tendency on the part of the jobber, fostered, possibly, by sharp competition, to supply the retail dealer with staple commodities practically without profit. This unwise and unbusinesslike procedure probably had its origin in the handling of sugar. When the jobber voluntarily began furnishing the retail trade with sugar at practically no margin of profit, the retailer naturally concluded that if the jobber was willing to sell him sugar—a large item of his trade—at no margin of profit, the jobber could just as well sell him other staple commodities without profit. The result of this kind of competition on the part of the jobber and of demand on the part of the retail dealer has finally reached such an exaggerated stage that the jobber is handling a considerable percentage of his output practically without any margin of profit.

"Now, I submit to you as clear-headed and discriminating business men, that this condition of affairs is neither right nor equitable. In the first place it is neither best for you nor the jobber. In the second place, I am a great believer in the scriptural injunction that the 'Laborer is worthy of his hire,' and I know that you understand, as clearly as any set of business men, that no jobber can maintain an organization involving a large investment of capital and devote his own time and experience, and the time and experience of a number of departmental heads, in accumulating at a convenient point the products of the entire world and lay them down to his trade without an adequate margin of profit.

All the World Contributes.

"Did you ever pause to consider the amount of time, thought, skill and energy employed in asembling the commodities with which our establishments are filled? There are teas from China and Japan, coffees from the East Indies and South America, spices from the islands of the tropics and food products from all of the civilized countries of the earth. Knowledge of merit and quality which requires an ordinary lifetime to obtain must be employed in making nice discrimination in the selection of these articles. Painstaking care as relates to size and attractiveness of packages must also be employed by one competent to exercise such judgment. In addition to all this many of these commodities must be paid for months before they can be disposed of to the retail trade, all of which requires much capital and the risk from many sources incident to the use of employing capital in commodities more or less perishable.

"Then, again, there are the whims of public taste to be taken into account, for a commodity which may be very popular to-day may suddenly decline in popularity before goods purchased for future delivery can be received and disposed of to the trade.

"In the light of these facts, fully confirmed by your own intimate knowledge of their truth, you can but be impressed with the fact that the jobbing distributor is not only entitled to, but must have a margin of profit on all commodities that he handles, or accept the alternative of inevitable failure. Again, when a retail dealer establishes satisfactory business relations with a jobbing house the jobber is just as anxious to satisfy him, retain his good will and lay goods down to him at the lowest possible remuneration consistent with the service rendered as the retailer is to receive the best goods at the lowest price.

Matter of Fairness.

"Again, drouths, floods, conflagrations, epidemics, business depressions or other great calamities will almost surely visit the locality of every retailer at some time or other during his business career. During these periods collections may be poor and the outlook dark, and the retailer may need accommodations in the way of extension of time and a large line of credit, and if he has, through years of trading, established himself in the confidence of his jobber, he is reasonably sure to receive such assistance and accommodations in such hours of trial and tribulation as it is within the power and province of the jobber to extend.

"In view of these circumstances, is it prudent, wise or right for a retailer who is handling the goods of a jobbing house whose very name has been a guarantee of good quality, and who has dealt kindly and generously with the retailer in time of need, to go off at a tangent and give an order for staple commodities to some unknown salesman from a remote jobbing centre who makes remote visits to his locality, simply because such salesman offers him a staple commodity at a price on which the retailer knows the jobber makes nothing and probably loses money?

"It would be just as reasonable for a merchant to walk into a bank and ask for the loan of one thousand dollars without interest, because the bank had unemployed money on hand, as for the same merchant to ask the jobber to use his organization, his capital, his time, and the skill of his force in laying down staple goods to the retail dealer without a margin of profit.

Question of Trade Stability.

"I feel constrained to talk very frankly with you along these lines in the interest of the integrity and stability of trade. My lifetime association with both retailers and jobbers has convinced me that we are all thinking along these lines and that the time has come to discontinue making erratic and sensationally low prices on staple commodities with a view to attracting trade, because it is altogether too apparent to any thinking man that such action is but a subterfuge to conceal an ulterior motive and that the supposed beneficiary of this procedure is sure to make up to the dealer on something the reduction that he received on the staple commodity. Otherwise he could not exist.

"Our watchwords should be: 'Mutual confidence in and mutual loyalty to each others' interests, stability of trade founded on consistent business policies, and fair remuneration on all commodities handled, based on our capital invested and the energy, industry and intelligence brought to bear in serving the public.

"As we all agree, these meetings are of great value—the social touch, the broadening influence of travel, the glimpse of rivers and mountains, fertile fields and big cities. We are broader and better for the experience, but the hour for going home soon comes. A few short days and we are behind the counter again. How to make a personal application of what we have seen and heard—how to make our own business five per cent. more profitable than last year. There is no royal road to wealth in the grocery business. Our greatest good will come from thoughtful, personal attention to our own home business.

"Let us all resolve anew that we will give our loyal support to our local association; that we will stand by and maintain our respective State associations and work continually for a sound and wholesome increase of conservative strength nationally."

The second annual meeting of the shareholders of White & Co., Limited, Toronto, was held in their offices on Feb. 4. The report showed a very satisfactory state of affairs. The directors elected for the ensuing year were: James Langskill, president; George Acheson, vice-president; W. H. Despard, general manager and secretary-treasurer; and R. Palmer, with Fred Anderson, manager of Hamilton branch.

RELATIONS OF WHOLESALER AND RETAILER

Address by F. W. Hannah, President New York State Wholesale Grocers' Association before the National Association of Retail Grocers recently in Convention at Dallas, Texas.

Having been associated with retail grocers for many years, I can appreciate some of the difficulties and trials that you have to contend with in your business; and if anything I can say would be of assistance or help to you, I should be satisfied and feel that my trip has not been in vain.

The best of feeling and sentiment should prevail between the wholesale and retail grocers. In the distribution of staple food products in this country there is a place for the manufacturer, the wholesale grocer and the retail grocer—the manufactureer to make the goods, the wholesale grocer to distribute them to the retailer and carry them for the convenience of the retailer, who distributes them to the consumer, and who cannot, of necessity, carry all the different lines for which the retail grocer has a call in doing business at the present time. The manufacture of staple products is carried on to such an extent and calls for such an outlay of capital, that the manufacturer cannot often have the additional capital necessary for the distribution of his products. The jobbers of this country have not only the capital, but the machinery for the distribution of such goods; and, as they are purveyors of all kinds of food products, they are in a position to buy them in a large way, pay the manufacturer promptly, and then distribute them as the wants of the retail trade may need, at a much less rate per cent. of cost than the manufacturer can do himself, so that a retail grocer can buy a small quantity of nearly everything that the public demands of him without a larger outlay of capital than his business would warrant.

Cost of Doing Business.

The interests of the jobbers and the retailers in this respect are mutual, and the wholesale grocer is in position to do more for the retailer than the retailer can do for himself, or than any two or more retailers can do collectively. You are probably aware that the business conditions in all lines have been very much changed in the last ten years. The fact is that in your business, as in that of the wholesaler, the expense of doing the same amount of business has almost doubled in the last decade. Your retail customers demand more of you now than ever. They purchase in small quantities and have to be served every day at least, and sometimes two and three times a day, and for this reason it occurs to me that the retailer grocer must study his business in the same light as the wholesale grocer does his, so that he may intelligently conduct his affairs. It is results with which we have to deal. We cannot get away from the expense of our business, and the only way we can cope with that expense is to study how we may sell our goods for more than it costs us to do business, and this is what, in my opinion, requires the careful attention of every retailer. He should know what it costs him to do business, and unless he can get more than that cost he is not making money.

The old-fashioned plan of merchandising by the wholesaler as well as by the retailer—to sell a large quantity of staple goods at what they paid for them, which is a loss of exactly what it costs them to do business—is all wrong, because under these circumstances this additional cost must be added to the cost of the other goods they sell. Every retailer should insist, first, that he gets the cost of doing business and then a margin thereto.

Trade has developed so much in this country and we are brought so near together by railroads, steamboats, telegraph and telephone, and the competition is of such a universal nature, that the prices named by all reputable dealers of staple food products have to be right; and it will not make much difference in the course of a year as to the price you pay for these goods, if you get the best goods and sell them on a fair margin of profit. I think that every fair thinking retailer will agree with me that all the goods he sells should bear a fair margin of profit above the cost of doing business; otherwise we find that this same grocer will have to charge more for his tea and coffee and many other commodities than would be necessary if all his goods were sold at a margin. In fact, he could probably reduce his margin of profit on some of these items, which would probably increase their sale, and the whole business would reap a benefit thereby.

Action Against Unfair Manufacturers.

Experience of many years has convinced me that the retail grocer can order his goods probably of two or three wholesale houses in his vicinity or nearby cities without much question of the price being right for the general competition is of such a nature all over the country that this matter will regulate itself, and I would advise the retail grocer as I would the wholesale grocer. Each must look out for his own particular job, and see that he makes money.

President Judson, of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, will verify the statement when I say to you that this is one of the valuable assets of our individual business, that it has been verified through our connection, with associated work all over the country, and we have discovered that it is not necessary to sell a large amount of staple goods at any time at less than it costs us to do business, and the wholesale grocers all over the country are just waking up to this fact. There is a moral in business as well as in everything else and it is not right that we should pay $4.70 per cwt. for sugar and sell it for $4.70 per cwt.

Manufacturers Who Discriminate.

The National Wholesale Grocers' Association is taking the position that the manufacturer who selects 10 or 15 per cent. of the retail trade of the country and sells them at a less price than the 85 or 90 per cent. can buy the goods for, is discriminating against the "rank and file" of the retail grocers whom we desire to help in every possible way to make their business successful and prosperous, and we think that every fair-minded retailer will agree with us in this position.

It is a question with Mr. Judson as well as myself what is the best advice we can give you. From my own experience I would recommend that you all determine to give more attention to making money for yourselves than in trying to sell your goods for less than some cutter has them exposed on the sidewalk. I have known retail grocers who have given their whole attention to this, ordering their goods of several reputable wholesale grocers in whom they had confidence and giving their whole attention to putting out their goods at a fair margin of profit above the cost of doing business, and I have seen such grocers get rich within the period of my experience. The fact is that we as wholesale grocers have learned this lesson and so far as we are concerned know very well when any grocer wants to sell goods for less than cost it should be his privilege to do so and we ought to let him have all that business he wants. We, however, must get a margin, and it is right that we should.

Hustling Clerks Who Have Faith.

I am well aware that the retail grocer has very much to contend with and his work is necessarily very hard and trying, yet if he will determine to run his own business, urge upon his clerks to believe that are selling good goods, that they are selling honest goods to honest men and by honest methods; urge them to believe in working instead of waiting, booming goods instead of knocking, and get everyone in his establsihment interested in the pleasure of sellings goods pleasing his customers. I think it will go a long way towards success in business; and you will readily see that this advice is just as good for the wholesaler as well as the retailer.

I urge that there should be more friendly relations between the retailer and the wholesaler, and it occurs to me that the retailer that makes business worth while to the jobber is more likely to receive the latter's best help, for the jobber is in a position to protect him in many ways that may not occur to him without reflection. It is the interest of all the jobbers to purchase the best goods that the consumer wants and they can help the retailer to keep out of his stock the items for which he has only an occasional call. If he sold all there was sold in the city or State of such goods he would not make much money, for the reason that there is little or no demand for them; and the jobber is generally better posted in this respect than the retailer can possibly be.

Value of Association.

Understand, gentlemen, I have no objection to any retailer buying his goods as well as he can possibly buy them, but at the present time there are very many questions to be taken into consideration as to who is selling you the best, and what is really the cheapest for you to buy. At least this is so with the jobbers, and I believe the retailer and jobber's interests in this respect are mutual. I believe that to successfully conduct the retail business we must have confidence in one another, and when we lose this confidence or try to do business without it, it will be at a great risk of profit. The truth is that this confidence is best cultivated by associated effort, and I am glad to see so many retail grocers of the United States in this convention. The special features of associated work is of vastly more importance than most of us realize, for the reason that when you come together for two or three days down here in Texas, for example, you find that the retail grocer—your neighbor in Texas or from any other State—is really a good fellow, the real bone and sinew of the land; that he wants to make money just the same as you do, and when he is satisfied that this is your feeling, too, he is inspired by this new order of things—that we have one and all been broadened out and realize that none of us are all there is in our particular line of business. Then we can all determine that we will conduct our business in an honest, straightforward way, always trying to sell the best goods and get a margin for work and capital.

Now, gentlemen, to my mind these are the real practical benefits to be derived from associated work, and if we determine to be governed there by it will be of great benfit to us all to have attended this convention.

THREE MORE GAMES OF HOCKEY

Lumbers Beat Kinnear and the Brokers Win From Davidson & Hay.

The first game played in the Wholesale Grocers' Hockey League between T. Kinnear & Co. and Jas. Lumbers & Co. resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 2 to 1. These teams met again Wednesday night, Jan. 30, and Lumbers turned the tables on Kinnear beating them 4 to 2. It was by no means a parlor game but a good exhibition of the Winter sport. T. Kinnear & Co. played a great game in the second half, scoring two goals in less than five minutes, and had it not been for Tom Kinnear receiving a nasty cut over the eye from Gee, which practically put him out for the balance of the game, the score might have been reversed. Lumbers & Co. have a fine team, lots of weight and speed, and have a great chance to carry off the Tillson Trophy.

Tom Kinnear, C. Rennie and Gordon Humphrey played a star game and for Lumbers, Oliver, Gee and Wess Lumbers were the best.

Chas. Morrow acted as referee.

Following was the line-up of the two teams :

Jas. Lumbers & Co.		T. Kinnear & Co.
Wess Lumbers	goal	Legge
Tom Kerr	point	H. Rennie
S. Oliver	cover point	G. Humphrey
Corrigan	right forward	Lowe
Gee	centre	T. Kinnear
F. Lumbers	left forward	C. Rennie

Brokers Win Another.

On Thursday night, Jan. 31st the Brokers defeated Davidson & Hay by a score of 4 to 2. It was the most exciting game this season, the teams being very evenly matched, so much so that at full time the score stood 2 all. Ten minutes extra time was played and the Brokers added 2 more goals. At half time Davidson & Hay looked to be the winning team, having the Brokers beaten 2 to 0, but the second half showed their lack of condition.

Charlie Morrow scored the Brokers' first goal in the first five minutes of the second half and in less than three minutes more Millman scored the second and in the extra ten minutes Tom Webber worked the rubber past Robinson for two more.

Davidson & Hay were short two men of their team, Meath and Moffatt, and the Brokers had to play without Percy Millman and Billie May, both being out of town.

Charlie Rennie, who substituted Meath, played a phenomenal game, having lots of speed.

Gould scored Davidson & Hay's two goals on lifts from mid-ice.

S. Oliver refereed to the satisfaction of both teams.

The teams lined up as follows :

Brokers		Davidson & Hay.
Ferguson	goal	Robinson
Morrow	point	Gloddish
Thompson	cover point	Gould
Watt	right forward	Bilton
Webber	centre	Wylie

Referee, S. Oliver.

Kinnear's Win Their Second.

At Varsity rink on Monday, Feb. 11th, T. Kinnear & Co. defeated Davidson & Hay by a score of 11—0, this victory taking Kinnear's out of last place. There is no doubt, the Kinnear team has been traveling in hard luck, but with their strongest line-up, as they had against Davidson & Hay, they can make any team in the league go their best.

Davidson & Hay were forced on the defensive soon after the start. The constant rushing of Humphrey and Brown and the combination of Ford and Kinnear, seemed to bewilder the Yonge St. men.

Robinson had a busy night in goal and stopped a number of dangerous shots. He was Davidson & Hay's best man, while Wylie performed well on the line. The half-time score was 5—0. The line-up was as follows :

Davidson & Hay — Goal, Robinson ; point, Gladish ; coverpoint, Bilton ; forwards, Blackburn, Gould and Wylie.

T. Kinnear & Co.—Goal, Legge; point, Brown ; coverpoint, Humphrey, forwards, Ford, Kinnear and C. Rennie.

The standing of the Toronto Wholesale Grocery League is as follows :

	Won.	Lost.	To Play
James Lumbers' Co. ...	3	1	2
Brokers	2	1	3
T. Kinnear & Co.	2	3	1
Davidson & Hay	1	3	2

MONTREAL GROCERY SHOW

The space for the exhibition of groceries in Montreal, between April 16 and 29, is being very rapidly taken up.

POPULAR GOODS.

The accompanying illustration gives the reader an idea of the outward appearance of four popular lines put up by the Ozo Co., Montreal. The large jars weigh 63 lbs. to 65 lbs., and make a nice display when placed on the stand seen in the illustration. This stand is given free with every order for four jars, as is also a supply of pint and quart oyster cartons sufficient to last out the contents of the jars.

NOTES.

W. H. Millman, of W. H. Millman & Sons, Toronto, was confined to his home last week by an attack of tonsilitis.

Very attractive advertising signs and shelf strips are now being distributed among the trade by the N. K. Fairbanks Co. Fairy Soap, Gold Dust, Sunny Monday and other famous brands are advertised.

W. M. Howe, of Arnprior, whose engraved letter head describes him as an importer of groceries, provisions and crockery, and his store as "the leading grocery and crockery house in eastern Ontario," has issued a very neat pocket calendar. It is an aluminum card, on one side a condensed date table, and on the other a reminder that Mr. Howe is Arnprior's leading grocer and sells "everything good to eat." Mr. Howe is also Mayor of Arnprior.

ANOTHER PRIZE WINDOW

Second in the Christmas Competition—A Toronto Grocer's Originality—Device to Increase Display—A London Maple Idea.

The second prize in the Christmas window dressing competition of The Canadian Grocer went to George Rogers, 830 College Street, Toronto, and even with the unsatisfactory photograph reproduced it is easily seen why he deserved it.

Perhaps the main feature of the display is the four wire cylinders placed at intervals across the window. These measured about 1 foot in diameter, the taller ones standing about 4 feet, and the others about 2 feet. The larger cylinders, containing almonds and walnuts, topped with apples and oranges, were made of a double thickness of wire netting—that is, a tube within a tube, the diameter of the one being two or three inches less than that of the other. Only the space between the two then required to be filled, although the appearance is that of a solid column of nuts. One of the remaining cylinders is filled with apples, while the other contains oranges.

The central pyramid is composed of E. D. Smith's and Goodwillie's preserves and jams, together with honey in the comb and in jars, arranged in layers, each tier resting on a sheet of glass placed on top of the one below. At the right and left of the window are smaller pyramids on the same plan, while two more are constructed of canned goods.

Boxes neatly covered with crepe paper and heaped alternately with oranges and apples are arranged across the window. Between these are cartoons of seeded raisins, in pyramid form. These, with small bottles of flavoring extracts, are also used as fillers in other parts of the display.

In the foreground are boxes of figs and candied peel, with small heaps of nuts between.

The background is composed of evergreen wreathing, hung perpendicularly, an inch or so apart, from a horizental bar in the floor of the window.

Holly placed in every available corner framed in the whole display, and with a large tissue-paper bell hung from the ceiling gave the proper Christmas tone to the general arrangement.

A Prize Christmas Window from Toronto.

A WINDOW DEVICE.

Michie & Co., Toronto, have a simple device in their grocery window which adds considerably to their facilities for display. Their window is the same shape as many grocery windows. It is a rectangle less the triangle necessary to widen the street entrance. That gives a window this shape:

To the post at the angle A Michie & Co. have attached by hinges a swinging partition about three feet high. The side facing the larger portion of the window is a mirror. The other side is fitted with plate glass shelves. These are used principally for the display of fancy canned goods in glass; but that depends. Sometimes the glass shelves are close to the slanting window, sometimes considerable space is left. One advantage of this device is that it permits two entirely separate displays at the same time.

A MAPLE SUGAR DISPLAY.

(From the London correspondent of The Canadian Grocer.)

T. A. Rowat & Co., 234 Dundas St., London, hit upon a happy idea for a window display of maple syrup. A sapling was secured somewhere in this land of maples and planted, in its primitive state, at the rear of the window. With the tree as a centrepiece, a few accessories served to make a striking rustic scene, very suggestive of the purity of the syrup and cakes of sugar which were also displayed in the window. T. A. Rowat & Co.'s windows are always attractive.

TIMOTHY EATON, THE MAN

Sketch of the Great Merchant Who Passed Away Last Week—His Own Fortune-maker—An Irishman of Scotch Descent.

By the death of Timothy Eaton on Thursday of last week Canada loses its greatest merchant. He began as a retailer and remained a retailer and his monument is the great business he built up. Mr. Eaton came to Canada in 1857 with £100, a common school education and the memory of a good mother. He has left a business that is among the two or three largest retail stores in the world. In proportion to the country and population, it is the largest in the world by long odds. Marshall Field's, Chicago, is larger, but not nearly as much larger as the population of Chicago is larger than Toronto's or that of the United States larger than Canada's. A member of a government survey called at a settler's shanty in the back woods of northern Ontario. He wanted to see the settler, but the wife only was ed at him." His mind was not on money making, but his ambition was wrapped up in his business. Every faculty of his alert and powerful intellect, every ounce of his abundant physical strength was directed along the lines of building up the Eaton store. His manner was abrupt to bluntness. Personal considerations weighed little or nothing with him when the welfare of the store was at the other end of the scale. But his vision was far-seeing; his politics were broad, liberal, and founded in justice and honesty. "The greatest good to the greatest number" was a motto of his. He was a man of strong individuality and great self-reliance. His mind worked with such rapidity that his decisions, even in important matters, were often instantaneous.

at home. When he told her he was from Toronto she became interested at once; asked him in and began to question him about Eaton's. She told him they had been getting their supplies from Eaton's for several years and were greatly pleased with the service but she had never been in the store. She wanted to know everything he knew about the store and its founder.

Eaton the Man.

The Eaton store is known to most Canadians, but the man behind it has been little in the limelight of publicity. Few men knew his politics. In commerce or finance outside his business he was practically unheard of. He had a passion for merchandising, not for money making. He said to his son not very long ago: "If anyone had told me years ago that I would control as much as a million dollars, I would have laugh-

At one time there was a vacancy at the head of an important department that had to do with the whole store. Two good men in the department wanted the place and a good deal of feeling developed among the other managers. It came to the ears of Mr. Eaton. He asked for an explanation. "Let them both go," was his immediate decision. One of them is now one of the highest-salaried men of his class in America, and the other is manager of a big store in another city.

A Just Man.

An incident of many years ago will show how, while his sense of justice could be appealed to, his first consideration was the business.

When Mr. Eaton was located on Yonge St., south of Queen, he employed for the print counter a young Scotchman just arrived from the Old Country. A couple of weeks after a methodist clergyman and his wife were in the store. She bought some print and moved on with Mr. Eaton to another counter. Her husband had gone to the methodist bookroom just around the corner. When she went to pay Mr. Eaton for something she had bought from him she missed her purse, and saying she left it at the print counter went to get it. The Scotch clerk told her there had been no one at the counter and if the purse was left there it would be here yet. He began to search but could not find it and she accused him of having it. Mr. Eaton came and the clerk said to him what he had said to the customer. Mr. Eaton said he would have him searched and called the foreman. The Scotch clerk put his back against the shelves and said to his employer, "send for a policeman, and I'll stand here, but no man in this house will put a hand on me." No one wanted to tackle the angry Scot, and while they waited for the officer the minster came back. His wife explained that she had lost her purse and he replied, "oh, no, my dear, you haven't. Don't you remember you gave it to me ?''

THE LATE TIMOTHY EATON.

JOHN C. EATON,
The Present Head of the Business.

Demanded Apology.

The customers were moving away when the clerk interrupted with "this woman has accused me of a crime, and if she doesn't apologize it'll be my turn to send for an officer." The minister came back to apologize, but that wouldn't do. He insisted upon his accuser doing so and she did. When they had gone Mr. Eaton called him to the office, paid him off and told him to go. When he had his money the clerk said: Mr. Eaton, if you had a son 3,000 miles from home and he was accused falsely of theft and did not stand up for his honor, what would you think of him?"

"But you've lost me that customer," growled Mr. Eaton.

"Better lose a thousand customers than that a son should sully his honor," burst forth the Scotchman.

"Em. Go back to your department," was all Mr. Eaton said, and that ended the matter.

A Blunt Man.

Mr. Eaton's bluntness was positive, assertive. His intensely practical mind, keyed by nature to rapid action, could not brook parleying. He made up his mind quickly and acted promptly. Like other people he made mistakes, but he was never ashamed to admit one as soon as he saw a better way. With him nothing was finished till he thought it right. He had no patience with makeshifts. He might order up a stairway in the store to-day and to-morrow morning if he saw a better arrangement he would order it down again with just as little hesitation. His ambition never halted at the biggest or best store. His aim was ever a better store. Restless progressiveness was a dominant characteristic.

Judging Men.

One not inconsiderable factor in his success was his faculty for estimating men. He was going through the store once and came upon a big Irishman, lately employed as floorwalker. "How long have you been here?" he asked abruptly. "It's none of your business" responded the Irishman cheerfully, not knowing his employer in person. "Well, what are you doing?" persisted Mr. Eaton. "I'm minding my own business, and that's more than you're doing," returned the Irishman, testily. Mr. Eaton's comment afterwards was that he wished he had several hundred more like that in the store.

Another time a manager of a department affecting the whole business, made arrangements for a week off. In the course of the week something went wrong and the operations of the department were practically suspended for a couple of days by Mr. Eaton's order. Shortly after the manager returned Mr. Eaton was in the private lunchroom when this man entered. He called him over and in his characteristically brusque style accosted him :

"So you're to blame for all this trouble we've had."

Without hesitation the manager shouldered the blame.

"Yes sir, I guess that's right."

Just as gruffly Mr. Eaton said it shouldn't have happened, and the conversation was ended, but next pay day the manager found an advance of $10 a week in his salary. Mr. Eaton had wanted to see if the man was big enough for his place and would shoulder his responsibility as manager, present or absent.

Treatment of Employes.

Talking about Mr. Eaton with men in the employ of the store to-day or with men who left it many years ago, they all render his conversation in a tone as brusque and abrupt as one can imagine a man to speak. Yet in the treatment of his employes he was large hearted. There has never been a strike on account of wages or conditions. A manager told the writer he knew he was getting more money than he could get anywhere else. If an employe is away a day, two days at most, someone is sent to see if he or she is ill. Should that be the case, it is seen that he or she has proper medical attendance, or if necessary is sent to a hospital, and the hospital bill is paid. Before the business assumed such tremendous proportions Mr. Eaton would go himself in cases of sickness. He took pride in his staff. Speaking to his pastor once after a store picnic he exclaimed, "It would do your heart good to see them."

Early Closing.

More than any other man, perhaps more than any score, Mr. Eaton has helped on the movement for a shorter workday in Canada. One Christmas Eve, years ago, there was such a crush in the store that the crowds were almost unmanageable. Mr. Eaton declared he would never keep his store open at night again. He inaugurated the 5 o'clock closing, first during the summer and extended it to the whole year. He next closed the store at one o'clock on Saturdays during the hot months and his intention was to extend that month by month. He often said the time would come, not in his lifetime but his sons', that stores would close all of Saturday all the year. His theory was that if people had one clear day in which to enjoy themselves, they would attend more regularly to their religious duties on Sunday and would be the better for it, both as employes and as citizens.

In religion Mr. Eaton was a Methodist, and a stout adherent of the old-fashioned orthodoxy, but he was not an aggressively devout man. He took his religion as a matter of course and his business as a matter of fact.

His Ancestors.

Mr. Eaton's forbears were farmers near Belfast, Ireland, and he was descended from a Scotch settlement of 300 years ago when Cromwell was making Ireland over. His father died before he was born, but his mother was a brave, ambitious woman, and despite their poverty, secured to her children the national school education available at the little village of Clogher. After the potato famine of 1847 the oldest boy came to Canada and Timothy was apprenticed to a draper at Portglenone, a small market town. After five years he took his wages, £100, and followed his elder brother. He started in business in Kirkton, Huron County, in 1857, where supplies had to be brought in by wagon. Later he removed to St. Mary's where he was in partnership with his brother. The field was not large enough for him and he had become possessed of a desire to do business on a cash basis. He said to his brother, "You take the money and I'll take the business, or I'll take the money and you take the business."

The latter solution was adopted and he came to Toronto in 1869 and opened a small store on Yonge St., south of King. Then he removed to a store between Queen and Richmond and some time later to 190 Yonge St.

Principles of Business.

Early in his independent business career Mr. Eaton laid down three principles, no credit, no misrepresentations, one price to all. On these by the force of his ability, his courage and his dogged perseverance, he built his great success. All three qualities were often needed in the early days to pull him through. At one time a big dry goods house in Toronto guaranteed all his bills and he paid five per cent. for it. A Scotch house once had an account of $29,000 against him, and becoming nervous sent a man to collect it. Mr. Eaton told him as brusquely as usual that he would pay it whenever he got ready. But the agent entered suit and an agreement was made for the payment at the rate of $1,500 a month. The payments were all met promptly. But for many years the Eaton store has bought for cash and its buyers circumnavigate the globe.

No rule of business could be adhered to more strictly than Mr. Eaton's to sell for cash. It is stated that Mrs. Eaton has asked a clerk to send an article home for her without the cash and been refused. The wealthiest customers pay the cash or get their goods c.o.d.

One is inclined to seek the reason for Mr. Eaton's great success. It is to be found only in the man himself. He is one of the few very rich men whose wealth is quite independent of any government aid or public privilege. He made his money and built his success as a trader and the business he built up amply entitles him to be named a merchant prince.

N. B. MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., Feb. 4, 1907.

The past week has been very quiet in the local wholesale market. Ontario flours have gone down ten cents a barrel, though there is no apparent reason for the change. In the produce line butter and eggs are reported to be coming in quite freely, and both staples are slightly easier in price. Collections are reported to be only fair.

Local grocers were greatly pleased with the success of "Johnny" Malcolm and "Fred" Shaw, who skipped the two St. John rinks, which won the Granite Club cup in the big Montreal bonspiel. Mr. Shaw is proprietor of a large retail grocery and meat store on Waterloo street, and Mr. Malcolm is in business with his father, Andrew Malcolm, wholesale grocer and fish merchant of the South wharf.

WINNIPEG DELINQUENT LIST.

Winnipeg retailers are setting a worthy example to retailers in all parts of the country in the harmonious way in which they are working together and the intelligent manner in which they are reaping the benefits of organization. Every dealer who gives credit at all has his troubles with dead beats and slow pay customers. Often he is imposed upon by customers who ask for credit at a time when they owe heavy store bills to other merchants, bills which they are unable to pay or which they have no intention of paying. If he knew of this heavy indebtedness he would hesitate to supply goods on credit, but under ordinary circumstances he has no means of knowing about it.

Winnipeg retailers have grappled with this problem in a practical way. Grocers, butchers, dry goods men, druggists, etc., have been organized in Winnipeg in separate associations by secretary W. A. Coulson. The hardware men have long had an efficient organization and their secretary is J. E. McRobie, secretary of the Western Canada Retail Hardware Association. The members of these various branch associations furnish Mr. Coulson and Mr. McRobie with the names and addresses of "delinquents" who refuse to pay their accounts and with whom no satisfactory settlement can be made; with the names and addresses of slow pay customers and with the names of delinquent and slow pay customers who have changed their addresses and cannot now be located by those dealers to whom they are in debt. The secretaries keep secret the sources of their information, but, from the data supplied, they compile a list which is supplied to association members in good standing. This list is revised every fortnight and is thus kept up to date in every respect.

The writer has before him the list dated January 15th, 1907. It contains the names and addresses of 144 "delinquent" customers and of 75 slow pay customers. It also gives the names and former addresses of 50 delinquent customers who cannot now be located.

All this is valuable information and must, in the course of a year, save the members many times their small membership fee. The list is in no sense a "black list." It is not posted up and the members are under no obligation not to sell or give credit to those who are listed. The dealer has the list for his own information and if he gives credit to a customer whom other dealers report as a "delinquent" he runs the risk and walks into danger with his eyes open.

TIMOTHY EATON.

The late Timothy Eaton was a great man. This journal has not approved all his competitive methods and does not now, but it recognizes in him a man of powerful intellect and a personality of remarkable force. Fate, perhaps, made him a merchant. He did the rest. There were no Government favors nor special concessions for him, no fortuitious alliance with some financial power until he imbibed some of it himself. Single handed, often against tremendous difficulties, he made his way in open competition with the world. He worked out old principles on new lines, and husbanded and organized his successes to produce results that, viewed as the work of a single business career, in a sparsely settled country, are tremendous. Mr. Eaton was an honest man, a bluff man and a man with a great heart.

FARMERS' BOARDS OF TRADE.

Farmers' Boards of Trade are institutions the merchants should encourage. Organization will benefit agriculture and the improvement of agriculture means more merchandizing and better returns for the merchants. The first farmers' Board of Trade in Canada was organized in King's county, N.S., twelve years ago. It has done excellent work. At its meetings the farmers from all over the county get together and talk things over. It keeps them informed. The informed man is the progressive, the successful man in any line of endeavor. The merchant who looks beyond the bounds of his own business and takes a patriotic interest in the betterment of his community is, other things being equal, the best merchant.

WON'T SOME ONE WAKE UP?

Some kind friends and gentle readers may wonder why we pay so much attention to the annual convention of the National Retail Merchants' Association of the United States. The explanation is easy. The American grocer is not far removed in trade relationship from the Canadian. The food-stuff and merchandizing problems are much the same north and south of the line. The relations and differences of wholesaler and retailer here and there are not very unlike. The addresses we have published and shall publish are worth reading by the subscribers of The Canadian Grocer.

But there is another consideration. Organization of the grocery trade in Canada is just as necessary and would be just as advantageous. Why is it confined to a few centres; a few unrelated local associations without an atom of influence beyond their own boundaries, and little there compared with what it would be if they were integral parts of a sea-to-sea association of the retail food-stuffs interests. Won't some grocer or some local association rise to the occasion?

LENT.

Lent is at hand and the truly pious grocer, besides abstaining from some few delicacies that don't agree with him, will assist his neighbors in the straightened way by providing for them palatable food-stuffs that will comfortably take the place of forbidden varieties. Anyway, here are 40 days and nights associated with the idea of abstenance from certain classes of food; surely the grocer owes it to his customers to take thought of the matter. The grocer is becoming more and more the custodian of the people's dietory and he should rise to his responsibility.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Fish—Revised.

Teas—Interesting market.

Feb. 7.

As is usual at this season trade is not very brisk. Orders received call for goods that are required for immediate consumption and as a result trade is more of a hand to mouth character than otherwise. This week there is not a great deal to interest in the various markets. There have been no radical changes in prices since last report. Sugars remain steady, although some think there will be a decline before there is seen an advance. Corn syrups are selling particularly well. Currants are in fair demand in packages. No new feature is noticeable in the raisin market. Prunes have not changed. Canned goods are selling as freely as can be expected. The tea market is a very interesting one at present. Blacks are very strong and Ceylon greens are in about the same condition. The latter are likely to advance, according to cable advices from Ceylon. Evaporated apples are still hovering around ten cents. Beans are quoted a little lower in some instances.

Collections are fairly good in the city, but country grocers are not paying up as well as usual. The fact that many of them are just now meeting the bills for their Fall goods, no doubt accounts for this to a large extent.

SUGAR—Locally there is nothing new to report on sugars. Trade is of a hand to mouth character. Prices at the moment are steady.

TEAS—The tea market is one of the most interesting in grocery lines. The manner in which nearly all grades of teas have kept up in strength is, to say the least, rather unexpected to tea men who have been in the business for years. There is a good strong demand for Ceylon greens and for blacks. Latest advices from Colombo say that the weather is unfavorable, and that prices are likely to advance. Lower grades of Japans are upward in tendency. The better Japans are gradually being cleaned up.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—After the continued activity in all kinds of dried fruits the present quiet seems rather strange. This week there has been very little trading. Some inquiry for seeded raisins is reported, and package currants are said to be in some demand. Valencias are practically unobtainable. The market for Sultanas appears to be slightly easier in feeling. Prunes are without change.

CANNED GOODS

Montreal.—Fair business has been done in canned goods this week. The trade on the whole has been hardly more than of a hand to mouth character. Baked beans are firm and prices have an advancing tendency. Tomatoes are in fair demand at $1.20 and higher prices are expected before the new pack. Some sales of salmon are reported. The commencement of Lent will have the effect of increasing consumption of canned fruits and vegetables, and some grocers not stocked as well as they should be are ordering freely enough.

TORONTO — Canned goods continue in steady demand for consumption and nearly every order includes a few cases at least. Prices here are still unchanged. The Canner, of Chicago, gives the pack of tomatoes in Canada last year as 35 per cent. in excess of the pack in 1905; 718,333 cases, against 533,400. The figures are not credited here. Anyway the trade continues to declare that tomatoes will go higher.

H. J. Calwill, reeve of Arthur, has been in Guelph a week attending a meeting of the county council. This call of the public service makes a pleasant change from close attention to his own business.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Pointers:

Teas higher.
Sugar weak.
Prunes in demand.
Dairy butter lower.
Provisions firm.
Tallow higher.

Toronto, Feb., 7, 1907.

The grocery trade on the wholesale side is at the low ebb of the year. It consists of sorting-up orders. One thing worth remarking is the comment of our jobber that canned goods went with every order.

The only feature to the market, however, is the movement of prunes. This, of course, is the season for them. The market here is pretty well supplied at prices lower than prevail now at the Coast. Sugar is weak. In New York one refiner on Tuesday cut the price of refined 10 points. Next morning two others followed suit, and at noon the first refiner went down another 10 points. Buying is from hand to mouth. Tea is higher again in London. All dried fruit markets are firm.

SUGAR—A decline is expected in the price of refined here following the course of events in New York. A year ago this month sugar was 20c. lower than now. The refiners, however, declare that the raws they are using now cost considerably more than the present market price.

In New York the raw market is still easy at 2½c. of for centrifugals 96 degrees. Last week European beet declined 2¼d., from 8s.9¾d. to 8s.7½d., because some French brokers came into the market as sellers but it recovered early this week to 8s.8d. This is equivalent to a shade over 3.80c. duty paid New York for centrifugals basis 96 degrees. Cuban centrifugals at 2½c. is equal to 3.485 duty paid New York.

The Cuba crop progresses, with 179 centrals now working, which is within four of the highest expected to grind this season. Receipts for the week, 61,000 tons, broke all previous records of crop making in any year. In Cuba, for some time, the weather has continued fine, most of planters have had a sufficient supply of laborers and no important political disturbance has been reported. The total visible crop to date is 313,800 tons, against 96,032 tons at same time last year.

Total stocks of Europe and America are 3,746,234 tons, against 4,023,457 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The decrease of stock is 277,223 tons, against a decrease of 296,008 tons last week. Total stocks and afloats altogether show a visible supply of 3,861,234 tons, against 4,108,457 tons last year, or a decrease of 247,223 tons.

TEA—This week's London auctions show an advance of ¼d. to ½d., which quite recovers the previous week's decline due to an unusual overloading of the market. The advance in Indians was most noticeable in the lower grades but the Ceylons were all firmer. A London mail advice of Jan 24 says: "Private cabled advices just received from Calcutta place the total quantity available from Northern Indian for the United Kingdom this season at about 163 to 164 millions. As this information comes from a reliable source and should prove correct, the ideas held by some as to the supplies for the next few months must undergo considerable alteration, for with five millions more of the current Indian crop already sold and used, the balance still to be disposed of is apparently smaller than last year." Locally tea is in good demand.

COFFEE—The market here is unchanged. Willett & Gray say of the general situation: "Altogether, it is an interesting position in coffee, for if the world's visible is now 500,000 bags larger than a month ago, the Government purchases of 3,000,000 bags included in the visible are held out of the market absolutely, and there are much less supplies available for the trade now than at the same time last year or two years ago. The average of three years' consumption exceeds production, a point which confirms the good merits of coffee at this low level."

DRIED FRUITS—Prunes are the feature of this market and are the only line in active demand. The wholesale trade is pretty well supplied at prices below what the fruit could be bought for now. Valencias are very firm in London, where some stocks are held.

Chas. Rennie, of the T. Kinnear sampleroom, Toronto, hockey specialist, was hit on the ankle with a puck the other night and is laid off.

Kirkwood Watson, of P. L. Mason & Co., Toronto, while playing hockey a fortnight ago, was struck on the knee with a puck, and this week was removed to his home in Woodstock with his leg in a plaster cast.

A. H. Baker, of the Old Homestead Canning Co., Picton, is now in New York, and will return to Buffalo for the canners' convention.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 7, 1907.)

Severe weather and snow blockades still combine to render miserable the life of the commercial traveler who is so unfortunate as to be on the road and to reduce the sales of the wholesale houses. The railways continue to accept freight but deliveries are very light and in many parts of the west the trade are unable to get goods.

CANNED GOODS—In steady demand at unchanged prices. Sockeye salmon is practically unobtainable.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 5, 1907.

There is a fair volume of trading moving at the present time. Business is very satisfactory for the season of the year, and collections continue good. Prices throughout the list are very steady. Now that the Lenten season is approaching, the fish markets are showing great activity, and the movement is large. Quotations on the principal lines are about as follows :

SUGAR—Extra granulated, $4.30; Austrian granulated, $4.20 ; bright yellow, $4.10 ; No. 1 yellow, $3.80 ; unbranded yellow, $3.65.

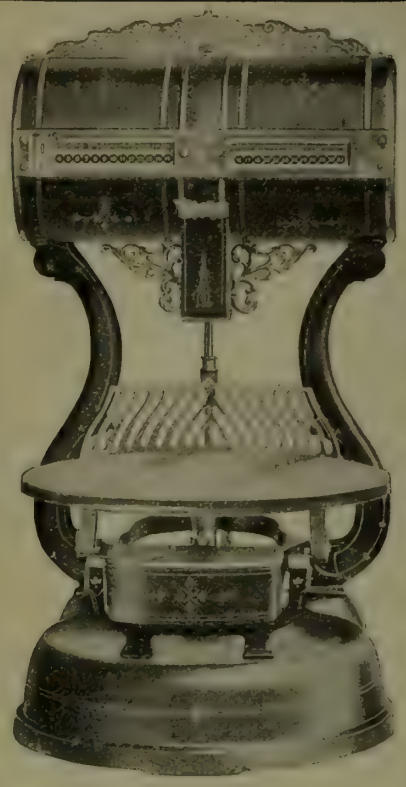
FISH—(ex-store)—Large (shore) cod, $8; medium (shore) cod, $7.50; large (bank) cod, $6.25; shore cod, ex-vessel, $5 to $5.50; bank, $5.75 to $6; herring, C.B., No. 1, July, $4.50 ; Labrador, No. 1, $4.25; mackerel, No. 1, $20; mackerel, No. 2, $15 ; mackerel, No. 3, $10.

MOLASSES, Fancy Trinidad, 39c.; choice Trinidad, 35c. to 36c.; Porto Rico fancy, 37c. to 38c.; Porto Rico extra choice, 37c.; fancy Barbado, 32c. to 33c.; Barbados, 29c.

PROVISIONS—Beef, American plate, $15 to $15.25; Canadian, $13; pork, P.E. Island mess, $22 to $22.50; American fat backs, $22 to $22.50; hams, 15c. to 16½c. side bacon, 17c.; roll bacon, 13½c.; lard, in cases, 13¼c. to 14c.; lard, in pails, 13¼c. to 13½c.

VEGETABLES—Potatoes, P. E. Island, per bush., 75c. to 80c.; potatoes, Nova Scotia, per bush., 80c.; potatoes, New Brunswick, per bush., 80c.; turnips, per bbl., $1 ; beets, carrots and parsnips per bbl., $1.50.

BUTTER AND EGGS—There is a fair demand for both at present, but the price keeps up, and therefore the consumption is curtailed to some extent. Very little local made butter is on the market, and small tubs of fresh dairy butter cannot be had at any price. Nearly all of the best butter offered for sale here now is from Quebec and Ontario. Choice creamery is quoted from 26c. to 27c., and other grades from 24c. to 25c. With regard to eggs there is no change in receipts or price. Fresh laid stock sells freely from 35c. to 40c. and case eggs from 25c. to 28c. per dozen.



THIS is a money, time and labor-saving scale specially adapted for butchers and grocers.

See our exhibit at Western Canada Retail Association rooms during the convention and at our office, corner Notre Dame Ave. and Arthur Street.

CANNERS' PROGRAMME.

What is Scheduled to Happen at the Big Gathering in Buffalo Next Week.

The programme for the Canners' Convention to be held in Buffalo next week has just been made public in as nearly complete form as possible.

Monday.—Reception at Iroquois Hotel by presidents of the four associations concerned,—Geo. G. Bailey, L. A. Sears, C. A. Suydam, and Walter A. Frost. Opening of machinery exhibit.

On Tuesday formal proceedings will commence. Mayor J. N. Adam, of Buffalo, will welcome the guests. Addresses by the four presidents, outlining the work and problems of their several associations. Afternoon session.—Addresses by Prof. E. W. Duckwall, M.S., of the National Canners' laboratory, on "Sterilization and Hermetically Sealing, an Agency for Keeping and the Preservation of Fruits and Vegetales Indefinitely," and W. R. Roach, of Hart, Mich., on "The Ideal Contract."

Wednesday.—Addresses by S. F. Hascrot on "Sellers' Guarantee," and "Food Standards," by Dr. Wm. Frear of the Pennsylvania State College, who is also chairman of the Federal Committee on Food Standards. In the afternoon, Dr. H. W. Wiley will discuss various phases of the Pure Food Law at close range with the members. At 4 o'clock the National Canned Goods and Dried Fruit Brokers' Association will hold a separate session. Evening.—"At Home" in the machinery building, with promenade concert by the 65th Regiment Band.

On Thursday the several associations will meet separately and transact business concerning their own affairs. In the evening the American Can Company will entertain the entire party at the Lyric Theatre.

On Friday the annual meeting of the Machinery and Supplies Association will be held and officers elected.

During the convention members of the convention are tendered free telephone service, both local and long distance, by the Bell Telephone Company, and the free use of wires for special messages by the Postal Telegraph Company. The Buffalo committee in charge of arrangements comprises C. M. Fenton, chairman; F. A. Rogers, secretary; and W. B. Phinney, treasurer.

It is probable that 2,000 delegates will be in attendance.

HIGH CLASS CONFECTIONERY AND THE GROCERY TRADE

(By a Confectionery Traveler.)

How many grocery stores carry a line of high class confectionery? A very small proportion. And why is it? Chocolates are now practically beyond the stage of luxury. They are a necessity. Medical men and food analysts show us that chocolate is a very valuable article of diet. I could give you figures to show the large increase in consumption of chocolate for the past few years, but will not go into details in this article.

Mr. grocery man will probably give some of the following reasons for not carrying a line of confectionery: "No demand," "no room," "no profit," "too much loss;" "I am running a grocery and not a confectionery store."

I have given above a few excuses which I will endeavor to show are unfounded.

First.—"No demand." This is incorrect, as there is a steadily increasing demand, but his next door neighbor is reaping the benefit. He must assist in creating the demand by placing a line of goods before his customers, and then see if his story will not be different.

Second.—"No profit." Let him stop a minute and figure how many of the numerous lines on his counters and shelves will show him a better margin. Confectionery stock is turned over very quickly, particularly if the line handled is advertised by the manufacturer in a liberal manner. A bill of confectionery can be turned over in a few weeks, while other goods stay on the shelf for months.

Third.—"No room." Every grocery man handles a line of fancy biscuits or cakes. Now what better suggestion than combining biscuits and confectionery in a special department? Put same in charge of a neat and attractive young lady, who will take an interest and pride in her work. This will result in largely increased biscuit business and an extra source of revenue from the confectionery end.

Fourth.—"Too much loss." This I will admit may occur on bulk goods if not properly looked after. But why handle goods in bulk? Chocolates may be obtained packed in attractive packages, (I have in view the lines of one manufacturer) put up in numerous packages of all sizes, which can be retailed at prices from 5c. up. Each package contains a guarantee from the manufacturer which protects the buyer in every case. The retailer buys his packages, turning them over at a margin of about 35 per cent. with absolutely no chance of loss.

My last.—A great many feel that in adding a confectionery department they are getting away from the legitimate grocery line. Not any more so than with fruits, vegetables, cakes, meats, etc. The up-to-date grocer is branching out more and more, making it possible for him to cater to the various wants of his customers. Why should his customer not have her confectionery sent up with other goods instead of being forced to purchase same outside? Another feature of recent days is our departmental stores, making it necessary for the grocer to add new lines to compete with same.

In closing, I trust that if any grocers have chanced to read this, they are feeling a little interested and willing to give confectionery a fair trial.

A few suggestions to the beginner:

Buy the best goods; a line that is advertised and well known.

Buy little and often.

Keep stock in an attractive and tasty manner.

After a fair trial, tell The Grocer what you think of confectionery as a side line.

GOOD SALESMANSHIP.

They have in Boston a salesmanship class in connection with one of the night schools. Leading merchants have appeared before these young people who desire to succeed in business, and each has emphasized some special line of effort that shall mean advancement in the chosen occupation.

Mr. Ferris, of the Gilchrist Co., in his address last week gave as his motto: "Make up your mind what you want; go after it and keep after it until you get it." "I did not come here to-night to teach you how to sell goods or how to trim windows, but how to get along and reach the top of the ladder," he said. "There is lots of room at the top, the bottom is much crowded. Great opportunities are always open for energetic men and women. Ambition accomplishes many things and will always make people better. The surest test of a man's mettle is his ambition. Ambition makes friends and makes enemies, and makes happiness and unhappiness, and the sooner you get ambition the better it will be for you.

"If you have ambition and do not get discouraged you will surely get along. If you desire to be a Rockefeller or a Morgan, you cannot smother it, you will be such a man.

"Take the best job that is offered to you and have ambition, but be sure always to back it up with honest methods. Keep at all times from getting a big head. If you have ambition and determination you will succeed. Every man who starts with a determination can be his own master.

"If I should lose my position to-morrow I would start in as a salesman and I would at the outset get the names of all people who come into the store and try to please them. Try to excel. Be optimistic. If you are worth getting a raise in salary you will get it."

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

(From "The Autobiography of a Business Man," in Everybody's Magazine.)

For a number of years I advertised only in my windows and in some of the street cars, because I did not feel that I could afford to advertise in the daily papers. Two years ago last September I was having a cravanette coat sale, and I succeeded in selling for a couple of weeks about fifty coats a day. I thought I would try a column ad. in one of the evening papers. The next day this column ad. appeared in one of the evening papers, and by the bye, it was not the one that has the largest circulation in Chicago; I selected the paper that this ad. appeared in because they gave me a low rate, but they agreed to give my ad. a good position in the paper. The result was that the next day the sales, which formerly had been about 50 coats a day, jumped to 142, and in 50 days I had sold over 3,500 raincoats. For the year following that sale I continued to advertise in this one paper. Last fall I felt that I could afford to invest say, about $5,000 in advertising in some one of the other papers. I used three morning papers, and three evening papers, the best in Chicago. The results have been something phenomenal. I did not have to invest the $5,000. The profits came back from the newspaper advertising before their bills came in, and I do not figure to-day that I have a dollar invested in advertising.

PERSONALS

T. J. Hamilton, Erin, is suffering from an attack of rheumatism.

Alex. Lockerby, of Lockerby Bros., Montreal, has left on a business trip to Winnipeg.

H. R. Tellier, of Tellier, Rothwell & Co., Montreal, was a caller upon the Toronto trade last week.

C. D. Cowles, representing the St. Charles Cream, Ingersoll, Ont., was in Montreal during the week.

Wm. McClarty, of McClarty Bros., Owen Sound, returned last week from a week's business trip to Boston.

W. E. Poulter, Preston, is back at business again after being laid up in the house a few days with a severe cold.

Mr. Williams, of Crosfield, Lampard, Clark & Co., Montreal, has returned from a trip to the other side of the line.

James Wallace, of Wallace Bros., Woodbridge, is ill with appendicitis. He was operated on at the General Hospital Tuesday.

Geo. Mason is again clerking with D. C. Russell, Erin. He went west a year and a half ago. The people of Erin are glad to have him back again.

Harold Hill, of Hill & Co., Orangeville, is anticipating a trip to the West as soon as stock-taking is completed. He intends making some investments.

J. A. Stephenson, Guelph, has just finished stock-taking and the travelers say his pleasant smile is indicative of the balance he found on the year's business.

T. G. Robinson, Galt, has moved from rented premises into his own new store. He has been in business there a couple of years and has built up a very nice trade.

Capt. Wallace, of Wallace Bros. Woodbridge, is anticipating another trip to Cobalt to look after his mining interests there. His brother, Leonard, was recently laid up with a very severe cold.

H. Laporte, head of Laporte, Martin & Cie, Ltd., Montreal, has been elected president of the Provincial Bank.

Edgar S. Marten, Bloomfield, president of the Farmers' Canning Co., was a caller at the Toronto office of The Grocer this week. Mr. Marten says jobbers both in Ontario and West are enquiring for tomatoes .

F. A. Haddy, Bowmanville, came up to Toronto Wednesday night of last week with his I.O.O.F. lodge. They had a special train and the Bowmanville band and made things hump in Oddfellowdom in Toronto for that evening.

J. W. Lachambre, of Revillion Freres, Edmonton, was in Toronto this week and registered at the King Edward. Mr. Lachambre is on his way back to Edmonton after spending a month in the Eastern markets in the interest of his company.

NEWS OF KINGSTON.

(By Canadian Grocer Correspondent.)

Commercial travelers have had a hard time of it lately, as their red faces and frost-bitten ears and noses indicate. The accommodation in some of the country towns and villages is not all wool. One traveler said he had to run the lamp chimney up and down the sheets to get the frost out of them. Another had to open his grip and drink a bottle of catsup, I think he called it Old Tom. Another slept in his fur coat. Jim Yule, R. Carson's popular traveler, got both cheeks frozen, notwithstanding the fact that he is a Scotchman and felt sure that travelers' cheeks were frost-proof. It was no Yule-tide for Jim, said a grocer on the market square.

Armour & Co. are demonstrating extract of beef on one of our large dry goods stores. The lady in charge is giving free lessons in cookery. This mode of advertising is expensive, but in connection with newspaper advertising, it is certainly effective. Many orders are taken from ladies, who test the merits of the extract, and these orders are sent to the grocer with whom she trades. May they meet with success.

"Eruka," a cleansing soap put up in tins to retail at 15c., is being introduced here. It is claimed to be the best of its kind in existence for taking out dirt and making black hands white. The mechanic's friend it is, indeed.

Jas. McFarland has bought out the flour and feed business of Mr. Tait, Brock street.

W. P. Peters, flour merchant, has shipped about 50 carloads of pressed hay lately and what little hay is left has jumped up four to five dollars a ton. It seems to be a revise of the saying, robbing Peter to pay Paul. Jim, the grocer, asked why St. Paul was like a horse? I suppose, because he was fond of Timothy.

J. Gilbert shipped 1,500 lbs. of No. 1 clover honey to Montreal this week, and got a good price for it.

James Kelley, successor to T. H. Johns, has secured the services of John Bennett, who, when a boy, worked for the late Senator Snowball, of Halifax. John is a popular clerk.

Fred. Vanluven's delivery horse got scared and went through his plate glass front, instead of the gateway. Fred feels pained over the affair, but it has to be borne. Fred. is an old commercial traveler (I don't mean aged). He traveled at one time for Stuart, Harvey & Son, of Hamilton.

J. Y. Parkhill & Co., received a car of potatoes. He calls them St. Patrick. I guess they belong to the Murphy family. They are pleasant-looking tubers with large eyes.

Kingston expects a little excitement this week when our Premier and his colleagues will visit out School of Mines, Queen's College dairy school and other important institutions. They will be given a banquet, and we hope they will go away feeling that Kingston is one of the most hospitable places they ever visited.

The Hon. Mr. Graham's appointment as leader of the Opposition was a popular one, and the delegates who waited on the Government to rid the country of the abominable trading stamp do not forget his kind attentions during their visit and extend the right hand of fellowship to him and hope for further advances for him.

CANADA'S BEAN CROP, ITS GROWTH AND DISTRIBUTION

At the meeting of the Michigan Bean Jobbers' Association in Detroit, on Jan. 30, N. H. Stevens, president of the Ontario Flour Mills Co., read a paper on the bean-growing industry of Canada. Mr. Stevens' address met with general approval, and he was given a hearty vote of thanks. Copies of his report were later ordered to be printed for the benefit of the members of the association. Mr. Stevens said in part:

"In reply to your invitation for a report on the Canadian bean crop, I have much pleasure in stating that in order to get as full and reliable information as posible in the short time I had to make a report. I wrote several prominent bean dealers as to the acreage, quality and average bushels threshed per acre, also the different kinds of beans grown in their locality and kind of soil best adapted for growing beans. I have also taken into consideration the Government report of acreage planted to beans in the year 1906, and from the information gathered, which I believe is correct, I have much pleasure in reporting as follows:

"55,000 acres Pea Beans, yielding 16 bushels per acre, 880,000; 1,000 acres Yellow Eyes, yielding 20 bushels per acre, 20,000; 400 acres Marrows, yielding 20 bushels per acre, 8,000; 200 acres Red Kidneys, yielding 18 bushels per acre, 3,600; 200 acres Mediums, yielding 15 bushels per acre, 3,000; 100 acres White Kidneys, yielding 24 bushels per acre, 2,400; 100 acres Black Turtle Soup, yielding 30 bushels per acre, 3,000; 57,000 acres producing 920,000.

"There are not many beans grown in Canada outside of Ontario, and the bean section of that province lies south of a line drawn from Toronto to Sarnia, the counties of Kent and Elgin producing seven-eighths of the beans.

"The quality of 1906 beans would not exceed three pound pickers. The average price paid to farmers for unpicked beans delivered at buyers' warehouses would be about $1.10 per bushel of 60 pounds. The value of the 1906 crop was $1,012,000, an average per acre of $17.75. In addition the farmer has the bean straw, which is nearly equal to a half crop of hay for feeding stock, being especially good for cattle and sheep. Then the land, after harvesting the beans, is nearly as good as a summerfallow for winter wheat, and since we have a full line of machinery to plant, cultivate, harvest, load and thresh beans, it is no more labor to produce a crop of beans and take them to market than it is to handle a crop of wheat or other grain.

"Loam or gravelly soil is considered the best for Pea Beans. The land should be well drained. Spring ploughing with sod turned generally gives best results. Marrows, Yellow Eyes, and White and Red Kidneys will do well on rich clay land. Our most successful farmers have a routine of crops, viz., take hay or pasture land, plough just before planting, turning over pretty deep sod. After harvesting beans sow land to winter wheat, seed with clover and timothy next spring on last flurries of snow. Harvest wheat, get fall pasture, and next spring take off crop of hay and then crop of clover; seed or use for pasture, then next spring turn over the sod and plant to beans. In this way the land is enriched by turning under the clover, and about the time the clover roots are decaying, the beans are podding. This insures a good crop and keeps the land in good condition.

"Bean raising for market was introduced in Canada about the year 1852 by some American families by the names of Ransoms and Handys, who settled in Kent county, Ontario, and beans in this locality by the same parties or their descendants have been continuously and successfully grown every year since.

"Before 1890 Canada sold most of her beans to the United States and bought her canned beans from Boston to supply her fisheries, and lumber and mining camps. Now, beans are generally used by all classes of people, the consumption has largely increased, and the canning of beans in Canada has grown to be a very large and profitable industry.

"Owing to the great development going on now in Canada, with our gold, silver, copper, lead, iron and Cobalt mines, the lumber and fisheries, together with railroad and shipbuilding, and last, but not least, the settling of our millions of acres of virgin prairie lands in the western provinces, a great flow of emigration is being brought to our country, which will further increase the consumption of beans, and unless our farmers largely increase the production Canada will soon be an importer instead of an exporter of beans.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

Higher prices rule in cheese this week, but the general feeling in the market is one of quietness. The season has now apparently advanced to the stage where holders form their ideas as to the prices at which they are willing to let go their stocks, and under these figures they will do nothing. At any rate those fortunate in having stocks more or less large are not inclined to consider offers which some time ago would have been called very attractive. There is a reason in many cases for the holding-out noticeable. Purchases were made at high figures, and dealers argue that they must obtain a good price or lose money. Looking at it in this way one does not wonder that some houses, the majority in fact, are firm in their intention to wait until prices climb to such a level as meets their ideas. Indications point to continued high prices. It is quite possible that something may occur to upset present calculations, but from the state of affairs at the moment it would seem certain that one quarter and perhaps one-half a cent more than is now obtainable will be forthcoming. This is all the more likely in that there is some trading done each succeeding week and unsold stocks are rapidly dwindling. Holders outside of Montreal are not in possession of a great number of boxes, while even in the city itself the holdings which are on sale would not total up to what some think they would. It must be remembered that there is much of the local cheese held on English account.

Reports from England say that the market is firm but quiet. Sales are being made occasionally at figures fairly satisfactory, but those having stocks require higher prices if they are to make any profit. New Zealand cheese is arriving in good quantities. Both it and the Canadian article are going into consumption rapidly enough.

It still looks as though prices for Spring make would open high. It is early to speak of probabilities for a season three months distant, but there is talk in the trade even thus early as to what will be the ruling prices for the first offerings.

One short of five hundred boxes more cheese arrived the week ending February 2 than arrived the previous week. Board of Trade report gives the receipts as 521 boxes, against 22 boxes for the week which ended January 26.

Butter is practically without change since last report. The market is a little firmer if anything. Prices hold around the same figues, however, and the volume of trade being done is not much larger, nor yet much smaller. Receipts are reported as being mostly large rolls. Receipts of creamery arriving are not nearly so large as those of rolls. The approach of Lent is helping the butter situation. Consumption will increase once the Lenten season sets in, and prices are bound to hold even more steadily and possibly may be higher.

Receipts of butter during the week were 1,157 packages, making the total since May 1, 1906, 604,852 packages. The total receipts of cheese during the same period were 2,349,270 boxes.

PROVISION SITUATION.

The farmers seem to have the packers in a corner, but that their advantage is working out to the advantage of Canada's hog-raising industry, which has been lifting the mortgage from so many Ontario farms is very doubtful. The fact is that without any arrangement, agreement, understanding or combine the market is in the farmers' hands. For some months the Old Country market has been in bad shape and the Canadian packer has been unable, between the price of live hogs and the price of bacon, to get out with a whole hide. At present there's a loss of about $6 a box on bacon. Naturally the packer has been trying to get his hogs at lower prices, since the price of his product in England is determined by forces over which he has no control. But when prices drop a quarter or get, say within sight of 6c., the farmers appear to be of one mind and hold their hogs. The packers are then put to it to keep their factiries going and their organization intact. To do this they must have hogs. Say a man wants 5,000 hogs a week and gets 1,000; the next week he says, "we must have some more," and bids 10c. above the market. The others are immediately onto it and away things go. Up go the prices, in come the hogs. The more hogs the packer kills the more money he loses on export. The natural tendency is to press down prices and the farmer catches on and proceeds to hold back his hogs. So the game goes on.

But the holding back of hogs that are ready for market results in the hogs getting too heavy, and now there is a spread of 4s. or 5s. on the English market between the best and too stout bacon. The farmer undoubtedly reaps an immediate advantage because at present there is no grading of hogs. A few years ago he got $1 a cwt. less for the too fat hogs. That was reduced to 50c., then to 25c., and then lost. Now if a packer undertakes to grade he gets no hogs. This system is strongly adverse to the development of the Canadian bacon trade. It is probably impossible to get the farmers and packers to co-operate. The farmer would immediately cry out against any organization of the packing industry, and there is no doubt that organization might lead to an abuse of power. Could not the Government afford relief by providing some sort of official referee system for deciding disputes between farmer and packer, as is done in regard to cheese?

The price of live hogs is up again this week to $6.65 f.o.b., which is 7¼c. delivered. Deliveries of hogs in Ontario last week aggregated about 17,000. The English market improved 2s. last week and this week is steady at the advance. Even at this the packer claims to be losing 1c. a pound on his product.

CONCENTRATION IN THE YUKON

Number of Merchants Will Decrease—City Market for Vancouver—G.T.P. Pacific Terminal Taking Form—Review of Coast Markets.

Vancouver, Jan. 31, 1907.

Milder weather has favored a return of trade to ordinary channels, but the extreme heat of political contest has tended to interrupt. There is almost suspicion attached to the man who for the past two weeks steadfastly endeavors to talk business quietly and sanely, while every other man is filled with politics.

Fortunately for business, the political campaign ends with the election on Saturday, when business men will have time to cool down and return to their normal occupations.

Vancouver city market is to be a realization at last, after long efforts on the part of a faithful few. The by-law authorizing the borrowing of sufficient money to build the market was passed last year, but action was deferred till this spring. Now it is the intention of the committee which has special charge of the market to go on at once, as the driving of piles for the wharf can be done during the winter as the tides will serve better than in the spring. It is likely tenders will be at once called for this portion of the work.

The location of the market, at the south end of Westminster Ave. bridge, gives access to it by water as well as by railway. The market wharf has frontage on False Creek and is close to the V.W. & Y. branch of the Great Northern Railway, while the B.C. Electric Railway with, connection to all the rural lines, passes the front of the market site. The location is also on one of the main roads leading into the city from the rich farming lands of the Fraser River, Delta, Lulu Island.

On Feb. 1, the Customs Department opens an office at Prince Rupert, the new terminal city of the G.T.P. From that date foreign shipments will be made direct to that port. The Canadian Bank of Commerce has also announced the opening of a branch at Prince Rupert on the same date, and as several business houses have already opened there, the new city is rapidly beginning to take shape. Extensive work is going on in connection with clearing the town site and building wharves. The plans of the railway as to beginning construction from the coast end have not yet been announced.

Northern trade this year is very likely to undergo a marked change, owing to the changed conditions in the Yukon. There the big New York mining people, the Guggenheims, have obtained control of such much of the placer ground that the number of individual miners is greatly reduced. The amount of business may perhaps be as great, but the fact that one big corporation controls so much of it will tend to concentrate the service into a few hands. It is very likely that the number of houses in the Yukon doing business independently, will be greatly reduced. Many of the men now in business there will have to close out and return south for the big dredging concern will initiate its own buying features to work for the greatest economy.

In the markets this week there was a slight improvement in the supply of produce, as farmers were better able to bring out their supplies. Prices have stayed up in some lines, owing to scarcity still, and in the lines of potatoes the price is much increased because much of the stored stock was frozen in the unwonted cold snap.

Not many fresh eggs are yet in the market, and the price is still high. The lowest quotations to the trade have been 50c and they are practically nominal, as the supply nearly all goes direct from the producers to the retail trade. Imported California stock is now about the only quotable supply. It sells at 40 to 43c pr dozen to the trade. Lower prices are, however, looked for.

Fresh local creamery butter is still 40c wholesale, and limited in quantity. No eastern butter is arriving and the reported stock of Australian creamery butter is much reduced already, stocks being so very much reduced. Present prices are likely to remain for some time. One eastern or Alberta creamery the trade quotes, 30 to 32c; on Australian grass creamery, 32½c; on local dairy, 30 to 35c; on eastern dairy, 22 to 27c. Cheese is limited in stock and prices dependent on eastern quotations entirely. Practically none is being brought forward now.

The fruit market is at bare as it ever is in this province. The supply of local apples has almost disappeared, and the importations are confined to fancy varieties from Oregon and Washington. The price of local stock is not less than $1.25 to $1.50 per box, for almost any sort of salable fruit, while the imported bring $2.00 per box. California oranges, Navels, are coming in plentifully and selling at $3.00 to $3.25. Bananas are indifferent in quality at this season, not appearing to mature and ripen with the full flavor and texture they do in warm weather. They quote at 5½c per lb. A few pineapples now in the market are bringing $3.75 to $4.25 per case.

Victoria hot-house lettuce is still scarce and local hot-houses are not turning in much stock. The price per crate is steady at $1.75. Ashcroft potatoes are away up this week to $35 per ton, while no locals are selling at less than $20. I is impossible that later in the season these figures may be again reduced, but at present they are firm.

* * *

Late arrivals of cold storage poultry from the east have left considerable stocks in dealers' hands. Prices are now advertised retail at 18c per lb. for turkeys, and 16c per lb. for ducks and geese. In Australian mutton the market remains well supplied. The steamer Moana brought several thousand carcases and the Miowera, due early next month, will have 3,160.

A GOOD THING WAITS.

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association held their at home in the Temple building Wednesday evening, and a report of the event should have appeared in this issue, but President Snow has neglected for some years to have his picture taken, and without it any account of the at home would be too incomplete. It is hoped to have all the wrinkles smoothed out in time for the next issue.

Railway Congestion—Prices Advancing Western Flour and Grain Cannot Be Got East—Oatmeal Millers Arrangment Disrputed.

What the outcome of the present railway congestion will be no one can say, but grain men in Ontario might about as well be closed up. There are four million bushels of wheat at Fort William and Port Arthur. Half of it is consigned for export, much of it to fill the holds of the C.P.R.'s own boats, but not a pound of it is moving eastward. Grain shipped from Winnipeg for export is being dumped at Fort William and the cars loaded with coal to relieve the fuel famine in the west where some farmers are said to be burning their oats—and the price approaching 40 cents a bushel. For A1 Northern all rail shipment, 90c. was bid in Toronto this week, but what's the use; none was offered. There's no chance of getting any wheat through this month and not much of any before the opening of navigation. The quantity held at the head of the lakes is not nearly the amount usually stored there at this time of the year. The country elevators in the west are full and farmers are said to be burying their wheat in the ground to keep it. The C.P.R. has taken off a couple of transcontinental trains. That will release half a score of engines and every little helps. Motive power is needed even more than cars. Some Ontario millers have large supplies of western grain in hand but before long some of the smaller mills will be grinding all Winter wheat. The big mills of the west are not able to get their bran and shorts east and the demand is so keen that millers are selling flour in order to get the feed. The Lake of the Woods Milling Co. is said to have 100 cars of flour lost east of Fort William. The railway situation is unprecedented and is much the same all over America. Naturally western wheat is going higher and is quoted 85c. for No. 1 Northern f.o.b. Georgian Bay ports. Oats are 38c. and 37c., and they are expected to reach 40c. at Winnipeg. Even 50c. oats are talked of.

FLOUR—Prices are considerably firmer because of the car shortage and higher prices for wheat. Last week's quotations still stand, however, but an advance is not unexpected. There is a good demand both for domestic and export trade. The shortage of western wheat is forcing more winter wheat flour into consumption. The western millers are not able to get their product forward and the result is that eastern mills are pretty busy.

OAT MEAL MILLERS APART.

High Oats Cause Breaking Away From Arrangement.

For the next couple of months things will be unsettled in the market for oat products, due to the disarrangement of the arrangement among the oatmeal millers. Since the oatmeal millers association, commonly termed "the combine," voluntarily dissolved eight or ten months ago, there has been no signed agreement among them, but from time to time a verbal understanding has been arrived at. Every now and again someone has felt cramped and kicked over the traces. The recent rapid price of oats theman wan rap rapid rise in the price of oats has made things uncomfortable for the small miller unable to carry large stocks of raw product. There is no relief in sight before the opening of navigation which will relieve the railway congestion.

OLIVE OIL SCARCE.

The American Consul at Malaga, Spain, has reported to the Department of Commerce at Washington, that very little Spanish olive oil will find its way to America during 1907, because the present crop now being pressed there will scarcely satisfy the domestic demand.

The cause of the poorness of the crop was a long drought, followed by untimely rains, the heavy thunderstorms of last September being responsible for the loss of a large portion of the fruit. These conditions mark the low limit of production for Spanish oil in this section. Not during the past twenty years has such an unfavorable situation confronted the Malaga growers and exporters. The crop of the previous season was also exceedingly short, but of sufficient size to warrant some shipments at high figures.

CARP FOR SALMON.

The Fort Atkinson Fish Co., of Fort Atkinson, Wis., is shipping daily 25,000 pounds of carp from Lake Koshkonong to New York city, where, it is said, they are canned as salmon. The state and federal authorities started to exterminate carp in the like several years ago, and it is only now that there is any sign of a decrease in the number. Carp now bring 6 cents a pound net in eastern markets, making the daily shipments worth $1,500.

In the fall carp come to Canadian markets in considerable quantities but are sold fresh and chiefly to the Jews.

APPLE TRADE WITH ENGLAND

What Importers Think of Growers Co-operative Packing Association—More Apples Should Be Held Here in Cold Storage—Evaporated Apples.

Harrison Watson in his report of the work done by the City Trade Branch of the Canadian High Commissioner's Office, London, in 1906, says regarding apples :

At the request of the Department of Agriculture, I brought to the attention of the trade the system of apple associations which has been adopted in Ontario in connection with domestic trade and which Canadian fruit growers are desirous of having extended to the export trade in fruit to this country. By this system, the packing and marketing of apples instead of being conducted by a number of small farmers in a particular district, is carried on by an association of these fruit growers. The apples are delivered to a central department and packed in an approved manner under official inspection. It is claimed that this system has resulted in a great improvement in the standard of quality of the fruit and has also been more satisfactory to the growers.

Trade in Fruit Brokers' Hands.

Up to the present, the trade in Canadian apples in the United Kingdom has been almost wholly in the hands of the large fruit brokers and salesmen and most of the fruit shipped has been more or less on consignment. As a prominent feature of the new scheme entails the payment of cash for the fruit it can be imagined that the proposals do not appeal to most of the large fruit importers and as long as some Canadian shippers are willing to ship fruit on consignment it is natural to anticipate that the trade generally will prefer to obtain their supplies in that manner. With few exceptions, the London firms who were communicated with gave little encouragement to the adoption of the association system.

One Firm Sent a Man.

One large firm of fruit dealers, however, decided to send out a representative to look into the matter, upon the lines suggested by the Department of Agriculture. This representative spent some time in Ontario and negotiations resulted in the purchase of several thousand barrels of apples from the associations upon which he called. The firm expresses themselves as greatly pleased with the association's methods and at my request have confirmed this in a letter from which the following extract is taken :

"We sent our representative to Canada this last season to buy apples and are favorably impressed with the system adopted by the Ontario Apple Association, the pack of which we consider infinitely more reliable than the individual growers packing themselves, and we shall give preference and support to the association pack in future."

Too Many at Once.

This, however encouraging, is only an individual opinion, and in view of the lukewarm support of the majority of the trade, I suggested to the department that a practical step would be to send over several representative Canadian fruit growers and shippers to visit the various large centres of the United Kingdom and endeavor to interest the trade in the adoption of this method. There can be little doubt that the prices of Canadian apples are unfavorably affected by the enormous quantities of fruit which are annually dumped into the United Kingdom at one time, instead of supplies being held in storage and shipments regulated according to the condition of the market.

Should Have Representatives.

A well known authority in the fruit trade gave as his opinion that Canadian shippers in addition to controlling supplies in Canada, ought to have representatives at the large United Kingdom seaports to supervise the distribution of the fruit and also to control and check the volume of supplies sent forward. Mention should be made of the exceptionally fine display of British Columbia apples which was on view at the Autumn exhibition of the Royal Horticultural Society. Considerable attention was given to the fruit by the London press and the interest raised should be of considerable benefit in attracting British capital for the development of the fruit growing industry of the province.

Evaporated Apples.

The consumption of evaporated apples makes steady progress, but there have been few Canadian goods brought into London lately. It is understood that owing to the partial failure of the apple crop in some districts of the Dominion, comparatively few apples were evaporated last Autumn in Canada.

MONTHLY COMPETITION.

Window dressing, we believe, is one of the most important parts of the grocery business. It needs encouragement in Canada. For that reason The Canadian Grocer is holding a monthly window dressing competition. Three prizes of $5, $3 and $2 will be awarded each month. Those wishing to enter the competition will send photographs of their windows to THE CANADIAN GROCER, 10 Front St. East, Toronto. accompanied by a written description.

This is a chance for the clerk. No department of the grocery trade offers larger opportunities for advancement than window dressing. If you don't know what you can do, try. If you don't surprise yourself the effort will be a great advantage in any case. No grocer is up to his business if he cannot dress a window. Get into the competition.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ELECTIONS.

C. H. Catelli was re-elected president of the Montreal French Chamber of Commerce at the annual meeting. Other officers are: First Vice-president, I. Prefontaine; 2nd Vice-president, A. V. Roy; Treasurer, J. B .A. Lanctot; Secretary, F. Bourbonniere. Nominations for the council were: T. Barthiaume, L. J. Tarte, O. Asselin, G. W. Stephens, J. Davidson, Armand Chaput, A. P. Lesperance, T. Bienvenu, L. Deguise, J. P. Mullarkey, Geo. Gonthier, L. E. Gonthier, L. Z. Gonthier, H. Godin, Rodolphe Tourville, E. D. Marceau, O. S. Perrault, F. C. Lariviere, J. B. Lapointe, H. Laurancelle, S. D. Vallieres, S. Lachance, J. L. Coutlee, U. H. Dandurand, E. Rossard, Albert Hudon, A. A. Larocque, A. H. Hardy, J. W. Harris, Ludger Gravel, S. Robitaille, J. T. Marchmand, J. de Sieyes, Count Geo. des Etangs and J. D. Couture.

Twenty are required for the council and elections will take place Feb. 20. The ex-presidents whose names follow were made members of the council ex-officio: J. Grenier, D. Parizeau, H. Laporte, Jos. Contant, Hon. Alphonse Desjardins, L. E. Geoffrion, D. Masson, and H. A. A. Brault. Also the following ex-vice-presidents: Boivin, Alph. Racine, Hon. J .D. Rolland, U. Garand, T. Charpentier.

WALL PAPER.

Before the end of the month is reached manufacturers expect to be in the midst of their sampling season. While plans are being completed for the Spring lines it is not the policy of the manufacturers to give out in detail any news regarding their designs. They guard jealously their collections and the rivalry is keen in selecting exclusive designs. In the way of novelties for the Spring there are many new features to be introduced. With the duties not too protective Canadian manufacturers have realized that if they are to survive at all it must be on the merits of their products. The great expansion of the country and its growing wealth justifies more pretentious endeavors than before. While the principal up-keep of the industry is largely dependent upon what they class as the "bread and butter" patterns, they, at the same time, cannot neglect the more expensive styles for the very reason that these sell the cheaper lines to a great extent. At the round-up of the season it is noticed that the class of goods being shipped is of a better quality than that sold last year. The average weight of paper sold has been heavier than that sold in previous years, and while there has been a great quantity of the cheap lines sold, there has also been more of the better grades.

WINNIPEG PURE FOOD SHOW.

Preparations are being made by W. A. Coulson, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of western Canada, for the holding of a big pure food exhibition in Winnipeg next July during the week of the Industrial Exhibition. The show is to be held in one of the skating rinks and as applications for booth space have already been received from many manufacturers there is no doubt that the exhibition will be a big success.

SCALE EXHIBIT.

During the retail conventions in the retail association rooms in Winnipeg, Feb. 12th, and 14th, W. J. Butt, agent for the Stimpson Computing Scale Co., will have an exhibit in the board room. Mr. Butt expects to show many of the trade the advantages of a computing scale.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

CHATHAM.

During the past three years no less than eight new butcher shops have been opened in Chatham, while the old butchers are still in business. Evidently it is a paying proposition.

N. H. Stevens, president of the Canada Flour Mills Co., read a paper on the bean crop of Ontario before the Michigan Bean Jobbers' Association at their meeting at the Hotel Wayne, Detroit, on Jan. 30th. The association ordered copies of the address printed for each member.

Mrs. John M. Taylor passed away on Sunday, Feb. 3rd, at the age of 84 years. Ingram M. and John P. Taylor, both prominent in the retail grocery business here, are sons.

Cecil Moore, representing the D. S. Perrin Co. of London, visited his relatives here last week.

The many friends of Hugh Malcolmson, president of the Kent Canning Co., were glad to see him out last week after his recent illness. He is now in possession of all his former good health.

Miles Barker, for several years engaged in the butchering business here, passed away Friday, February 1. He was 55 years of age, and leaves a widow and three children. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon.

CALGARY.

Sweep her up! Hard! Hard!! Hard!!!

The Alberta Branch of the Royal Caledonia Curling Association opened their second annual bonspiel on Tuesday, Jan. 22nd. on Calgary ice. Eight sheets were going all the time. There was a very large attendance from clubs all over the Province. A change in the weather on the opening day made the ice a trifle soft, but Jack Frost came to the rescue and stayed with them until the finish. The prizes for the bonspiel were better this year, exceeding $2,000 in value and were exhibited in the Calgary Milling Company's window, where they attracted much attention.

The annual meeting and banquet took place in the Palmetto Cafe on the evening of the 22nd, and was a great success. About 150 sat down to an excellent dinner, with President Hugh McLeod in the chair. After the usual toasts had been proposed and responded to the members settled down to business. The following officers were elected for the year: Patron, Colonel Walker, Calgary; president, J. R. Miquelon, Calgary; 1st vice-president, D. C. Boyne, Bankhead; 2nd vice-president, Jas. Aird, Priddis; secretary-treasurer, E. H. Telfer, Calgary; chaplain, Rev. Fortune, Red Deer; executive council, O. C. Smith, Calgary; W. E. Ketchum, Edmonton; W. Sheppard, Strathcona; S. S. Savage, Calgary; Colonel Walker, Calgary; W. G. Wilson, Innisfail.

Several merchants had their windows decorated with goods that are made in Calgary. The firms represented were: The Calgary Milling Co.; the Standard Soap Co.; Brackman & Ker; the Alberta Biscuit Co.; G. F. & J. Gault; Calgary Brewing & Malting Co.; Great West Saddlery Co.; Calgary Aerated Water Co.; Rochon Bros., confectionery; Blue Ribbon Co.; Alberta Cigar Co; Riley & McCormick Saddlery Co.

Many favorable comments were heard from the visiting curlers and their friends about the "Made in Calgary" exhibits.

The Calgary Milling Co. have booked an order for 1,200 sacks of flour to go to Shanghai, which makes their third shipment to this port. They have also filled orders for Japan.

Calgary's bank clearings for week ending 24th Jan. were $1,000,541.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Last year added to British Columbia's steamship connections the new Alley line of direct steamers between Canada and New Zealand. The first month of this year brings the announcement of the final arrangements for the direct service from British Columbia ports to Mexico. This line, subsidized equally by the Canadian and Mexican governments, is to be in operation early in March. Capt. Worsnop, representing the Canadian-Mexican Pacific Steamship Company, announces that the first steamer for the line, the Georgia, sailed from England for Vancouver on Jan. 15, and that the sister ship, the Lonsdale, will be en route very shortly. The new line will make regular trips, each vessel making the return trip every month.

Not to be overlooked is the flour trade with the Orient, which benign authorities have decided to propagate between Alberta and Japan, the shipments from British Columbia flour mills may be considered as of first importance. The pioneer mill of Western Canada in the shipment of flour to Japan is the Columbia Flouring Mills, Ltd., of Enderby, in the Okanagan district. F. V. Moffett, the energetic and enterprising head of that concern, asserts that the flour from his mills was first of all Can-Canada into Japan and China markets. While the small trial shipments from Alberta mills recently made are an indication of the spread of interest in the trade, Mr. Moffett pardonably prides himself on the fact that in the past 30 days his mill has shipped 25,000 sacks in all to the Orient, and of course the total shipments to date from his mill very much exceed the entire shipments from all western mills together. During the next fortnight or so the Enderby mill will send out shipments of flour totalling 22,000 sacks, the largest single order for Oriental trade so far placed in Canada. Mr. Moffett thinks that a very great expansion of this trade is to be looked for in the future.

LONDON.

The collections for the month of January at the London customs house exceeded the total for any previous month in the history of this port. The increase over January, 1906, when the collections totalled $69,726.49, was $23,764.36. The inland revenue returns here for last month showed a slight increase also over the returns for January, 1906. The extent of London's importance as a centre for the cigarmaking industry is apparent from the inland revenue collector's reports. During January, the revenue on cigars, ex-factory, was $11,107.74; on cigars, ex-warehouse, $3,352.20, and on raw leaf, ex-warehouse, $7,785,06; a total of $22,545. There are many cigars factories here, and the eight largest employ 875 hands.

The London cigar manufacturers are not in sympathy with the action of the Quebec deputation, who last week waited upon Hon. Mr. Brodeur and other Cabinet Ministers at Ottawa, and asked for an increase in the duty on imported tobacco and for the abolition of the green stamp, which is now used to designate goods manufactured from Canadian tobaccoes. It is thought the abolition of the green stamp would result in an increase in the sale of foreign-made cigars and a decrease in the sale of the home-made cigars of imported tobacco. Canadian growers, together with manufacturers who have large interests as growers, have taken a stand to which the manufacturers who are not growers are directly opposed, according to the statement of a leading London manufacturer.

HAMILTON.

Considerable talk is going on among the retail grocers here, regarding the dating of canned goods. There is no question about the injustice it would work from the grocer to the consumer, without any apparent benefit to any one.

Our association will take up the matter, and no doubt there will be some strong resolutions passed condemning that part of the measure referring to the dating, and instructing the local members of the House of Commons to oppose the measure. (Just here is where a national association would prove effective). Let every grocer in Canada address a protest against dating to his local representative in the House of Commons, and one hundred chances to one that no can of fruit or vegetables will be marked. Just here we might say that the party press might be informed on this question, by the trade, as some of them are turning out some very queer editorial matter relative to it.

ST. CATHARINES.

Herbert Henry, grocer, corner of Church and Niagara Streets, has enlarged his premises to gain space for increasing business. Mr. Henry is one of our most enterprising young business men.

Howard McNulty has sold his soda water factory to Rachmill Noddell and will open a like factory on Mary Street. The sod was turned on Saturday for the new building and Mr. McNulty has gone to Montreal to order the required machinery.

The Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Electric Railway Company are extending their line to Fonthill, nine miles west, and purpose continuing five miles south of Fonthill to the town of Welland early in the spring. The company has gangs of men erecting poles and stringing wires to Fonthill.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Orange Market Good—Lemons May Be Higher—Kingston Earthquake and the Fruit Trade—Advance in Onion Prices.

Montreal reports a somewhat slow trade in fruit this week. The Toronto orange market is good. Navels are a shade easier, but there is every indication that the market will firm up, and that higher prices will be obtained. Despatches seem to indicate that packers are still sending the most desirable sizes to buyers, and extra large varieties to auction. Higher prices for lemons are prominent. No decided advance is expected, but the market is very firm, with an upward tendency.

Although some dealers were doubtful at first, it now seems certain that the Jamaica earthquake will have very little effect on the fruit trade of the island. According to all reports the fruit-growing area was practically undisturbed by the disaster, and the only consequences likely to result might, perhaps, be delay in shipments from Kingston. In connection with the banana trade new plans on the part of the trust are said to be nearing completion which, when made public, will show a practically perfected organization for the monopoly of the situation in the West Indies.

The vegetable trade is none too brisk. Quotations are altered in several lines, and some new goods are listed. Cranberries are considerably lower. Very light stocks and heavy demand are said to be the cause of a noticeable rise in onion prices.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Business is slow. Few lots are being sold in any line. Better trade cannot be expected at this season. Cranberries are lower this week as are also California oranges. Lemons are in small demand at figures quoted. Demand for bananas exceeds the supply and trade is brisk in this line. Prices are a little higher this week, ranging from $1.65 to $2.25.

VEGETABLES—Vegetables are not moving out very freely. Prices are rather high to warrant good business, and the coming of Lent is causing a falling off in the demand for more than one line. Cabbage, for instance, is not sold in nearly such good quantities as it was a couple of weeks ago. Potatoes are still quoted around last week's figures.

FISH—Trade is becoming more and more brisk as Lent approaches. It is only five days off now and good orders are being received by fish dealers every day. All lines are in demand. Prices generally are much firmer this week and many advances have occured. Fresh haddock are exceedingly scarce and away up in price. Lake trout and whitefish are off the market. Flounders are now quoted, 4½c. to 5c. a pound being asked. Shell oysters are down $1 a barrel. Pickled sardines are no longer on sale.

NOTES.

C. N. Foderingham, who has been with W.B. Stringer & Co., Toronto, for the past two years, has gone to his home in the Barbadoes for a few days to visit his father, who has been ill for some time.

White & Co., Toronto, have commenced alterations on their new building at the corner of Front and Church streets. They expect to have it in readiness for occupation by May 1st, in time for summer business.

FISH AND LENT.

"Lent does not cause such a stir in the fish business as it did twenty years ago," said William Duff, of the Atlantic Fish Companies, when seen in Montreal by the Canadian Grocer the other day. "Of course we notice an increase in business during that period, but circumstances have combined to make the difference less noticeable than in years past. Many new foods have found their way onto the market, more than one of them taking the place of fish as Lenten diet. Again it seems to me that people are becoming more broad-minded respecting Lent. They do not fast and abstain as they did years ago, and as a consequence they do not use fish in such quantities.

"Yes, we have had a very good season down east so far. There will be a larger business done in pickled fish this season than for years. Fresh and frozen are exceedingly scarce, and the demand towards the middle and end of Lent will have to be supplied with the pickled and salt goods. Owing to very stormy weather which prevented fishermen getting to work, and to the scarcity of bait, at the beginning, the catch of fresh fish this season is limited as compared to 1905 and other years.

"The fish business in the Maritime provinces is developing. We but recently purchased two plants, one in Cape Breton and the other in Shelburne, which will enable us to secure a very much larger supply of fish next year."

Speaking of mackerel Mr .Duff said that he was surprised that such a small quantity was used in the west. He thought that the people did not appreciate fish, that they should be educated to it. In his opinion it was a profitable line for the trade to carry.

BUSINESS MEN IN MUNICIPAL LIFE

No. 10

Few of our grocers have taken a more active interest in matters pertaining to the general welfare of the community than Charles A. Nairn, of Goderich. Canadian-born, Mr. Nairn has spent most of his life up to the present time in Huron's county-town, and his connection with municipal affairs and semi-public organizations has been continuous. A member of the council for many years as representative of St. Patrick's ward, he is now in his second year as president of the Board of Trade, of which he has been a member since its inception. As one indication of the way in which people recognize his capacity for business, it is worthy of note that Mr. Nairn was chairman of the Finance

CHARLES A. NAIRN

Committee while in the council, has been for the twelve years treasurer of the local I.O.O.F., is treasurer of the hospital board and the Goderich Musical Society, and even in church matters he is chairman of the board of management of Knox Presbyterian.

As long ago as 1869, the subject of our sketch left school and became connected in the humble capacity of delivery boy with the grocery business established some years previous by Henry Horton. At the end of a year Charles A. entered the store as a clerk, and in 1880 on the retirement of Mr. Horton became proprietor. The stand is the oldest in town, and Mr. Nairn can now claim to be the grocer longest in business in Goderich. His brother Tom has been associated with him in the business for nearly a dozen years, and is almost equally well known to the trade. Some ten years ago a branch store was opened in Windsor, Ont., and has grown to large proportions under the management of George H. Nairn, another brother. As may be imagined, the two stores work together in many ways.

The Goderich store has a valuable asset in a well-established reputation for handling high quality goods, and for serving the best class of trade in town. An immense tourist trade is done in summer.

The crockery department has always received a little special attention, and together with attractive window displays, has at times been referred to in The Grocer, without which, by the way, Mr. Nairn has never attempted to do business.

ALL READY FOR THE CANNERS.

Buffalo Completing Arrangements for the Big Convention.

It is evident that the convention of the National Packers' and Machinery and Supplies Associations to be held in Buffalo from Feb. 11 to 16 will see a large attendance of Canadians interested in these trades. No city in the United States more conveniently situated in regard to the more important canning sections of the Dominion, could be chosen for this meeting, and the invitation of C. A. Suydam, president of the Machinery and Supplies Association, is likely to be taken full advantage of. The Iroquois Hotel will be the headquarters of the visitors, and the big machinery exhibition with its complete cannery in operation, and other equally interesting features, will be held in the 65th Regiment armories. This building is newly completed, and will be one of the largest ever used for an exhibit of this kind. Dr. Wiley and his associates, having in their care the enforcement of the recently passed pure food law, are expected to be present and answer questions of interest to the trade, and the other matters to come before the meeting will be equally important. The entertainment committee is busy on final arrangements, and there is already evidence to hand that there will be lots doing in this line. The various railways will issue tickets at special rates to those attending the convention.

SATURDAY BOAT CONTINUED.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster-General, addressing the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association last Saturday, stated definitely that the Government had decided to continue, when navigation opens this year, the Saturday service inaugurated late in 1906. A Dominion line boat will, therefore, sail every Saturday morning in the icoming season for the Old Country, and produce dealers will be able to send their invoices and bills of lading as quickly by the Canadian route as any other.

COLD STORAGE WAREHOUSE.

Fortier & Monette, produce merchants, Montreal, will occupy the new cold storage warehouse being erected as an additional wing to the present premises of the Gould Cold Storage Company, William street. The new plant will be 50x100 feet, five storeys high and up-to-date in every particular. It will run back to King street. George Hodge & Co. have been compelled to move, and are now doing business at 118 King street, opposite their old place.

C. T. COOTES AGAIN ON THE ROAD.

After Five Years' Retailing Joins Staff of Davidson & Hay.

C. T. Cootes has joined the traveling staff of the Davidson & Hay Co., Torontqt, to take the territory which the late W. B. Smith covered for so many years.

Mr. Cootes is thoroughly versed in the grocery trade and a very likable fellow. He started his grocery career with Swan Bros., Toronto, and continued with them eight years. He graduated from this best of grocery schools into the wholesale field, joining the selling staff of John Taylor & Co. He represented that soap firm in Toronto five or six years, put in a term of two or three years on the road for the Ebv. Blain Co., and another year for Perkins, Ince & Co., then went into business for himself. For the past five years he has conducted one of the best grocery stores in the northeast section of Toronto, at 201 Wellesley street. This business he lately sold to Spencer Smith, formerly of Orangeville.

With such an experience, backed by untiring industry and a geniality of rare quality, Mr. Cootes is sure of a warm welcome from the trade and the success he deserves.

GOVERNMENT AID ASKED.

Dr. Smale, representing the Wm. Davies Company, and Messrs. Laing, of the Laing Packing Company, of Montreal, and Matthews, of the Matthews Packing Company, of Ottawa, waited upon Hon. Nelson Monteith recently on behalf of the Pork Packers' Association, asking the Government to make arrangements for a regular series of sales of pure-bred swine, with the purpose of encouraging the farmers to a more general consideration of the question of raising fine hogs. This has been done by the Quebec Government.

CANADIAN CANNED GOODS AND THE ENGLISH MARKET

(By Harrison Watson, City Trade Branch, Canadian High Commissioner's Office, London.)

Few features of special interest have transpired within the year in connection with the Canadian trade in canned fruits and vegetables.

The establishment of a branch in London of the Canadian Canneries, Limited, should in due course be a powerful factor in developing a greater demand for some varieties of Canadian goods. At present, however, it would appear that probably 90 per cent. of the trade is in gallon apples. Some little business is being established in other lines, but this is very gradual. There seems to be a general opinion among the trade that Canadian packers are still careless in their methods and that in many lines the standard of quality of Canadian goods is inferior to that of the favorite American brands.

Canadian goods have also to compete against the established trade secured by American packers by dint of many years of introductory work and the expenditure of large sums in advertising. Prices in many lines have been at a level which would not be profitable to Canadian packers e.g., Italian tomatoes continue to be sold at such low figures that they have driven many other competitors out of the market.

Ineffective Labelling.

In many instances Canadian goods suffer from ineffective labelling and in this connection it has been suggested that it would be a practical step for the Canners' Association to adopt one attractively labelled brand for the output of all their canneries destined for the United Kingdom trade instead of continuing to utilize the numerous individual brands of the different members of the association. Some of these labels are insignificant and their diversity tends to create confusion.

Canadian Goods in Favor.

However it is believed that Canadian goods are advancing in public favor and with the adoption of still better methods and the devotion of particular attention to the requirements of this market there can be little doubt that there is a considerable future ahead for this important Canadian industry. The use of glass packages continues to become more general and there is a considerable section of the public which will not purchase goods packed in tins, preferring to pay higher prices rendered necessary by the substitution of glasses for cans. Canadian packers should find it advantageous to adopt glass in connection with the superior grades of certain fruits and vegetables.

Fruit Pulps.

Prices generally in this branch of the trade have ruled low and quotations offering were not attractive to Canadian shippers.

NOT UP TO FIGURES.

(From Lippincott's.)

The busy shopper paused at the fruit vendor's stand. "How much are your pineapples?" she asked.

"Eight cent apiece, lady."

"Well, I declare, that's too good to be missed; I'll take eight of them," she said.

The dealer placed them in a bag and said: "Eight cents—eighty-eight. You take dem along for eighty-five."

The lady's eyes sparkled at the bargain price, and she departed in a happy frame of mind—happy until her husband told her to brush up on the multiplication table.

BIGGER SUGAR BAG.

The Ontario Sugar Refining Co. is now putting its output into 125 lb. bags. This change is greatly appreciated by the retail trade. The old 100 lb. bag is too small for potatoes or grain and the Toronto wholesale potato dealers recently met and decided to make 80 lbs. a bag. This 125 lb. bag is standard size and makes the empty bags much more saleable.

This action is the outcome of a suggestion by J. H. Lehmann, the company's traveling representative, formerly with W. H. Millman & Sons, Toronto.

NARROW ESCAPE IN KINGSTON.

Gaspard Lemoine, manager for J. B. Renaud & Cie., Quebec, had a narrow escape from death in the recent earthquake at Kingston, Jamaica. With Mrs. Lemoine he was visiting in that city at the time of the disturbance. He was in a large store, which fell to the ground, and was only saved by the huge pillar against which he was leaning keeping up part of the ruins. Mrs. Lemoine had a similarly narrow escape.

MAPLE TREE PRODUCE ASSOCIATION.

Myron F. Goddard has been chosen by the directors of the Waterloo Maple Tree Produce Association as manager for the coming year. N. O. Rockwell was elected secretary-treasurer. Both gentlemen are experienced in the business and will bring their knowledge into use in building up the business.

RESOURCEFUL.

Gentleman of Leisure—"Don't you know that this is not a smoking compartment?"

Commercial Traveler—"Never fear. I'll hide my pipe when I see the conductor coming."—Fliefiende Blatter.

TOBACCO LEAVES.

Ed. Youngheart, of Ed. Youngheart & Co. is in Cuba at present.

J. M. Fortier, of J. M. Fortier & Co., Montreal, has returned from a short trip to Toronto.

J. Hirsch & Sons, Limited, has taken over the business formerly carried on under the name of J. Hirsch Sons & Co., Montreal. The new concern is capitalized at $100,000.

The Havana Cigar Syndicate is a new cigar company manufacturing in Montreal at 234 St. Paul street. Paul Prozesky is sole proprietor. Their leader is the "Queen Victoria" cigar.

Many persons will be surprised to learn that the potato is used in France in the manufacture of imitation meerschaum pipes and "marble" billiard balls. After the potatoes are peeled they are kept for 36 hours in an 8 per cent. solution of sulphuric acid. They are then dried and pressed hard enough for use in making pipes. Under strong pressure they become solid enough to be turned into billiard balls.

The merchant, if he is wise, no longer keeps his accounts upon tickets, in memorandum books, or in a loose way, but has a system by which, at a glance, he can tell what he is doing.

The Crain Monthly Account System has been in use by successful business men for years. It does the work in one-half the time, and in a way that is much more satisfactory to his customers and more pleasant to himself, than plodding along in the old way. TO MAINTAIN A STANDARD

RISING SUN AND SUN PASTE
STOVE POLISH STOVE POLISH

It costs us more every year to make RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish up to "Morse Brothers Standard." Our increasing sales enable us to maintain the standard without raising the price. We are constantly improving our facilities for the manufacture of our goods on a larger and larger scale and we never allow anything but the best materials to be used in our processes. That is why our goods please the trade and consumer. RISING SUN and SUN PASTE are right every time you sell them.

Four Reasons why INVICTUS FIBRE is the BEST FIBRE PAPER on the Market

1. Invictus Fibre is made from personally selected pulp wood cut on our own limits.
2. This special pulp wood is again rigidly culled on arrival at our mills
3. The pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made is manufactured inlour own pulp mill and transferred at once to the paper mill, avoiding all drawbacks of transportation.
4. Invictus Fibre will increase in strength and not grow hard and brittle as does fibre made from sulphite pulp. This is a quality of the peculiar and selected pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made.

A trial order will convince you that we are correct. See that each package bears the words "Invictus Fibre." Every ream contains 480 sheets

Capital and Surplus, $1,500,000. Offices Throughout the Civilized World

Executive Offices: Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New York City, U.S.A.

THE BRADSTREET COMPANY gathers information that reflects the financial condition and the controlling circumstances of every seeker of mercantile credit. Its business may be defined as of the merchants, by the merchants, for the merchants. In procuring, verifying and promulgating information no effort is spared, and no reasonable expense considered too great, that the results may justify its claims as an authority on all matters affecting commercial affairs and mercantile credit. Its offices and connections have been steadily extended, and it furnishes information concerning mercantile persons throughout the civilized world.

Subscriptions are based on the service furnished, and are available only by reputable wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns, and by responsible and worthy financial, fiduciary and business corporations. Specific terms may be obtained by addressing the Company at any of its offices. Correspondence invited.

The Nibble of a Mouse will eventually consume the biggest cheese, and the loss of pennies, nickels, dimes and dollars, if it don't "bust" the biggest business, will reduce the profit to an alarming extent. And you're bound to lose more or less if you do a credit business, and depend on ledger balances taken from the day-book. Throw out your day-books and other time-wasting devices, and adopt the modern Allison Coupon System

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? Place your orders NOW for spring shipment of Jams, Jellies, Marmalades, Catsups, Etc.

1st. To ensure early shipment.

2nd. To secure your requirements before any possible advance in prices. Jam Stocks are very low, and some varieties are even now exhausted.

Aylmer and Simcoe Jams, Jellies and Marmalades are the most popular goods on the market, because they are the BEST.

The sales of these Jams in 1906 were nearly twice as great as in 1905, and four times as great as in 1904. QUALITY DID IT.

Ask your wholesaler for Aylmer Pure Fruit Preserves. They are equal to the best imported.

CATSUPS

Aylmer and Delhi Catsups have captured the market solely because of their superior quality, and attractive appearance.

Look at this record.—Sales of 1906 were nearly two and one-half times as great as in 1905, and over four times as great as in 1904.

Quality Did It.

CANADIAN CANNERS,
LIMITED

A few reasons why Ozo Jams should be and are considerably better than any others now being made in Canada:

1. As Montreal is by far the largest buying centre in the country, enormous quantities of all kinds of fruit are sent to be marketed here, and as ripe fruit has to be disposed of within 24 hours of arrival a glut is sure to occur in some fruit every day—it might be peaches to-day, or strawberries to-morrow—some fruit is sure to be over-shipped, which we can buy at a price averaging as low as the mere cost of growing it; and buying fruit at this price naturally we can afford to use more of it.

2. Our plant is the largest in Canada, contains the finest, cleanest and most modern equipment, which enables us not only to turn out an enormous quantity but give far better quality as well.

3. We can buy sugar on the wharf at a great saving over what it would cost if freighted west, and consequently are enabled to put in a much larger proportion in the cheaper qualities.

4. Having the turnover, we are able to purchase our packages at the very lowest price.

5. As we believed that these natural advantages would enable us to take the lead in the Jam business, we sent to England for the most expert Jam cook we could find. As money was no object, we got him and placed him in charge of our Jam Department, where his 28 years of practical experience are enabling him to turn out goods which are a revelation to the trade, and are causing a large increase in sales in this line with the people who are handling them.

6. Notwithstanding our ability to turn out a product equal to any made in the country at a lower price, our aim is to put this saving in the cost of production into bettering the quality of the goods, thus putting purchasers of our goods beyond the reach of competition.

With this information at hand you can readily see why so many of the largest wholesalers have placed their Jam contracts with us, and we think you will also see that it will be to your advantage, and that of your customers, to place your Jam business with us.

We quote Standard Brand Jam
in 7-lb., 14-lb. and 30-lb. Pails, 6c. F.O.B.

MONTREAL

For the first six weeks of 1907 over the corresponding six weeks of 1906, the "SALADA" business has increased 20.10 per cent., all branches combined, and then when you consider our increase for the past fourteen years you must surely be convinced of the superior merit in

"SALADA"

We had 123 per cent. increase in 1893 over 1892
We had 145 per cent. increase in 1894 over 1893
We had 115 per cent. increase in 1895 over 1894
We had 85 per cent. increase in 1896 over 1895
We had 86 per cent. increase in 1897 over 1896
We had 39 per cent. increase in 1898 over 1897
We had 34 per cent. increase in 1899 over 1898
We had 18 per cent. increase in 1900 over 1899
We had 15 per cent. increase in 1901 over 1900
We had 11 per cent. increase in 1902 over 1901
We had 25½ per cent. increase in 1903 over 1902
We had 12 per cent. increase in 1904 over 1903
We had 18 per cent. increase in 1905 over 1904
We had 23 per cent. increase in 1906 over 1905

Our 23 per cent. increase in 1906 over 1905 amounted to more pounds of "SALADA" Tea than our total output was in the years 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895 and 1896 combined.

Gold Dust Washing Powder
Fairy Soap, Copco Soap
Fairbank's Glycerine-Tar Soap
Fairbank's Scouring Soap
Fairbank's Sanitary Soap

and educating the public regarding them; and while we intend to continue doing this, we realize fully that advertising alone has not accomplished the splendid results we have enjoyed in the sale of these goods, but that "the man behind the counter" has been an important factor in extending and increasing our trade. It was the realization of this fact that gave birth to "The Fairbank Plan," as a method of rewarding the retail clerks for their earnest co-operation in selling these goods and, consequently, a portion of our immense advertising appropriation is now set aside for the recognition of the dealer and his clerks.

"The Fairbank Plan" is an absolutely fair method of rewarding the clerk in direct proportion to the interest displayed in pushing the six specialties, as each package of these goods is couponed in such a manner that the coupon can be easily removed before the goods pass into the hands of the consumer. For these coupons we offer many valuable articles.

If you will send for an illustrated premium list of "The Fairbank Plan" it will convince you that this is no cheap trading-stamp scheme.

Some Present Trade Requirements

Tight Money for a Time—Law of Averages Calls for Lean Years—Corruption Follows Paternalism—Iron Bonuses Unfair to Ontario—Relations With the Mother Country Should be Undisturbed—Railway Commission has Raised Freight Rates—Should Have More Export Help.

By Peleg Howland, Retiring President of The Toronto Board of Trade.

The large increase in deposits in the chartered banks would indicate that the people of Canada generally are thrifty and saving, notwithstanding the extraordinary inducements offered for speculation in mining and other enterprises. All these deposits, however, find ready employment in the expansion of business as shown by the increase in current loans. The difficulty among bankers now would seem to be to keep their reserves in safe proportion to their liabilities and find means for the constantly-increasing demands of their customers; in consequence a period of dear money is probable for at least some time to come, with the possibility of curtailment in a degree of the prevailing activity.

While the railway construction going on not only in the new provinces but in the older portions of the Dominion and the constantly-increasing immigration must help towards continued prosperity, it must be remembered that we have had a series of unusually good crops, upon which we are largely dependant, and that the law of average would lead to the expectation of lean years; that the prices of nearly all commodities, including labor, are dangerously near the point of inflation; that our national expenditure is becoming extraordinarily large with immediate prospects of increase; that we are a debtor nation, and that the drain upon us for interest on our foreign borrowings, national, provincial, municipal and private, must be very heavy. It would not, therefore, seem out of place to echo the note of warning already given out by financial men and urge reasonable caution.

The United States have during the past few years been experiencing a prosperity perhaps proportionately greater than our own; they have had, however in the process of developing their almost limitless resources, periods of extreme depression. These in the past used to precede ours almost a year; whether that will continue to be the case cannot be foretold. It would be well, though, to keep a careful watch upon the conditions there for any sign of change.

Too Much Reliance on Law.

Comment is timely on the deplorable revelations made during the past year by the investigations into some of our commercial, financial, insurance and political affairs. While doubtless periods of prosperity and speculation must have accompanying evils of this kind, the conclusion cannot be avoided that they are also fostered by paternalism, whether taking the form of protection by customs duties, by bonuses, national or other, or of sumptuary laws that tend to make the individual lean on government help for his rate of wages, his profits or for the safety of his investments, to the weakening of the sturdy independence, self-reliance and toughness of fibre which is of such essential importance. The lesson taught in my opinion, is against any attempt to effect a cure by further adding to the criminal code, increasing the list of restrictions or by making government still more responsible.

Opposed to Government Bonuses.

I am strongly opposed to government bonuses generally as being one of the worst forms of class legislation, and I desire to call attention to the fact that the manufacture of the base products of iron and steel in Canada is now being fostered by a series of bonuses accompanied by customs restrictions, and very large and increasing sums are being exacted annually from the whole people for the benefit chiefly of an industry located in the far east, which, if capable of producing as represented when established, should be able to stand alone. Ontario is naturally situated to draw its raw materials for the more finished products in iron and steel from Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, and if allowed to do so would have chances of very large growth in all the smaller industries, which are really of so much more benefit to a community than the immense establishments, to a large degree monopolies, which produce the coaser materials. It would seem unwise on our part not to avail outselves of our neighbor's coal and iron as long as they remain the cheapest products of the kind, rather than tax ourselves to upbuild an industry a thousand miles away. We are, as yet, the largest consumers of this products, and bear the greater portion of the taxation, but are handicapped by the double freights in getting back into the east, which has as well an advantage proportionately in freights westward. Ontario must sooner or later awaken to the injustice of the present policy, which takes from it the chance of supremacy that naturally belongs to it, with the accompanying danger of sectional difference."

Opposed to Preferential Treatment.

It may perhaps be proper for me to say here that personally I do not favor the resolution urging preferential treatment of our products in the old country, nor that indicating that Canada should contribute to the defence of the empire, feeling as I do that we are able to progress without favors, and believing that entanglements must arise from any attempt to alter our relations to the mother country or to make contributions without representation, with the grave danger of our either breaking away entirely or losing that measure of independence which is of so much importance to us.

In regard to representations made before the Railway Commission that an investigation should be made into the right rates of Ontario, and that there is a discrimination in favor of Montreal in the rates to points both east and west of Toronto, no judgment has yet been given.

The conclusion is forced that the commission has not the necessary expert assistance to get through its work, and I would advocate representations to the government for such changes as will make the commission more efficient, including the extension of its jurisdiction to Dominion Government railways, which are now in my opinion, improperly exempt. The question of rates and of discrimination is of more importance to the people at large than the rights of one railroad to cross another, or matters of a similar nature which seem to chiefly occupy the attention of the commissioners.

The railroads have recently submitted to the commission schedules of rates for merchandise bound inward from many places in the United States; they are substantially higher than those now existing, and their adoption is suggested in order to overcome the decrepancy in the rates existing from American and Canadian places on the border, those from the latter being now much the higher. The co-operation of the manufacturers is sought by placing certain of their raw materials on a special basis, which will mean practically no advance. Generally speaking, however, their adoption will mean higher freights for merchants and consumers on inward stuff from the United States. A protest has been entered against these being considered at all until a general and thorough inquiry be made into the fairness of the rates now existing throughout Ontario, Any adjustment of rates upward should be resisted by every possible means.

Commission Raises Rates.

I would also call attention to the arrangements existing between railroads which prevent them from competing in rates with one another. Such combinations are surely as harmful as arrangements affecting the prices of commodities, and are as much entitled to be forbidden by law. The Railway Commission has undoubtedly up to the present been an aid to these freight associations, and has served to increase rather than reduce the rates, thus helping to add to the revenue of the railroads, and it is questionable if the uniformity obtained is a compensation to the people generally for the additional cost of the service.

Unfair Discrimination.

The custom of charging the ordinary shipper from various centres in the northwest in some instances more than double the rates given to wholesale-dealers located in those centres shipping to traders, and which is a factor in the many difficulties experienced by the eastern merchant in getting into that country with his goods, still exists, and should have the attention of the commission at once. An eastern merchant shipping to—I will say Calgary—a carload of goods to a distributing agent to be broken up and reshipped to various consignees at points in the neighborhood, must be on a list as carrying a stock in Calgary, and the consignees must be traders before these consignees can get the benefit of the so-called traders' rates, otherwise being charged the ordinary class rates. The following examples of these rates, given as existing on January 5 last, will give an idea of the differences between the traders' rates and the so-called class rates which are paid by the ordinary shipper or consignee, the figures being per hundred pounds:—

Calgary to Revelstoke—Class rates—First, $1.35; second, $1.13; third 90c.; fourth, 68c. Trades rates—First class—64c.; second, 55c.; third, 45c.; fourth, 37c. Calgary to Fernie, B. C.—Class rates—First, $1.27; second, $1.06; third, 85c.; fourth, 64c. Traders' rates—First class, 61c.; second, 53c.; third, 44c.; fourth, 37c.

Favors Local Merchant.

Similar conditions exist at Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, etc., though the differences are not so extreme. This system meets with the favor of the local wholesale merchant, as it protects him from his eastern competitor, and also of the retailer in the smaller towns, as he is in his turn protected, the tendency being to force the consumer to patronize the nearby merchant. It is improper, however, and contrary to the principle upon which charters are granted. It is not practised in the east, the tendency here being rather to give the advantage if any, to the more distant place. It should be stopped.

Reciprocal Demurrage.

The country suffers every year from a shortage of cars and from the inability of the railroads to move promptly the rolling stock they are able to supply. This year the trouble has been particularly serious, and has been felt by all classes of the business community, being one of the causes of the scarcity of money. The railroads now very properly enforce demurrage charges on customers detaining cars over a certain specified time, but are under no penalty themselves if shipments remain in their possession longer than is reasonable. Any system of reciprocal demurrage will be vigorously opposed by the railroads and many strong arguments will be used against it. It seems reasonable, however, to think that what works well in one way should in the other, and that its adoption might lead to such exertion on the part of the companies as will overcome, at least to some extent the evil complained of. The system has already been advocated by board, and it is well worthy of further consideration.

Anti-Dumping Law Unfair.

The attention of the Toronto Board of Trade Council has recently been called to the anti-dumping clause in the custom tariff, the application of which is being extended at the present session of Parliament. I cannot urge too strongly that the matter be thoroughly investigated. A regulation that restricts a merchant's right to buy as cheap as his ability and capital will permit, and penalize him if he does exercise such ability by requiring, besides the regular duty, the payment in the shape of special duty of any concession he can obtain in price below what the authorities fix as the home value of the goods in the country of export up to fifteen per cent. of such home value, and compels the taking of such an oath as the following—"That no arrangement or understanding affecting the purchase price of the said goods has been or will be made or entered into between the said importer and the exporter, or by anyone on behalf of either of them, other than as shown in the said invoices, either by way of discount, rebate, salary, compensation or in any other manner whatsoever" which forms a part of the oath taken on the entry of goods for consumption—approaches too nearly to despotism, surely, to be borne by this community, and is besides calculated, as the oath suggests, to encourage fraud and dishonesty, and is not in the interest of the consumer. In my opinion, as a restriction on trade, no combination can compare with it. If the manufacturer requires more protection it should be afforded him in some less objectionable way.

FOUR WAYS OF SELLING.

The Dishonest, the Misrepresentation, the Suicidal, the Straight Business.

In their weekly market report of a recent date, Strasbaugh, Silver & Co., of Aberdeen, Md., go a little afield from the market and under "Points Worth Remembering" quote a successful manufacturer as follows:

"The desire to buy cheap, anything, is a mania with some people.

"To favor an article simply because its first cost is low is not only unfair, but a poor business policy.

"To buy at a fair price is shrewd, but it is false economy to forget that below a certain limit, cheapness is suicidal should be shunned.

"There are four ways to sell goods:

"1 The Dishonest Method—To sell so low that you can't earn a living, and the sheriff will finally wind up your affairs, and your creditors carry your losses.

"2 The Misrepresentation Method—Palm off upon your customers unfair goods and persuade them that they are the best.

"3 The Suicidal Method—Employ workmen at less than living wages; buy the cheapest materials; pare everything down to the lowest notch, and patch results.

"4 The Straight Business Method—Buy the best; employ skilled labor; thoroughly know your own business and business values. Provide special facilities for the execution of the greatest amount of high-grade production at a minimum cost. Avoid extravagant management, expensive methods, and have your dealings with customers who appreciate treatment that is not one way.

"He is a public benefactor who conducts an honest trade, and he is wise who pays the full value of his purchase."

TEA SITUATION IN LONDON.

Returned Tea Merchant Gives His Views on European Market.

"In London the situation in teas is very firm. The market is short of the teas most in demand. It has at last been realized that the demand for Ceylong teas has grown to such an extent that it exceeds the supply. I noticed that the general cry on the part of the public was for Ceylons."

Speaking to a representative of The Grocer, this is what A. J. Williams, Canadian manager of Crossfield, Lampard, Clark & Co., said of the London market.

Continuing, he said: "Russia, Germany, Sweden and other European nations are all asking for Ceylons and are likely to continue doing so for the next six or eight months.

"In my opinion it will be some years before prices are again down to the low basis witnessed last summer. All of the large blenders are short of stocks, but so has the taste of the public of different European countries been educated to British grown teas that they have to pay present prices rather than put any China teas in their blends.

"I was at the first auction of the year, when 30,000 packages of Ceylon teas were all absorbed at full prices. The blenders were the largest buyers. Lowest grades Ceylon Pekoe Souchongs sold in London for 6½d. spot cash.

"Quite a few lots of Canadian black teas were received in London while I was there. Considerable tea from New York arrived during that time also."

CANADIAN GROCER A STAPLE.

Mr. Durance, grocer, corner Ferguson Ave. and Ferry St., Hamilton, Ont., left on Monday for a two months' trip to Great Britain and the continent. During his stay abroad Mr. Durance will, besides enjoying himself, keep his eyes open for interesting grocery matters, as he has made a success of his business by close, careful attention and study. Speaking of The Canadian Grocer he said: "I have been a subscriber to the Canadian Grocer for over sixteen years, and I would as soon think of running a grocery store without sugar, tea and coffee and grocery staples as I would without The Grocer. I find it essential to my business." The Grocer wishes Mr. Durance a pleasant journey and safe return to Hamilton.

EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

HOW TO PRODUCE IT

Short Talks from the Retailer's Viewpoint

Merely Introductory

There has been more unadulterated nonsense written about advertising during the last decade than on any other subject of interest to mankind—always excepting, of course, "Race Suicide," and "The Annexation of Canada by the United States."

* * *

Mr. Retailer! Jump right in now and advertise—if you've never done it before. Do not be barred out of the publicity columns of your local papers because you can't write as pretty an ad as the fellow round the corner. You've read Sandy's opinion of whiskey? Sandy had just swallowed a glass of whisky when a croney enquired: "Is that good whisky, Sandy?"

"Good whisky!" wrathfully ejaculated the old man; "All whisky is good but some brands are better than others."

Despite the assertions of many advertising experts I am inclined to think that all advertising is good; but—some ads are far more effective than others. Even when John Smith merely declares that he has a certain line of goods for sale John is not producing bad advertising. I have studied the methods of advertisers all over the British Empire and the United States and I have yet to see an ad which could be considered as damaging to the business of the man who produced it. The moral is double-barrelled: Advertise and keep on advertising.

The primary essential for the retailer who produces his own copy is—a thorough knowledge of his own business—its wants. Some of the best advertising copy I've seen was produced several years ago by a Chicago retailer. That copy was so strong and effective that the merchant referred to cleared a snug fortune in a few years. Prosperity made him somewhat careless. He did not pay strict attention to business all the time. He lost a knowledge of its needs. He still continued to produce the advertising—good, strong stuff it was, too—but because he had lost the intimate knowledge he once possessed regarding his business the copy gradually lost much of its old-time power.

Truth is more necessary in your advertising copy than in a preacher's discourse. Fill it up with facts. Don't exaggerate. Cut out the circus style entirely. A big concern capitalized up in the millions can sling "stupendous, unprecedented," and all such words into their advertising, but the average retailer should avoid all that gush. The man who pays the bills is a common sense individual in the main, and the retailer who tries to humbug that man is monkeying with the buzz saw. Don't even exaggerate a little bit. The merchant who makes exaggerated statements regarding his goods strikes ordinary people in the same way as the fellow who swaggers along the beach in a loud suit.

"There's nothing in him," they say—referring to the swaggerer, and, well—enough said.

Grocers as a rule advertise less than they should in their local papers. They should advertise pretty regularly and could do so profitably. And they should insist on their ad always appearing on the same page and on the same part of the page, so that customers would know just exactly where to find it. Here we get back to the production of copy. Lots of grocers do not advertise—because they very foolishly imagine they cannot produce good copy. If you have a few facts to state that will interest the public, you can depend upon it that the newspaper man will be mighty glad to help you. A good way to judge the value of your own copy is to leave it aside for a day or two, and then revise it. You'll find as a general rule, that you have spread yourself too much. You'll be able to strengthen your copy in almost every case by cutting out a few fanciful sentences. A sugar-coated pill is all right, but the man who does the coating must know his business.

Study your trade—your probable customers. You've good bargains behind your counters. Do the people of your town know about it? If you can connect with the families in your vicinity who appreciate good values in groceries you'll be happy. Study your trade. Don't advertise in any happy-go-lucky way. Find out what you can say and say truthfully about your goods, and then consider the best possible way of saying it. And the best way of saying what you've got to say is—let prices talk for you. If an article excites a woman's curiosity you can bet dollars to cents that she's looking for the price in the next instance. Then a few clinching details make her jump for her hat and hustle around to your place.

Never buy space until you have your ad written and revised. A few words in a big space are seldom effective. The printer has to dislocate your sentences, haul them about and stretch them out to fill up and, as a rule, such ads look like a graveyard after a cyclone. Tell your story in a natural way and as briefly as possible. But—don't let the old proverb, "Brevity is the soul of wit," cause you any concern. One of the best ad men on this continent is occasionally too much controlled by this blessed old chestnut and some of his ads demonstrate very forcibly that brevity is sometimes the soul of d———d nonsense. Do not let any proverb curtail a good story—if you have a good story to tell. Make sure that you have, then take time and space to tell it.

The road to Honolulu is paved with good intentions. I had intended to criticize an ad sent in by Mr. Hyndman of Smiths Falls; but this general talk seemed necessary enough to swamp my good intentions. However, we'll have something to say about Mr. Hyndman's ad this day fortnight.

Have you a sample or samples of ads which wou would like us to criticize? Send them along. You'll be glad to read a word of honest criticism about your copy by a disinterested party—even suppose that criticism is sometimes peppery and to the point.

The flow of immigration into Labrador has been abnormal for the past year—all because a high-thinking poet has been advertising the Lapland ladies. The bard cuts loose in this caressing style:

"The girls who dwell in Labrador
Don't give the frozen mitt
The maidens cuddle all the more
The farther north ye gitt."

That little verse about the cuddling propensities of the Labrador ladies has already pulled the half of the male population out of Northern Ontario. And yet one still meets some men who declare that advertising doesn't pay. Huh!

T. JOHNSON STEWART.

MONTHLY COMPETITION.

Window dressing, we believe, is one of the most important parts of the grocery business. It needs encouragement in Canada. For that reason The Canadian Grocer is holding a monthly window dressing competition. Three prizes of $5, $3 and $2 will be awarded each month. Those wishing to enter the competition will send photographs of their windows to THE CANADIAN GROCER, 10 Front St. East, Toronto, accompanied by a written description.

This is a chance for the clerk. No department of the grocery trade offers larger opportunities for advancement than window dressing. If you don't know what you can do, try. If you don't surprise yourself the effort will be a great advantage in any case. No grocer is up to his business if he cannot dress a window. Get into the competition.

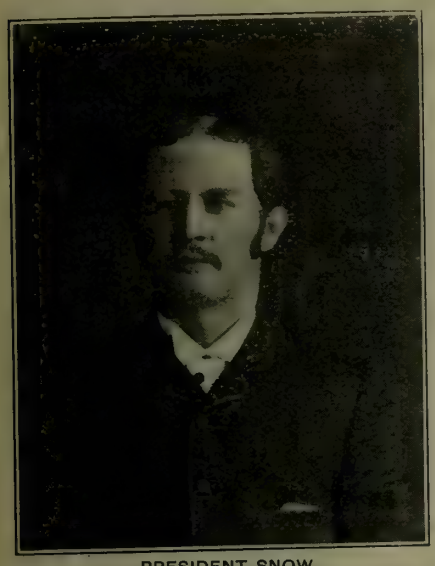
OAK POINT (MAN.) DEALERS ORGANIZE.

Secretary W. A. Coulson of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada attended last week an organization meeting of the dealers in Oak Point and vicinity. A strong section was organized to include the dealers in Oak Point, Scotch Bay, Lundar, Clarkeley, and St. Laurent.

Oak Point dealers are determined to fight the credit system and they have signed a hard and fast agreement to sell only for cash for one year from March 1st. Each dealer has paid in $300 as a guarantee of good faith. For the first breach of the agreement the fine is $50, for the second $100 and for the third $150. Fines are to be devoted to charitable purposes.

TORONTO GROCERS AT HOME AND THE GOOD TIME THEY HAD

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association held their 29th annual at-home on Wednesday evening in the beautiful assembly hall of the Temple Building. Every years seems to show a little improvement in this social climax of the grocery year in Toronto. But that may be merely in the youthful imagination of President Snow. Some old-timer grown rich in trade may say, "Ye should a seen us forty years ago." However nobody minds these old fellows nowadays.



PRESIDENT SNOW

[This portrait was taken at or about the time of his marriage. This coat wouldn't button on him now by several inches and the smile he wore then is not nearly large enough for him either. He's left off the "sideboards," too.]

The attendance was large, but not uncomfortably so, about 250. Of course all the young folks, Capt. Adams, Davey Bell and the rest danced past midnight and took no notice of it. The floor was superb, the music excellent, and the supper was good enough to eat, so good indeed that some of the gentlemen—never mind who—made a second attack. While the music was moving feet to merriment in the assembly room, quite a number of the more staid gentlemen, the staple articles, smoked and played cards in the corridor. F. W. Heyes, of Perkins, Ince & Co., got his back against the wall as far as possible from the realm of skirts and there maintained his serenity and independence. H. Hardy of the Eby, Blain Co., maintained an unruffled exterior through it all.

But there was no fun in that bunch; let's away to the hall of light laughter and rythmical movement. There's President Snow. Now he's not a tall man, but then he's not angular. His joviality suggests a modified, all-the-year-round Kris Kringle. In a dress suit? Not much, ordinary every Sunday-afternoon good clothes satisfy him. He's standing now with his hands behind him elevating his coat tails in conversation with a couple of ladies. Here he comes to headquarters, the entrance, from which point of vantage C. F. Thorne and T. Clark keep a careful look out to see that all goes smoothly and well. S. S. Searle, traveler for Douglas & Ratcliffe, the shortest man on the floor, and the best dancer, goes by in the dance, and the president lightly taps him on the head, passes him a merry quip and turns to see if the lemonade is flowing freely and everybody dancing that wants to be.

Look at Capt. Adams, springy as a boy and agile as a badger. There are young fellows moping on the side benches like sunflowers denied the sun and the captain with a bevy of pretty girls around him all wanting the first dance. A matter of temperament, perhaps, but some men's spirits never age.

You ask who's the handsomest man in the room? I could tell but I haven't enough life insurance on. Davy Bell says he is and I'm inclined to agree with him. But there's Mr. Raymond—Sunlight's none too fine for him—looking at him; one feels that he must have the blue ribbon in his pocket. Then there's John J. Fee, taller, thinner, less dash, but more distinguished looking. And here comes J. L. Bowles, very much at his ease, and behind him Wm. Kerr, the tallest man in sight. No, I won't say. I'll leave it to the ladies.

D. McLEAN, TREASURER
Who doesn't dance, so wasn't there.

Fred Rose, with a red rose in his lapel has just come in. That's why all the ladies sat up to take notice. He's just a shade bashful, or difiident. There, the shadow has passed; Secretary D. G. Beaton is introducing him to a lady. It is a fine accomplishment to be able to banish bashfulness in the presence of femininity. Mr. Rose will be alone no more this evening.

Not so Mr. Blair, who also wears the Red Rose. He accompanied Mr. Rose, but halted at the entrance to the assembly hall when the galaxy of feminine loveliness broke upon his vision, and Mr. Rose passed on. He is good to look upon and one or two very pretty girls are eyeing him covetously over their partner's shoulders, but here he stands talking to ex-Treasurer Clark as if he were interested. See him blush, having traded glances with one of the aforesaid pretty girls.

What have we to do with shyness? Here comes Gordon Humphrey with a lady on each arm, walking of course, because Gordon couldn't carry two at a time. It's a case to belie the old saw that where there's a will there's a way. If they were as big as he would like, they would weigh too much.

Talk about weighing, rest your tired eyes on the ample form of Sam McGiffin of Mc & E's. Throw in his smile and he'd tip the scale against any other man in the room.

There's the music for another dance. The tall young lady with Gillett's Pagne seems comfortable. But he's so short and jolly as he's good looking. She might be happy with a far less handsome man.

Whom else can you recognize in the throng? T. S. Grant, Joe Taylor, J. A. Montgomery of Eby, Blain Co., J. Mortimer of Christie, Brown Co., his colleage, T. Hulman; J. Smythe of the United Factories, R. C. Blackburn of Davidson & Hay, W. Spittal of Pure Gold, W. K. Booth of H. P. Eckardt & Co., Clem. Rupert of H. A. Nelson & Co.; M. Stewart of F. W. Humphrey's, L. Kemp of the McLean Produce Co., C. Kimpton, L. Williams of McWilliam & Everist, E. Botte of Clemes Bros., J. M. Wright and E. Hustwitt of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co.

Dan Casey of the Eby, Blain Co., smiled and smiled and smiled. The habit's contagious, of course, but what matter, it's good for business and anyway Dan can't help it.

The gentlemen to blame for the good time are: President R. B. Snow, Vice-President C. F. Thorne, Treasurer D. McLean, Secretary D. G. Beaton.

Stewards—Mr. R. Vanloan, Mr. F. W. Johnston, Mr. H. D. Kelly, Mr. J. S. Bond, Mr. T. Clark, Mr. D. Bell, Mr. R. H. Stewart, Mr. B. Panter, Mr. Beaumont.

B. PANTER.

Supper was served in two instalments. While the first contingent smiled across the tables, the remaining guests enjoyed one of the features of the evening. To the stirring swirl of Scottish melody, Capt. Adams, of Davidson & Hay, with Miss Charity Mortimer danced a Highland reel that brought the home land vividly before the eyes of the "foreigners" present.

Chris Maxwell found it hard to believe that Maxwell's Jelly had not found a place in the menu, but in the end he proved that his liking for good things was quite unbiased.

A genuine, old-time, sit-down supper was served in the supper room adjoining the assembly hall. The committee in charge realized that the magnet necessary to draw anyone from the waxen floor would have to be a strong one, and they arranged accordingly. The visible supply was all that could be desired when the market opened, but the consumptive demand was heavy and the repeat orders many, so that if the caterer hadn't had more down cellar in a tea cup someone might have been a wing shy, but there was plenty. Prompt and careful attendance made everything move smoothly. Oyster soup, turkey and ham, ice cream and cake, were some of the main features of the menu.

RETAILERS WANT CASH DISCOUNT

Quebec Wholesale Guild Fear Criminal Code and Decline Request for Conference—Strong Condemnation of Trading Stamps.

"I don't care a rap what system it is, all these trading stamp schemes and coupon arrangements injure us, and do more evil to legitimate business than any other practice, in vogue in the trade."

So spoke second vice-president E. P. Guillemette, of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, at the monthly meeting held Thursday of last week in the association rooms, 273 St. Catherine St. E.

Continuing, Mr. Guillemette said that it was up to the association members to stand together and wipe out all the premium schemes which were in use at the present time.

"We are in business to make money," he said, "and we sell our goods at a reasonable price; but there is not a grocer here who can sell his groceries at reasonable figures, giving good value, and at the same time work some coupon system of premium giving. Somebody has to pay for the premiums, and the grocer does not want to stand for the whole cost, and as a consequence he must shove some of the expense onto his customers by charging higher prices for his goods. The profit in selling groceries is small enough, as we all know, without making it any less by encouraging these various premium ideas. I understand that some of the members are running a premium business in connection with their grocery lines in order to, in their idea, help their trade. In my opinion, they should sink their own personal interests in this matter for the benefit of the association as a whole. What are we organized for if not to fight just such things as the trading stamp and the premium coupon? We were able to have a law passed forbidding the use of trading stamps, but this law has been evaded more or less, and the evil is just about as bad as ever. Some action should be taken by the association at once."

F. W. JOHNSTON

Mr. Guillemette's opening remarks were in reply to a statement made by one of the members, T. Pleau, who said he was running a coupon business proposed to him by a crockery premium company.

President Laniel speaking to the Canadian Grocer after the meeting, said that he could endorse the words of Mr. Guillemette, because he felt that as long as these schemes were in operation, so long would the grocers be at loggerheads with one another. The day of the trading stamp and the coupon idea was no more, and they both should be stamped out.

Liquor Licenses.

Ex-president P. Daoust brought up the matter of retail and wholesale liquor licenses. He understood the wholesale trade was endeavoring to have the law of a couple of years ago brought into force again. Under this law the wholesaler was permitted to sell retail as well as wholesale. The Retail Grocers' Association was successful in having a law passed which made the two licenses separate. The wholesaler was not permitted to sell under two gallons unless he had a retail license. Mr. Daoust suggested the drawing up of a resolution urging the continuance of the present law. After some discussion such a motion was carried.

Want Cash Discount.

Some time ago the association wrote to the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, of the Province of Quebec, asking that a time and a place be appointed for a meeting between the wholesalers and the retailers, to discuss the restoration of the one per cent. cash discount formerly accorded to the retail grocers. The reply of the Guild was as follows:

Montreal, Jan. 11, 1907.

Dear Sir:—I beg to inform you that your letter of the 12th. ultimo re desired interview to discuss restoration of cash discount of one per cent., was submitted to this Guild at its last meeting, when I was directed to state that while the Guild is always glad to discuss with the retailers such matters as may be to their advantage, our members can see danger in the proposed conference.

As you are aware, the law governing trade arrangements is of such a nature as to make it most unwise for trade organizations to make agreements with each other, or even to take action at the suggestion of others, and this fact, together with the circumstance that there is already a case against the Dominion Guild, of which this Guild is a branch, in connection with trade agreements, forces our members to the decision that until the Criminal Code is so amended as to allow merchants a reasonable latitude in these matters, nothing should be done which might possibly be construed into a violation of the law as it stands.

I am, Dear Sir,
Yours truly,
(Signed) STANLEY COOK,
Secretary.

It was decided to see what could be done towards coming to some more satisfactory arrangement than at present exists.

Selling off what was left of the picnic prizes took up considerable time. They were auctioned off by the president, and finally went to the highest bidder, J. A. Maynard, for $50.50.

A. Laniel occupied the chair, and other officers present were: 1st vice-president, J. A. Dore; second vice-president, E. P. Guillemette; treasurer H. Laniel and secretary A. Sarazin.

Jos. Cote's tobacco emporium, Quebec, has always a welcome for visiting merchants to the ancient city—Reference to his ad in another part of this issue gives address and invitation to visitors.

TO CORNER PATENT MEDICINES.

A. C. Pratt, M.P.P., is authoritatively credited with the intention of again introducing in the Legislature at the present session a bill to prohibit any but qualified druggists from selling patent medicines. Such a measure would be a potent injustice to a great many general merchants throughout the country. There is scarcely a general store in Ontario that doesn't include patent medicines, a pain killer, a tonic, a cough medicine, or a corn cure. Why shouldn't anybody sell them ?. This is simply a selfish attempt of the druggists to keep the trade to themselves, and every storekeeper who wants to sell patent medicines should write to his representative and point this out. A post card would do. It might be added that such a law would work a great hardship to the thousands of people who are not within miles of a druggist.

CANNED SALMON.

Canned salmon are noticeably in demand and more and more it is bearing in upon the trade that salmon are becoming a staple article of food in this country. A few years ago the consumption was confined almost entirely to June, July and August. Now there is a steady consumption the other nine months, increasing materially during the summer.

A Toronto wholesaler relating his experience in this regard said that early last year he advised his travelers that the next pack of salmon would be higher and many customers were induced to stock up. When it came to ordering the new pack the travelers advised going light on the ground that many of the customers were stocked up for a year at least. Many of the customers said to be supplied for a year were buying salmon before August was passed and have continued to buy ever since.

Another change is that, to a large extent, retailers have for the past four or five years practically ceased speculating in futures. Prior to that they ordered in the summer for September delivery and carried the stock till the following summer. The trade was badly bitten one year ; but probably the principal reason is that salmon has become a staple instead of an emergency ration or picnic food.

TRADING STAMPS AND PREMIUMS

Trading stamps and premium schemes of every description came in for strong condemnation at the last monthly meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association. The second vice-president, addressing the meeting, said that the association should, in his opinion, take some definite action at once to put an end to the increasing number of premium schemes which are being operated at the present time. He gave reasons why they should be done away with, explaining that grocers were forced to be content with a small profit on their goods, and that they could not afford to make the returns even smaller by introducing trading stamps and trading coupons. The grocer has to pay for the trading stamp premiums, and he often found it necessary to charge his customer this cost by advancing the price of his goods. In the end the grocer loses by the use of trading stamps. His customers will not long be content to pay high prices for their groceries to one merchant when they can buy from another at lower figures.

A law was passed by the Government which did something towards killing off the trading stamp idea, but the evil has not yet entirely disappeared, and nothing but the united action of the grocers will succeed in abolishing the practice.

The national convention of American retail grocers at Dallas passed a resolution reaffirming the stand taken against premiums, and especially against the taking in of new goods to which premiums are attached in any possible way.

In the latest Association Bulletin, Secretary Green, the former president, says :

"I believe the time is not far distant when we shall see the premium business practically a dead letter, but we must not lose sight of the fact that it will be by continued effort and unity of action if we would drive those big concerns out of the premium business.

"The Government in deciding against the transportation through the mails of missing letters and lottery schemes has been a great help in eliminating the coupon and other schemes of like kind, but it remains for the grocers of the United States to continue their opposition and use their influence in any possible way so as to make the trade in premium goods as undesirable as possible."

TO ENCOURAGE COLD STORAGE.

Hon. Mr. Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, has a bill before the House which is likely to become law. Its object is to encourage the establishment of cold storage warehouses, for the preservation of perishable food products, in locations where private individuals would not be likely to build. The bill provides that a Government subsidy of 30 per cent. shall be paid to parties building cold storage establishments, which shall not, of course, become private enterprises. The payment of the bonus is spread over four years, so that the scheme is under the control of the Government until after it has passed the critical period of its existence. The idea is to pay one-half of the 30 per cent. upon completion of the warehouse ; 7 per cent. at the end of the first year ; 4 per cent. at the end of the second year, and 2 per cent at the end of the third and fourth years. The bill applies only to mechanical cold storage. The measure will have the hearty support of all business men, who recognize the need of established cold storage warehouses in all parts of the country. Such plants would have a beneficial effect on Canada's foreign trade also, in that they would guarantee the perfect keeping of goods while held in this country, and exporters would be certain that their goods were in first-class condition when shipped from the country.

CURB PARTY BIAS.

It is invigorating to have a man like Peleg Howland come out boldly and say what he thinks about measures passed by the Government, of which he is a recognized supporter. He says, plump and plain, that the Railway Commission has helped to increase freight rates by recognizing the traffic associations. He thinks and says the anti-dumping clause of the tariff is a mistake, because it interferes with the merchant's inherent right to buy in the cheapest market. Too many men in this country have put political clamps on their independence and if they can't praise their leaders and their works, sit silent. If the commercial leaders would curb their party bias and give vent occasionally to their honest views, it would be a fine thing for Canada. What this Dominion needs most is men to speak out, regardless of what party idol is blasphemed.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Fish—Revised.

Honey—Prices changed.

Sugar—Interesting.

Beans—Advancing.

Montreal, Feb, 14, 1907.

Trade is not very active, buying being only for immediate requirements. Prices generally are very well maintained and there are no features to the market. Sugar has not advanced, although it was expected to have gone up. The new tariff changes will affect the situation according to all reports. Other grocery lines will be affected somewhat by the changes also. In canned goods there is not much going on, except that outside canners are underselling the Canadian Canners. Teas are very firm, but little business is being done. Syrups are still in demand, but molasses is quiet. Dried fruits are not selling very rapidly, the trade being pretty well stocked up. Beans are strong at prices quoted.

Collections are fairly good in the country, and the city is better.

SUGAR—An advance in sugar was expected but it has not occurred, and any little excitement there may have been has died out. The new tariff changes will have the effect of changing the market somewhat, if certain things come to pass. Formerly the refiners were able to bring raw sugar from the British West Indies into Canada via New York and get the benefit of the preferential tariff. Now they must bring these sugars into the country by way of Halifax or St. John in order to take advantage of the 1-3 preferential. It may be possible to arrange ocean freight rates between the Indies and these ports which will compare somewhat favorably with New York rates, but this whole matter will have to be thrashed out before anything is done, and this will take some time.

TEAS—Prices continue to climb, and as they go higher business becomes less and less. Ceylon blacks have advanced again since last report. One tea merchant cabled one day for prices and made a sale two days later, but when he attempted to have his order confirmed he found that an advance of 1½c. had taken place. Japans are subject to some inquiry. Very few Ceylon and Indian greens are obtainable. Siftings are scarce and very dear.

COFFEE—Coffee is interesting in the primary markets at present, although locally there isn't much activity. The valorization scheme goes on an everybody interested in coffee is watching for outcome of the struggle. A minimum advance of 2c. a lb. on all coffees is expected as a result of recent calorization developments. The Brazilian government is doing considerable buying, according to advices from Brazil. The people behind valorization are quite confident of winning out in the end.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS — Very little is being done in dried fruits. Grocers are well stocked up and do not care to buy at the moment. Currants are stiffer according to latest advices. Some reports have reached Montreal to the effect that stocks of Valencia raisins in New York are about cleaned up, but other advices say that there are still plenty offering. Denia stocks are practically nil. Prunes are now beginning to sell. Prices are steady.

SPICES—Reports on spices indicate a very active market, with a larger demand. There is considerable buying on the part of manufacturers for actual needs. Pepper is rather firmer and a little higher in price for futures, New York market. The question of quality is becoming a very important matter. Cloves are active abroad, with small supplies in New York. Nutmegs are selling more freely and are quoted at higher figures to arrive. There is no change in mace, which is dull. Higher prices are expected in ginger, the market for which is quiet and firm at the moment. Speaking generally prices are strong.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—There is a little movement in corn, peas and tomatoes, but outside of this there is not much business being done either locally or with country points. Some of the outside canners are on the market offering goods at prices which are all the way from 10 per cent. to 15 per cent. below those quoted on the lists of the Canners. This is found by the jobbing trade to be the worst feature of the present situation.

The canned goods situation so far as the jobber is concerned continues firm. Fruits are particularly so. Consumptive demand for canned vegetables is large for this season and the heavy feeling on the part of speculative holders noted elsewhere does not apply in any way to the prices to the retail trade. The old schedule prices continue to some extent, but wholesalers are getting the new prices wherever possible. Peaches, 2's and 3's, yellow, are very firm and are quoted here at $2 and $3 without regard to group. The largest holder on the street would not sell to wholesalers at present scheduled prices. Canned salmon are in good demand. Lent is helping all kinds of fish products.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar still a puzzle.

Evaporated apples, higher.

Weather market in eggs.

Toronto, Feb. 11, 1907.

Business continues quiet but very satisfactory for the season of the year and there are no complaints about collections. Canned goods are going out freely, though a week's sales now would not more than equal a day's a month hence. The demand for canned salmon is also noticeable. Sugar is unchanged, but the feeling is weak. Evaporated apples are higher. Grocery prices generally are steady and are likely to continue so until spring business opens.

There is a slightly heavy feeling in regard to tomatoes on the part of speculative holders. What this pretends is hard to say. Some of the jobbers here will be in the market to buy before the season is over, so that they are not all overstocked. It is quite possible the heaviness noticeable is due wholly to the seasonable inactivity. Certainly some of the wholesalers are in the market as buyers just now and it is said at least one Winnipeg house is offering tomatoes held in Ontario.

TEA—All markets are very strong and Monday's auctions in London showed a further advance of ½d., mostly in the lower grades. Consumption the world over has increased and absorbed the usual year-end surplus. On account of the firm and advancing market demand locally has been very brisk. It is held that the present production of Indian cannot be materially increased within two or three years, and that the Ceylon acreage is about at the limit.

COFFEE—The surplus supplies in the world's markets, due to the heavy crop deliveries from Brazil, are said to be in a fair way to being absorbed, and prices have shown good advances and hold steady. Locally, conditions are unchanged.

SUGAR—Last week Cuban raws declined, while European beet advanced, increasing from 32c. to 42c. per 100 lbs., the amount by which Cubans were below the parity of beet. This shows an abnormal condition in the Cuban situation. Willett & Gray, at the close of last week, say:

"Naturally the rapid making of the crop, the difficulty of storing it and the needs of quick cash by planters is responsible for much of this abnormal condition. It will no doubt continue while the crop is at the highest point of production, as during the present and the next month. After which, with decrease in crop making the conditions will become normal again and Cuba prices rise to near the parity of beet sugar in Europe as was the case last year.

"The full number (183) of centrals in Cuba are now running, under most favorable weather conditions and receipts at shipping ports are at their highest thus far this season. This week receipts were 61,000 tons, against 61,000 tons last week and 42,000 tons last year. The receipts of all sugars in the United States four ports were 36,524 tons for the week, against 23,992 tons last week and 20,711 tons last year, with indications of larger receipts next week."

Cuban raws continue on the same basis this week. The New York market for refined is steady.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 14, 1907.)

A return to milder weather has helped to relieve the tie-up of the railways and business is bound to benefit. During the last six weeks the situation has been acute, the wholesalers being unable to get supplies themselves and being equally unable to put their goods in the hands of the retail trade. Reports are current of freight shipments from Winnipeg to Manitoba towns being more than a month on the way. Under these conditions trade has naturally been very slack and everything still depends on the weather.

CANNED GOODS—The canned goods market is quiet and featureless this week. Values are steady. We quote :

NEW CALGARY COMMISSION HOUSE.

The McDonald-Dunlop Co., of Calgary, have been succeeded by the Great West Jobbing and Commission Co. "Little Mac" is no longer connected with the business and it is now under the direction of W. V. Moore, president and manager. J. W. Speer, secretary, and W. E. Moore, vice-president. The new firm will carry on a wholesale and commission business, specializing in sugar cane, honey, West India molasses, etc.

OPPOSE PARCEL POST.

At a meeting of the council of the Portage la Prairie board of trade, held last week it was decided to protest against the Dominion Government's new arrangement re the parcel post, which it proposed to bring in, and the secretary wired the local member, J. Crawford, to this effect.

It is maintained that the regulation will discriminate against smaller and local merchants in favor of the departmental stores, as it would facilitate the latter's shipments of goods through the mails.

TO ERECT LARGE WAREHOUSE.

A. A. Ayer & Co. Buy Property on Which They Will Build.

One of the oldest firms in the produce business, A. A. Ayer & Co., Montreal, have purchased the property on which the firm's present offices and warehouses are located, and considerable additional ground as well. Altogether about 30,000 square feet have passed under the control of the company. This comprises 250 feet on St. Henry St., 125 feet on William St., with about the same on St. Paul St. A modern cold storage plant will be erected, and the whole building when ready for business, will represent an outlay of from $140,000 to $150,000.

ST. JOHN'S WINTER SHIPPING

Movement of Traffic—Grocery Markets Quiet—Fisheries of 1906 Best in 50 Years—News of the Trade in New Brun swick.

(Special correspondence of The Can dian Grocer.)

St. John. N.B., Feb. 11, 1907.

During the past week the local wholesale markets have been very quiet and only moderate business has been done, the dealers say, in all lines. No changes have taken place in quotations. In the produce line, eggs were somewhat scarce last week, but the tendency of the market is said to be downward.

At the monthly meeting of the St. John Board of Trade last week, the question of the proposed c.o.d. parcels post system was again brought up, and owing to the fact that the matter had been dropped by the Government no further action was taken in the matter.

The winter-port business is booming this season, though in some particulars the volume of trade is below last year. Up to date sixty steamships have arrived with a tonnage of 234,232, against fifty-eight steamers last season, with a tonnage of 195,205, showing an increase in tonnage of 39,027 for 1906-7.

Fifty steamers that have made their returns at the customs house up to date have taken away in exports $9 041,192. Of this amount, $6,207,233 was Canadian goods, and $2,833,959 American goods. The first fifty-two steamships last year took away goods valued at $10,750,184, sho[illegible] decrease for 1906-7 of $1,708,992.

While the exports have shown a falling-off, the imports are nearly double last year's.

The low prices for grain and lumber on the other side account in a large measure for the falling off in exports, as the qualtities shipped this season are considerably below last year.

Following are some of the products that have gone forward this year :—

Wheat, (bushels)	1,135,119
Oats (bushels)	772,501
Barley (bushels)	470,548
Cheese (boxes)	60,514
Cattle (head)	13,975
Eggs (boxes)	4,404

Two steamers have sailed for South Africa taking good general cargoes.

Frank White, confectioner, and proprietor of White's restaurant, has obtained from the Horticultural Society the exclusive right to furnish amusement and sell articles at Rockwood park for a period of ten years, and in order to carry on the enterprise has organized a joint stock company, capitalized at $49,000. Mr. White, who holds the controlling interest, will introduce many new features at the park.

J. Harvey Brown, tea merchant, has sold his residence on Lancaster Heights, to J. A. Queen, of the Canada Life Assurance Co. Mr. Brown will remove about April 1, to a house he recently purchased on King street east.

D. J. Purdy, M.P.P., is gradually recovering from his recent severe illness.

W. Frank Hatheway has recovered from his recent illness and is able to attend to his business again.

Ralph E. White, of the R. E. White Co., Ltd., which assigned recently, has accepted a position on the office staff of the Sun Publishing Co.

Recent returns show that the St. John harbor fisheries yielded the fishermen about $145,000 last year, an increase of $22,000 over the average value of the fisheries in recent years. This large gain was in the value of the salmon catch, due in a large measure to the fish culture work carried on by the Dominion Government. The catches of several years have been steadily growing larger and that of 1906 was the best recorded in fifty years.

FRUIT ON THE PRAIRIE MARKETS.

Inspector Says Ontario Packing and Quality is Improving.

Mr. P. McNeill, Calgary fruit inspector for Saskatchewan and Alberta, speaking of the situation in the prairie provinces says :

"The qualities arriving from Ontario, British Columbia and California," said the inspector, "are about equal. The quality of that sent from British Columbia has been uniformly good, and their methods of packing are up-to-date and attractive. During the season I was occasioned to write only a couple of letters calling attention to defects. In these cases the fruit was slightly off color and not really inferior.

"The dealers are unanimous in the assertion that Ontario supplied better fruit than ever before. The shippers have packed to better advantage and are adapting their methods to meet the requirements of the Fruit Marks Act. In the past shippers have trusted too much to subordinates, and the result was inferior fruit, poorly packed, was sent without their knowledge.

"Ontario men have already hurt their trade by not adopting methods similar to those in vogue in British Columbia. They must exercise strict methods as to grade and pack, as they cannot afford to lose this, the best market for Ontario fruit in the world. Their product is of high quality, and if it is properly shipped will hold the place it merits in Western Canada stores."

FISHING LINE FOR COD.

(From the Minneapolis Journal.)

"A fishing line worth $2,000 ?"

"Yes, sir."

"I don't believe it."

"It's the truth. It's a codfish line. It's one of those lines to which you owe your Sunday morning fishballs and your less appetizing, equally helpful, cod liver oil. These codfish lines, you see, are frequently eight miles long. They have 4,680 hooks. They'll often land 2,500 cod. No wonder they cost $2,000, eh ?"

PERSONALS

Donald W. Duff, manager of Perkins, Ince & Co., Toronto, has been having a bout with the grip this week that kept him at home a few days.

Minto Bros., Toronto, proprietors of Melagama tea, have this year added three new travelers, all of whom are known to the tea trade, to their already large force. The new men are, M. E. Gilbert, F. C. Greer and James Hamilton.

Allan Deans, of Deans & Walker, grocers, Galt, was a caller at the Toronto office of the Canadian Grocer last Thursday. Mr. Dean wore a smile which the Grocer hopes will never come off—Whisper—he was on his wedding trip, having been married Wednesday, 6th inst, at Stratford, to Miss Mabel Borland, of the classic city.

Jack Stewart, traveling representative for Maconochie's goods in Ontario, is spending some weeks at his home in Thornton. Tuesday of last week he came to Toronto to play with the Marlboroughs II. hockey team in the match with the St. Georges. Jack is a dandy on skates.

M. F. Goddard, manager of the Maple Tree Producers Association, Waterloo, P.Q., is absent from Montreal this week on a business trip to Toronto, London and points west. He reports bright prospects for a busy season and probably an early one. Mr. Bradley, the western traveler of this firm, is now rapidly making his way towards Winnipeg.

Lewis P. Mason, of Mason & Hickey, Winnipeg, has returned to business after an enforced holiday which was the result of a siege of typhoid fever. He is starting west on an extended trip among the trade in a few days. Few travelers are more popular than Mr. Mason, and the boys on the road and the trade in general will be glad to hear of his recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Farrington, parents of Mrs. Wm. Brown, Cherry Valley, celebrated their golden wedding recently. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends including Geo. Farrington, a son, a merchant tailer, who is now serving his third term as mayor of Picton, and was this time elected by acclamation.

C. H. Crysdale, Oshawa, was a caller at The Grocer office on Tuesday last. Mr. Crysdale has been in business in Oshawa for 30 years, and is a member of the town council. He is enthusiastic about the town's prospects, and being convinced that Oshawa is the Koh-i-Noor of Canadian municipalities, he is a strong opponent of the bonusing system. "Let the industries come to the town, not the town go to the industries," is Mr. Crysdale's motto. He mentioned several important business changes of recent date to support his claim that Oshawa is a pretty wide-awake burg.

EFFECTIVE WINDOW DRESSING

Manufacturers Appreciating the Value of Window Displays—A Hint to the Retailer—Traveler's View of this Department of the Grocer.

The display of Armour's Extract of Beef is one which occupied the window of Peebles, Hobson & Co., Hamilton, during the Christmas season. It was arranged by Armour's own window-dresser, and the management of the store expressed themselves as very much pleased with the display, and also with the benefit it worked to their trade in this particular line of goods. It had the effect of creating a sudden interest in the product on the part of customers, resulting in largely increased sales during the time the display remained in the window.

The ingenuity and general tastiness shown by the window-dresser are shown very clearly in the photograph, and the results obtained were evidently only the natural consequences of good work. Unfortunately the photograph cannot bring out what is said to have been one of the main features of the display—the electrical effects produced by the use of red and yellow electric bulbs at intervals across the window.

A Manufacturer's Display.

In connection with the arrangement, Armour, Limited, write as follows:

"Success of this kind only emphasizes the efficacy of window display advertising, and suggests particularly that a great deal depends upon the manner in which the window is dressed. A progressive merchant cannot help but recognize the great assistance a window display offers in the way of selling goods and there is no department of his business that demands greater interest and activity from him and his employes than the art of dressing windows."

The question that naturally follows is: When a firm so strikingly successful as Armours says and does so much in connection with this subject of window dressing, why do so many merchants content themselves with drifting on in a way which was antiquated when their fathers were running the business, and with such striking examples and arguments before them, persistently refuse to take advantage of such a simple aid to success as window dressing?

If it pays firms like Armours to employ men all the time for the special purpose of trimming other people's windows, surely it would pay the proprietors to have their own clerks dress their own windows with their own goods. The shops with the poorest displays in their windows have the clerks with the greatest amount of spare time on their hands. Why not make use of it—it costs nothing extra—and watch the results?

THEY WANTED TO KNOW.

(By a Traveller.)

Bill—Hi say, 'Arry!

'Arry—Wot's ther matter, Bill?

Bill—Wot's come hover ther bloomin' city?

'Arry—Wot do yer mean, Bill?

Bill—W'y, bless yer 'eart, ha year hago yer could walk from one hend h'of ther street to the h'other and never think h'of looking h'at a bloomin' window, h'and now, bless yer bloomin' 'eart, h'its like a panerhamer. Yer can't get past one without looking h'at h'it, they're h'all so pretty. Can you tell me 'ow h'it h'is, 'Arry?

'Arry—Blowed h'if h'I know, Bill. 'Ere comes Jack, perhaps 'e can tell yer.

(Approach Jack.)

'Arry—H'I say, Jack, can you tell Bill 'ere 'ow h'it h'is that the Grocers' windows h'are so nice now ter what they used to be?

Jack—Well, yer see, Bill, some blokes as belongs to the Canidian Goucer 'as taken a h'interest h'in these blokes be'ind ther counter h'and they 'ave been givin' prizes for ther best dressed windets h'in the city, h'and, by Jove, h'it 'as been quite a h'inspiration, h'and h'it 'as filled ther blokes be'ind ther counter with a h'aspirhation ter do domething, h'and, th'y h'are doing h'it. Those blokes wot belong to the Canidian Groucer deserve a lot of credit for they 'ave filled the city with fine dressed winders. They 'ave beautified ther city h'and they 'ave beautified ther clerks by bringing h'out h'and cultivating faculties h'and talent that was covered h'up h'and not seen before. Yer know, Bill, yer can't do nice things without becoming nice, h'and there's nothing like cultervating the beautiful h'in yer. H'it makes yer wear a smile yer never did before. H'I say, "Three cheers for the blokes h'in the Groucer!" We will soon 'ave as fine window dressers as wot's h'in ther world.

AN EXAMPLE.

C. E. Choat & Co. Halifax, were the winners of the first prize in the November window-dressing competition. This extract from a letter recently written by them to The Grocer, speaks for itself. Like lots of other good advice, a more general application wouldn't do any harm.

"It is very gratifying to us to think that our efforts in window display were so successful. We wish to thank you heartily for the cheque of $5, which, we would add, has been distributed among our clerks as an incentive for further window dressing. We hope before long to send you another photograph."

LIGHTING DISPLAY WINDOWS.

How to light the show window to the best advantage is often a difficult problem. In former times, before the incandescent electric lamp came into general use and before the various modern systems of gasoline, kerosene and acetylene lighting had been perfected, the store keeper hung in the centre of his window a big kerosene lamp, and everybody was satisfied. To-day the modern show window is a perfect blaze of light, which shines on the goods displayed and not in the eyes of the window gazer.

One of our exchanges recently published two photographs showing right and wrong methods of lighting windows. In one case the lights affected the eyes and instead of being encouraged to look at the display in the window were forced to look the other way. The second illustration showed shaded lights, the rays of which were cast in a flood upon the articles in the window, the effect on observers being to attract their attention and, as not a light glare was visible, to hold it for an indefinite time.

The third prize display in the Christmas window-dressing competition, entered by Hood & Teatzel, Nelson, B.C., will appear in next week's issue.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

CHATHAM.

At the inaugural meeting of the Public Library Board on the 6th inst., Wm. Anderson was elected chairman of that body for 1907. Mr. Anderson has been a faithful and valued member of the board for some years past, and this elevation at the hands of his colleagues was a deserved one.

A prominent figure among Kent fruit growers, and one well known to Chatham business men, passed away on Sunday afternoon in the person of Charles McGuigan, of Cedar Springs. Mr. McGuigan, who was 71 years of age, came to Canada from Scotland at the age of five, and has resided at Cedar Springs for 40 years. He leaves a wife, two sons and one daughter. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon to Crawford cemetery. Mr. McGuigan was one of the best known fruit growers in Western Ontario and will be widely mourned.

HAMILTON.

The regular monthly meeting of the Grocers' Association was held on the 7th inst., when the officers for 1907 were installed, all of the last year's officers being elected by acclamation. Mr. Wm. Smye, the genial president, was welcomed back to the chair, and after this part of the business was completed, the executive committee brought in a recommendation for establishing a collecting and reporting branch. This, after some discussion, was unanimously carried, and promises to be a very important feature in the association's work. It is expected this will result in a very large increase in membership.

Considerable discussion ensued on the subject of jobbers selling others than the legitimate trade, it being contended by a large number of the members, that the laundry, restaurant, hotel and private family trade now being done by most of the Hamilton jobbers, was properly the retailers' business. The feeling expressed was, that if some one house would come out in the open, and pledge themselves to live up to the lines suggested, that they would receive the support of the association. A motion was passed, asking each jobbing house in the city to declare themselves on the question, answers to be in at the next regular meeting of the association.

Acting on the suggestion of President T. R. Close, of the Board of Trade, the manufacturers of the city are showing their wares in the retail stores. The show has proven a great success, and has demonstrated to the citizens the fact that Hamilton-made goods are not only the best produced in Canada, but at the same time are sold at fair prices. The very large sales being effected through this medium are also highly satisfactory to the exhibitors. President Close is being congratulated on the able manner in which he is filling the position, and on his ability in putting new life into the staid, old body, which he presides over. More power to the Board of Trade.

LIPTON SHREWDNESS.

CANNERS AT BUFFALO.

Discussing the Pure Food Law—Big Gathering of Big Interests.

Over 2,500 men interested in the canning industry in America and repesenting considerably more than fifty millions of invested capital, are in session this week in Buffalo. A strong deputation of about 100 is present from Canada. The principal subject for consideration at this annual convention of the packing interests is the new United States pure food law. The canners are not opposed to it; but they want to know how to comply with it. "It will drive out the fakirs in the business," said one man.

"The new law will help the business," declared W. L. Jones, of the United States Canning Company. "The people want better goods and this law will insure their getting what they demand. They will have more faith in what they eat and this will lead to their eating more canned goods."

An extended report of the convention will appear in The Grocer next week.

CHANGES IN THE NEW TARIFF.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN.

The cheese situation at present is a rather curious one. It is puzzling in some ways. It is interesting and yet it is too quiet to be interesting when viewed in another light. There is more or less trading being done, but transactions last week were not so large, nor so frequent, as they have been in the past. Demand from England continues, but quantities required are not so large. Prices asked at present are a quarter, and in some cases more, higher than they were at the time of last report. Holders are not inclined to let their stocks go for any less money than they can help. This statement would seem to indicate that the market was very strong, when taken with the fact that prices are upward in tendency from a surface view, and trading is light, but just the same, at least one sale of excellent colored cheese has been made at a figure ¼c. under what was supposed to be the ruling price. This is perhaps surprising, but it shows that this party, quite well informed on conditions in England, was prepared to let his small remaining stocks go at what might seem a poor price, rather than run any risk. Others are forced to hold out for a market which will be quite a bit higher, unless they are prepared to lose money. They bought during the high September markets and have been carrying their holdings since that time. Naturally cost price is desired with at least the cost of carrying the cheese, and if higher figures than now rule are not obtained, money will be lost.

Stocks locally are rapidly decreasing. Week by week they are tapped for greater or less quantities, until now they are down to a very low ebb. More than three or four firms have not any holdings worth while, and others cannot say that what they have will last for any length of time. A very rough estimate of the holdings in Montreal would be 50,000 to 75,000 boxes. It must be remembered, however, that the greater part of this cheese is already sold, being held on English account. Of cheese actually for sale there are not at most more than 20,000 boxes, from all indications. It might be wise, perhaps, to allow for the various small lots which always turn up when least expected, and place the amount at 25,000 boxes, but this would surely be the outside figure. In England there is not much being done in cheese. The situation is in many respects the same as it is here. Regarding Canadian cheese, while quotations to hand are of wide range, dealers find it difficult to obtain top figures. Consumption is said to be lighter.

There is some discussion in the trade as to the possibility of developments in the American situation which would affect the London market. Four years ago considerable cheese was consigned, and the result was that the market on the other side went to pieces. It is remarked that there does not seem to be much demand in the United States for the cheese now offered on the American market, and prices are easier. There is little anxiety among local dealers for this reason. Arrivals of cheese last week were nil.

Butter is about steady. There have been practically no developments since the time of writing last. Receipts of large rolls are not so large as they have been, and the market for this class of butter may be called steady. Further lots of butter are being shipped back to Canada from England, but the arrivals are not heavy enough to materially affect the situation. Consumption adequately takes care of everything that is now offering.

Reportd receipts of butter during the week ending February 9 were 682 packages, making the total, since May 1, 1906, 605,334 pac ages.

PROVISION SITUATION.

The packers are attempting another downward movement in the price of live hogs, but with what success only the week end and possibly next week, will show. This is because of the unfavorable situation in the Old Country, where Wednesday cables show a decline of 2s. Canadian bacon now on the English market costs the packers 59s. and is selling at 55s. The bacon to be marketed next week cost 60s.

In Ontario this week prices for live hogs range from $6.50 to $6.65, f.o.b. country points, and deliveries are fair. Last week the total killings in Ontario were 25,000, or a little over. The cold weather doesn't help deliveries.

Just what is ailing the Old Country market the trade here do not know. February market is proverbially bad, and that's all is known.

The high price of hogs and products in the United States is helping the Canadian farmer to resist the downward pressure in prices. He knows that Canadian bacon brings more than American in the Old Country and naturally thinks hogs should be higher here. Just now, however, the returns are about the same for Canadian and American products.

It is generally conceded by the packers that prices for live hogs are not likely to decline much, if any, and they unanimously predict a sharp rise in the prices for products on the domestic market as soon as business revives with the opening of navigation.

In the United States deliveries have been much heavier but the market has remained firm.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

PROVISIONS—Business is fairly good and prices are strong and advancing. Many changes will be noticed in this week's list of quotations. Hams are very firm and likely to be higher.

BUTTER—Butter moves along about as last week, being perhaps a little firmer if anything. Receipts are not large, about sufficient to take care of the demand. Some butter is being shipped back to Canada from England, but this is disposed of without trouble.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—Prices of pork products are tending upward on account of the high price of live hogs and packers prophesy that upon the revival of business which will come with the end of Lent and the opening of navigation, there will be a sharp advance in prices. Meantime lard is ½c. higher and hams are firmer.

OFF FOR THE WEST.

H. C. Baker, of the Eby, Blain Co., Toronto, left Wednesday for the Northwest. He will sell the trade as far as Edmonton, Calgary, and into the mountains, doing the Crow's Nest country. This is Mr. Baker's seventh year in the west for the Eby, Blain Co., and in that time he's seen some big strides in development and hasn't failed to take his share of the new business. He usually gets away about February 1, but the weather has so tied things up, he thought he might as well sit at home as in Winnipeg or on a siding snowbound in God's country. However, the weather is like everything else in the west, when it starts it hustles, and the flowers will be blooming before he gets far. His genial smile won't chill them either.

Wheat and Oat Products Higher on Account of Advanced Grain Prices—Not Much Export Business—Freight Blockade in West Easier.

Grain men are wondering if the reports that Russia is buying American grain are true. The higher markets got a setback on Wednesday but the movement both ways is regarded as purely speculative. The world's sdpply of speculative. The world's supply of a million bushels less than a year ago. The freight blockade in the west is being relieved a little because receipts of wheat are increasing at Winnipeg. There is lots of room for improvement. Wheat loaded on cars in November is still on the elevator siding, showing among other things that the railways are shorter of engines than cars. Ontario millers seem to be pretty well supplied with western wheat. For Ontario winter wheat the ... paying 72—73c. The flour millers however appear to be better off than the oatmeal millers. Western oats, upon which for a couple of years the trade has depended almost entirely, are almost unobtainable and Ontario oats are bringing 39—40c. f.o.b. The world's visible supply of oats is less than half what it was a year ago, 11,512,000 bushels, against 26,327,000 bushels.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—An advance would not be a surprise at the present, considering the state of the market for wheat. The milling companies report a good volume of business. City and country trade is satisfactory.

MONTREAL, CANADA

THIS IS ENTERPRISE.

The Woodstock Government Cold Curing Station has been leased for a number of years to the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Company for cold storage of cheese.

The company will take over the station on the first of April. Five years ago the Dominion Government opened four curing stations at Woodstock, Brockville, Cowansville and St. Hyacinthe. A campaign of education has made such headway, that the government does not consider it necessary to operate curing rooms at the public expense for a longer period, accordingly the government advertised for tenders to rent the Woodstock plant.

There were five tenders received, one from Embro, two from Woodstock, and one from the C.P.R. The MacLaren Imperial Cheese Compaay's tender was accepted. The principal reason why the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. are desous of procuring cold curing rooms, is that they are great believers in possessing the finest quality of cheese, and as the Woodstock section produces this, and as the company are specialists in the curing or developing of cheese, this new addition to their various other plants shows another step forward of Canadian enterprise. In addition to their procuring this plant, they have purchased the Wellesley Cheese and Butter factory, where they will enter into the manufacture of all high grades of cheese, and amongst other productions will be several new specialties in the cheese line that heretofore Canadian manufacturers have not undertaken.

The claim is often to be heard that Canadian cheese is not up to the English standard, but while this may be true where carelessness is shown in manufacturing, MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. from their wide experience and splendid connections are determined to produce a quality of Canadian cheese that will not be equalled or surpassed by any cheese made in any counry. They believe that with good pasture and good cows, and if the cheese is properly manufactured and well cured and cared for, that no Canadian product will give better results than well-made and well-cured cheese. The company, therefore, are determined to put themselves in a position that as far as factories and proper rooms for developing and curing cheese are concerned, no time or money will be spared.

The farmers about Bobcageon have formed the Kawartha Butter Mfg. Co., with D. Logan as president, and capital of $600. They will install a plant in a portion of the cheese factory and be ready to operate by March 1st.

RETAILERS UNITE TO MEET MAIL ORDER COMPETITION

Bold Step Taken by Six Merchants of Cartwright, Man.—Appeal to Local Pride and Offer to Meet Outside Prices.

Six retail stores in Cartwright, Man., have amalgamated to form a joint stock company, the objects in view being to restrict the credit system and to enable the Cartwright stores to meet the competition of the big catalogue houses. This is a new way of dealing with a couple of problems with which almost every dealer is confronted, and the trade in all parts of the Dominion will be interested in watching the measure of success or failure which may attend this novel experiment.

Cartwright is a small Manitoba village of about 500 population, serving a rich and prosperous farming community. Its merchants would have found business conditions quite satisfactory were it not for two things, viz., they could not escape allowing long credits to their customers, and many of these long credit customers were sending their cash to Winnipeg and Toronto to the catalogue houses. It is an old story, a story which may be duplicated in almost any part of Canada. The local store gives credit to its customers and they, being ungrateful and unappreciative, send their cash, when they have it, to the catalogue houses in the city. In one week it is said that one catalogue house took $1,200 in cash from the little village of Cartwright.

Confronted with these conditions, the Cartwright dealers have taken a bold step, the results of which it is too early yet to predict. Six firms—Moore & Hills, McKenzie & Byce, L. H. Phillips, Wm. Gemmill, W. Macklem and Cannon & Pickell—have formed a joint stock company, to be known as "Merchants Limited." In a circular letter to their customers these firms announce that the new company is capitalized at $50,000, divided into shares of $100 each, and that any farmer or private individual may purchase these shares to the extent of $500. R. F. Moore is president and general manager; Wm. Gemmill 1st vice-president; L. H. Phillips, 2nd vice-president; and J. J. Hill secretary treasurer.

To Fight Department Stores.

In the circular to their customers announcing their new departure the promoters do not disguise the fact that one of their main objects is to fight the city department store. To quote from their circular:

"We would impress strongly upon our patrons that this company is not formed for the purpose of inflating prices or restraining trade; on the other hand, it is formed expressly to enable us to compete successfully with catalogue houses.

"On account of the merger we shall be enabled to buy on the very cheapest available markets, and to save local freights, as practically all our stocks can be bought in car lots. This fact will allow us to sell goods very much cheaper than under present conditions. We would recommend any person who entertains any doubt on this point to from time to time compare our prices with those ruling in adjacent towns."

The Department Idea.

The new company—Merchants Limited—is in fact a new department store, nothing more, nothing less. Its departments are not all under one roof, but it is not impossible that that may come in the future. For the present, stocks have been consolidated and rearranged, groceries being in one store, hardware in another, and so on. To fight the mail order department of the department store in Winnipeg, another department store has been formed in Cartwright. That is the gist of the whole matter.

Against Credits.

But the department store in Cartwright is not to be conducted on exactly the same lines as a city department store. For example, while it is out to fight the credit system it is not insisting upon a strictly cash system of doing business. Credit is being given but only according to a given system. A customer who wants credit must secure a coupon book good for a stated amount, say $10 or $25. In order to get this book he must give Merchants Limited his note for the amount: he is allowed credit in no other way. When he buys goods on credit he pays for them with his coupons. Bookkeeping expenses are thus eliminated and in their advertising the new firm are making a strong feature of this point. Reduced expenses, they say, will allow a reduction in retail prices.

The Produce Question.

Evidently the new company purposes grappling with the produce question as it presents itself to every country store. This is a problem which never confronts the city department store and the country department store has to blaze a trail of its own.

Every country dealer, whether in Western Canada or Eastern Canada knows the difficulty of handling butter and eggs and other farm produce satisfactorily. Competition among rival stores has often forced dealers to pay for butter and eggs a higher price than they can get from the wholesale produce houses. Of course payment is made in goods upon which there is a profit, but the practice is suicidal nevertheless. The customer who pays cash should get the discounts, not the customer who pays in produce which costs time, trouble, and money to handle. Moreover there is seldom in the country store any efficient method of grading butter, and because he does not want to offend an otherwise good customer many a merchant pays for poor butter as high a price as he pays for the first-class article.

Merchants Limited announce that all butter is to be graded and paid for according to quality; and it may be presumed quite safely that prices for produce will not be more than the market value. A big, strong concern can grapple with a problem of this kind and solve it satisfactorily.

Probable Outcome.

What will be the outcome of this venture? What will be the attitude towards it of the farmer and the general public? These are moot questions and time will give the only satisfactory answer.

In the meantime it seems that the general public in Cartwright are disposed to regard the new move with approval. Merchants Limited are making a strong bid for local sympathy and they are appealing to local self interest in a convincing way. They state that they are prepared to compete with the catalogue houses and that they invite comparison of prices. In the course of their circular announcement they say:

"We feel that our patrons will agree with us that these departmental stores are drawing on the resources of the small towns and building up the cities. This it is evident cannot be for the weal of people residing in the country and on farms, for it is generally admitted that a good town helps materially to enhance the value of adjacent farm lands; therefore we would ask your co-operation and we will prove to you that you will be benefited in dollars and cents."

The obvious danger is that the public will view the elimination of competition in Cartwright with profound distrust. Everything will depend upon the manner in which the consolidated business is managed. This paper will follow the new venture and from time to time will publish news of its success or failure.

SEEING THE WORKS.

W. G. Kyle, Toronto representative; Stanley Wharton, representing the western districts; J. P. Murray, Ottawa; and P. G. Armour, Maritime Provinces, with Miss Vance, their demonstrator, were given a trip to Boston by the Lowney Company recently. All were through the Boston factory of the firm and were royally entertained during their stay in the Hub by Walter M. Lowney.

Lowneys have issued a splendid new cook book containing recipes of every description. Maria Willet Howard is the author.

SOLVING A DIFFICULTY.

The problem of hired help is just as difficult in the Maritime provinces as in any part of Canada. The people of Kings County and Kentville, N.S., are grappling with it through their Boards of Trade. A joint meeting was arranged and widely advertised. A paragraph of a dodger sent out reads: "Adjutant Jennings, Salvation Army Immigrant and Transportation Agent, will address the meeting and will arrange with persons requiring help, indoors or out, to secure the same from the first steamer arriving at Halifax March 14th."

This is an example of aggressive Board of Trade work.

HAD A GOOD YEAR.

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Canada Brokerage Company, Limited, was held at the Toronto offices of the company on January 30th and a most satisfactory statement of the year's business was read.

A dividend of ten per cent. was paid on preferred stock and five per cent. on the common stock, besides which the rest account was again increased by the addition of a substantial sum.

Needless to say, after such a handsome showing, the old board of directors was re-elected.

James Adams has joined the traveling staff of the Lowney Company and will in future cover the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Opening of Lent Brings the Fish Men a Rushing Business—Cold Weather a Good Ally—Big Fruit Shipment Due To-day.

This week's markets belonged to the fish trade. The opening of Lent has brought with it an extraordinary demand. The two days preceding Ash Wednesday were record-breakers, the cold weather helping things along in fine style. A good range of fish is being offered, and all lines are in good supply.

There is considerable alteration of prices in the fruit market, although none are of great importance. This week will see the arrival in Toronto of one of the largest shipments of fruit ever brought in at one time, and present indications are that it will not take long to dispose of it.

Vegetable trade is comparatively quiet.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Oranges and lemons are selling freely enough at quotations, but there is not a great demand for other lines. Apples are lower this week, $4 being the outside price asked. Pineapples and lemons are higher, as are also Almeria grapes, which are now quoted at $10.50.

VEGETABLES.—Vegetables are not moving out very rapidly, business being limited. Prices are now, as they usually are in the winter months, too high to permit much buying except for the high-class trade. Vegetables obtainable at reasonable and even low prices in the summer time become luxuries beyond the reach of the average individual when they have to be imported. Several changes are noticeable in quotations this week.

FISH.—Business is booming in fish. Orders received by fish merchants are very large and the assortment asked for shows that the Lenten trade this year is going to be large. The prices, taken as a whole, are firm. Some changes will be noticed in this week's quotations, mostly advances. Steak cod and codfish are both up ½c. Mackerel is a little easier and is selling at 10c. Fresh haddock is obtainable at 6½c. a pound. Small whitefish are now on the market; good demand is reported at 7½c. to 8c. No. 1 salt eels, live lobsters and large green cod are no longer obtainable. Oysters are selling freely at figures hereunder quoted.

FRUIT.—Orange quotations are considerably altered this week, all lines being a trifle lower, with the exception of Mexicans, which are slightly advanced. Valencia prices range from $3.25 to $4.25, but special quality stock is being offered this week at from $4.25 to $5.50. Soviento oranges are quoted at $2.50 per case of 300. A special shipment of bananas is offered at $1.10 to $1.25. Cranberries are another 50 cents less per barrel.

FISHING FOR PEARLS IN CANADA.

Many Beautiful Gems Have Been Taken From the Icy Streams of Ungava.

In the mighty streams flowing through Ungava, Canada, a profitable pearl industry is carried on among the Indians and Eskimos. Barrenness and desolation, rocky shores beaten by an icy sea, long winters and short, inclement summers are the chief characteristics of that northern land.

Signs of human life are scarce there, but at intervals may be seen rude huts of rocks erected by whale and seal hunters long since departed for more profitable fields.

In the rushing waters of the streams which empty into the sea, pearls are found hidden in the shells of the mussels, which are often so plentiful as to partially block the river. Unlike the pearls of Ceylon, they are snowy white, but nevertheless of the finest quality, although a certain percentage are irregular in shape.

Those who visited the shore of the Ungava streams often wondered why people before them had collected so many mussel shells, but it devolved upon a well read ne'er-do-well to discover that pearls existed in those shells.

He was sitting on the banks of one of the rivers when he picked up a mussel and pried it open with his pocket-knife, and was surprised to find a good sized pearl, which he afterwasd sold for a good price, and although he spent several weeks hunting for others, those he managed to find did not bring him $5 for the lot.

At the present time several hundred men are engaged in systematically hunting for the pearls. They collect the mussels and pile them in heaps, where they are left until decomposed, and then the pearls are easily extracted from the shells. Several large jewelry houses send travelers on periodical visits to buy these pearls, and, of course, the Hudson's Bay Company's traders get a fair share of the gems.

Recently two pink pearls, beautifully matched, were discovered in the same shell. They weighed about fourteen grains apiece and were sold for $140 to a New York dealer.

Pearls worth as much as $1,000 for a single stone have been found there, but such finds are exceedingly rare. However, a large number of men are making good profits searching the mussel shells, but none is making a great fortune.—N.Y. Herald.

HAMILTON PRESIDENT UPHOLDS MR. BECKETT

Hamilton, February 5th, 1907.
Editor Canadian Grocer, Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sir,—The Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association were very much surprised at the uncalled for and sarcastic criticism of a Toronto retailer on Mr. H. C. Beckett's address to the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association on "The Cost of Doing Business." I am charitable enough to believe that had the writer of same taken the trouble to get at the facts, he would have hesitated about making any reference to the intelligence of Hamilton retailers.

As president of the Hamilton association I feel it would be unfair to Mr. Beckett to let the matter go unnoticed, as Mr. Beckett evidently has done.

In the first place, it may be explained that the Hamilton association has monthly meetings to which they invite some member of the trade to give them an address, or paper, on any subject of interest that would be of profit to the members of the association. The paper in question was by special request with a suggestion that the statements be as strong as possible, with a view to creating a keen and lively discussion.

In introducing the subject, Mr. Beckett made reference to the fact that his remarks would undoubtedly be taken exception to by many present, but believed that after a full discussion, much benefit would result. In the preparation of the paper he stated that his figures were prepared from information supplied by many retailers upon whom he had called, and he also directed attention to his statement that, roughly speaking, not more than five per cent. of the retail grocers succeeded, but qualified the remark by explaining that success in business in his opinion meant accumulating a sufficient sum by fifteen or twenty years of hard work to retire and live comfortably. Unfortunately I believe the statement to be correct.

The address, in the opinion of the trade, was the best we have had, and instead of resentment, a cordial vote of thanks was tendered. That is how we treat people in Hamilton. Mr. Beckett has always been willing and anxious to do all in his power to assist in any way in advancing the interests of the trade with which he is identified, either wholesale or retail. The retail trade of Hamilton, generally, are on the most friendly terms with the wholesalers and recognize the fact that both branches of trade have their place in business, and that the rights of each should be considered.

The trouble seems to be that some retailers are never satisfied to let either the wholesale trade or their neighbors in the retail business, make a fair margin of profit. The price cutting so frequently indulged in is responsible for nearly all the evils, such as short weight, inferior goods, inferior service, and dishonest methods. There certainly is a future for the retailers by organization and a live and let live policy, and, much to the credit of some manufacturers, they insist upon the proprietary articles being sold at a standard price. This plan has two advantages. It gives the retailer an opportunity to make a small profit, and prevents any individual from cutting prices and thus, indirectly, injuring the manufacturer, for it is a common sense proposition that if a proprietary line of goods has to be sold at cost by the retailer, the manufacturer will soon notice a falling off in the trade of that line.

In conclusion I would suggest that letters to the grocer should be over the name of the writer. Come out in the open.

Yours truly,
WM. SMYE, Jr.,
Hamilton.

WM. DOBIE,
President, E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, Toronto.

Wm. Dobie is the maker of the E. W. Gillett business in Canada. Every grocer is interested in him for he is a personal equation in every grocery business. The picture of him contained in this journal of two weeks ago did not do The Canadian Grocer justice. The fault was with the photograph, not with the engraver or printer. In justice to itself and its readers The Grocer herwith presents a portrait of Mr. Dobie that gives a pretty good idea of the man whom few grocers in Canada have not done business with. Personality is often forgotten in the rush of trade and when a business becomes great its early struggles are lost sight of. The head of the E. W. Gillett Co. is an important personage in the manufacturing and trading interests of Canada, but looking at his portrait the reader of The Grocer can better appreciate the ability, courage and indomitable energy of Wm. Dobie, and the qualities required in the making of this great business,

BUSINESS WOMEN IN A MAINE TOWN

(From the Lewiston Journal.)

If Norway ever should have a mayor the chances are ten to one a woman would hold the office. The Oxford County Village of 1,500 inhabitants has more than a score of women managing progressive lines of business. The town physician is a woman. A woman is justice of the peace. A woman manages a dry goods store. Another is a photographer, a fifth is bank cashier, a sixth is an undertaker, and still a seventh is an insurance agent. Until her recent resignation Rev. Caroline E. Angell was for eighteen years pastor of the Universalist Church at Norway. Mrs. F. W. Sanborn is responsible for the appearance of the Norway Advertiser, the local weekly. This by no means completes the list of successful business women of Norway.

new warehouse which they have built on Victoria St., at the foot of Portage Ave. The offices will not be moved from the old building for a few days.

The new warehouse is a handsome large building with seven storeys and a basement. In all there will be 2½ acres of floor space or at least three times the floor space in the old building.

The world is full of wealth and possibilities, the hustlers are after both.

HERE AND THERE WITH THE TRADE

The Minton-Barber Co., Bloor street, west, Toronto, has assigned.

A. Hilker, Underwood, is offering his business for sale. He intends going west.

Moyer & Sons, Spadina Ave., Toronto, have sold out to Jas. Kerr, formerly of Wingham.

Percy Millman, of W. H. Millman & Sons, was in Ottawa last week on business for the firm.

Geo. Moffatt, of the Davidson & Hay sampleroom, Toronto, took a week off to nurse the grippe.

J. F. Brownscombe, Uxbridge, has added groceries to his branch dry goods store in New Liskeard.

Thos. Lock, of Foley, Lock & Larson, wholesale grocers, Winnipeg, was in Toronto last week.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol, Hamilton, are offering a "drive" in canned peas. Peas are great sellers this year.

W. J. Carruthers, Baltimore, has been considerably improving his store. He has one of the best businesses in the vicinity.

A. V. Bradley, Spadina Ave., Toronto, has taken his brother Joseph into partnership, and the firm name is now Bradley Bros.

Lucas, Steele, & Bristol, Hamilton, are offering some red sockeye salmon at a cut price. As soon as this lot is gone it's all off.

A traveler told The Grocer he thought seven-eighths of the grocers take stock annually. The other eighth keep the assignees going.

R. Scott & Co., Mount Forest, are holding their annual clearing sale. They are making things hum and have 23 clerks employed.

John Gibb, for years a prominent grocer of Elora has sold his grocery stock to Mr. Campbell, and opened a coal and wood office in same town.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol, Hamilton, have not yet advanced the price of teas. Their present quotations may, therefore, be said to be special.

W. T. Oak, formerly a G.T.R. conductor, has started a grocery business on Bloor street west, Toronto. He has a nice store and is doing well.

H. A. Hodgson of Hodgson Bros. & Rowson, Montreal, is in the States this week. Arthur Hodgson, of the same firm, sails for England February 16.

E. A. Dalley, of the F. F. Dalley Co., has been appointed one of Hamilton's license commissioners. As he is a 2 in 1 man he ought to make a shining success.

Babcock Bros., Oshawa, have sold their building and are looking for other premises. They got a good offer for their present property, but it necessitated their removal within a month.

Castor & Davey, Aurora and Schomberg, have dissolved partnership, and the business will be continued by T. T. Caster. Mr. Davey contemplates going west, but he will live retired for a while.

The J. E. Costin Co., Ltd., is the name of a new firm in Montreal which has taken over the wine and liquor and canned goods business formerly carried on under the name of Claudon & Co., at 749 St. Denis street. The new concern is capitalized at $75,000.

W. J. Cameron, Southampton, has decided to sell out and go to the Northwest. He has had the business four or five years and has made a good thing of it, but he made a visit to the west and caught the fever. He will either run the stock off or sell it en block.

The T. Upton Co., Ltd., are just in receipt of two carloads of Seville bitter oranges containing over four hundred half chests of as fine marmalade oranges as were ever brought to Canada. These oranges will be used exclusively in the making of Upton's orange marmalade and all orders are now being filled with new season's goods.

A. E. Gurney, manager of the Wm. Beatty Co., store Parry Sound, was waited upon at his home about Christmas time by the employes and was made the recipient of a very handsome morris chair as an indication of their appreciation and good will. Mr. Gurney is very popular with both staff and customers.

Fire, caused by defective electric wiring, did $5,000 damage to the grocery store of Peebles, Hobson & Co., King and Macnab streets, Hamilton, on Jan. 30. The blaze was very difficult to get at, and the firemen had to move hundreds of pounds of goods in order to reach it. Much damage was done by the smoke, owing to the nature of the stock, and the meat department was practically out of business for a day or so.

Pickles & Mills, Annapolis, N.S., have dissolved partnership by mutual consent. F. W. Pickles takes over the vessels and shipping interests of the firm and will carry on that branch under the firm name of the F. W. Pickles Company. A. D. Mills and C. W. Mills take the other assets and will carry on a lumbering and general business under the firm name of A. D. Mills & Sons, in which firm A. E. Mills has been admitted a partner.

BUSINESS MEN IN MUNICIPAL LIFE

No. 11

One of the foremost figures in the business and muncipal life of the city of Chatham, is Ald. Wm. Potter, who has just been re-elected for the fifth time to the muncipal council of the Maple city.

Though a native of Quebec city, Ald. Potter has been a resident of Chatham for thirty-seven years, and few men are in closer touch with its interests than he. After receiving a full public school education, he took up the machine and boiler business in Chatham. Having conducted this successfully for several years, he later entered the grocery business, and is now just rounding out his twentieth year in the trade, as the proprietor of a combined grocery and meat market, conducted under one roof, which is one of the most flourishing concerns in the Maple city.

Ald. Potter has always taken a keen interest in the city's affairs. He was a member of the fire department under the old volunteer system; and had the honor to be one of the few selected for the first paid fire department in the city. He did not join, however, till a year after the organization was founded, when he served most efficiently as foreman, on many occasions being acting chief. The insight he thus gained into the business of fire-fighting proved invaluable in after years, when, as chairman of the fire, water and light, and later of the property committee of the council, he was called on to supervise the department in which he had formerly served.

Always keenly interested in musical affairs, Mr. Potter was president and business manager of the Chatham City Band when that organization was one of the best known amateur organizations in the country. In the band he was euphonium soloist.

Ald. Potter first entered municipal life in 1891, in which year he was elected to the town council under the ward system, being re-elected for 1892. He then retired, remaining out of municipal life till 1905, when, in response to the solicitations of many friends, he consented to stand for the city council (now elected by general vote), and in the ensuing contest went in with flying colors. In 1906 he was again re-elected; and has just now been returned to the council for a fifth term.

During his tenure of municipal office, Ald. Potter has served on some of the most important committees of the council. In 1891 he was chairman of the parks and cemeteries committee; and in the subsequent year was chairman of the fire, water and light committee, becoming also chairman of the waterworks committee upon the introduction of a waterworks system into the city. On re-entering the city council in 1905, he became once more chairman of parks and cemeteries; and in the following year was chosen chairman of the public property committee, one of the largest of the civic committees, having control of the fire, electric light and police departments, as well as all the city property. He has just been re-appointed for a second term chairman of this committee.

Ald. Potter has always been a warm friend of the Canadian Grocer, being one of its earliest subscribers in Chatham. He has continued a subscriber ever since. "The Canadian Grocer will always have a warm spot in my heart," he says.

Ald. Potter was one of the first to urge the formation of a grocers' organization in the city; and is now the president of the grocers' branch of the local Retail Merchants' Association. "It behooves every merchant, no matter how busy, to spare some time in the interests of his city; for what are the city's interests are the merchant's interests," such has always been his motto.

ALD. WM. POTTER, CHATHAM.

FAST HOCKEY.

Brokers Win From Jas. Lumbers & Co. in Toronto Grocery League.

The fastest and most exciting game ever played in the Toronto Wholesale Grocers' League was pulled off on Friday night at Varsity rink, between the Brokers and Jas. Lumbers & Co., before a large crowd, well representing the wholesale grocers. Brokers won by two goals to one. The score indicates how close the game was, in fact it was anybody's game in the first half, although in less than three minutes Lumbers scored their first, and only goal, from a mix-up in front of the nets. This was the only goal scored in the first half, giving Lumbers a lead at half time. The checking was so close that neither team could play much combination. In the second half the teams started to rought it a bit, and had it not been for the strictness of Referee Gordon Humphrey, several of the wholesale houses might have been short handed the next morning. After five minutes play in the second half Percy Millman made a zig-zag rush down with the puck and passed to Billie May, who shot and scored the Brokers' first goal. This tied the score and caused great excitement. Shortly after the puck was faced A. Millman and Gee wanted to show their strength and were sent to the boards for two minutes. Hard play continued for ten minutes, then Morrow came down with the puck, passing to Ade Millman, who passed Lumbers' heavy defence, then passing to Billie May, who shoved the rubber into the nets for another goal; score, Brokers 2, Lumbers 1. This finished the scoring. Both H. Ferguson and Wess Lumbers played a wonderful game in goal.

If the Brokers win their next two games they will again carry off the Tillson Trophy.

ORGANIZE FOR PROTECTION.

Dealers of Redvers, Sask., United to Fight Credit—Money Scarce.

The dealers in Redvers, Sask., have recently organized a Trades' Protection Association in order to deal with the evils attending the long credit system. The car shortage has caused a scarcity of ready cash and outstanding accounts have become so large that the Redvers merchants have decided the time has come for drastic measures. Under the circumstances the strictly cash method of doing business is not considered practicable, but some curtailment of credit is considered absolutely necessary. At a formal meeting of the Redvers dealers the following resolution was passed:

"That we form the Redvers Mutual Protective Association.

"That the following be elected officers pro tem: President, John Carter; secretary-treasurer, R. Douglas; executive committee, T. King, John Dodds and Richard Curle.

"That the object of this association shall be to overcome to some degree the evils of the credit system and protect ourselves against the abuse of it.

"That each member doing credit business shall furnish monthly to the secretary-treasurer a list of customers' names which shall also show the indebtedness of each party named.

"That the secretary is to record in his books, to which all members shall have access at any time, the total indebtedness of members debtors, which has been incurred with any or all of the members.

"That a special committee be appointed to draft a circular which shall define the amount due by each individual who has been placed on the book of the association, and who shall receive by mail a copy of said circular.

"That we communicate with merchants doing business in other surrounding districts with the view to their cooperation and also to forward the extension of the association to other towns and places in Saskatchewan."

"Let Every Tub Stand On Its Own Bottom"

The great trouble, however, is that a lot of Tubs are so made that they can't stand long enough to warrant their expense. The wood is not properly kiln-dried, the hoops loosely rivetted and the finishing so poorly done that they warp, hoops drop off and they go to pieces.

TO MAINTAIN A STANDARD

RISING SUN AND SUN PASTE

STOVE POLISH STOVE POLISH

It costs us more every year to make RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish up to "Morse Brothers Standard." Our increasing sales enable us to maintain the standard without raising the price. We are constantly improving our facilities for the manufacture of our goods on a larger and larger scale and we never allow anything but the best materials to be used in our processes. That is why our goods please the trade and consumer. RISING SUN and SUN PASTE are right every time you sell them.

You often get complaints from your customers of poor results in their baking---"flour no good" or something of the kind. These complaints are annoying and don't make for good trade. Stop them! It's easy.

Did you ever suggest the use of

DWIGHT'S BAKING SODA

"Cow Brand" Baking Soda

instead of some baking powder of questionable quality?

Try it, and your complaints will stop.

"Cow Brand" Baking Soda is absolutely pure.

Sold in packages only, by every jobber in Canada is the highest quality in chutneys, gingers, preserves, pickles, soup tablets, vinegars, etc.—in fact any of the 101 lines we put up. So well known is the general superiority of our products that they are now recognized by the trade and public alike, as THE STANDARDS from which the quality of other brands is judged.

C & B QUALITY

Is it not as well for your store to be known as keeping only one class of goods—THE BEST?

The best goods bring the best trade—that of people with money, who can afford to pay for good goods, and who place large orders.

Four Reasons why INVICTUS FIBRE is the BEST FIBRE PAPER on the Market

1. Invictus Fibre is made from personally selected pulp wood cut on our own limits.
2. This special pulp wood is again rigidly culled on arrival at our mills
3. The pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made is manufactured inour own pulp mill and transferred at once to the paper mill, avoiding all drawbacks of transportation.
4. Invictus Fibre will increase in strength and not grow hard and brittle as does fibre made from sulphite pulp. This is a quality of the peculiar and selected pulp from which Invictus Fibre is made.

A trial order will convince you that we are correct. See that each package bears the words "Invictus Fibre." Every ream contains 480 sheets demands modern methods. The ALLISON COUPON BOOK is a strictly modern Convenience and Safeguard against mistakes and consequent loss of money. It is better than any pass-book, punch or check system ever invented, and it's absolute accuracy makes it the CHEAPEST SYSTEM on this big earth—excepting, of course, the cash system. See here:

Modern Merchandising

IF A MAN WANTS CREDIT

for $10, give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book, charge him with $10, and there you are. No trouble at all. If he buys a plug of tobacco for ten cents, just tear off a ten-cent coupon—that's all. And so on for all his purchases up to limit of the book. NO PASS BOOK. NO WRITING. NO TIME LOST. NO KICKING. There are other Coupon Books, of course, but why not have the best? Let us send you a free sample.

Aylmer and Simcoe Jams, Jellies and Marmalades are the most popular goods on the market, because they are the BEST.

The sales of these Jams in 1906 were nearly twice as great as in 1905, and four times as great as in 1904. QUALITY DID IT.

Ask your wholesaler for Aylmer Pure Fruit Preserves. They are equal to the best imported.

CATSUPS

Aylmer and Delhi Catsups have captured the market solely because of their superior quality, and attractive appearance.

Look at this record.—Sales of 1906 were nearly two and one-half times as great as in 1905, and over four times as great as in 1904.

Credit and Money

Nine-tenths of the grocers who sell Windsor Salt (pure, white, crystaline, won't cake) have money in the bank. They discount their bills. Their credit is "A, Number One." Happy grocers they!

Windsor Salt plays its own little part in bringing about this contented state of things. It never disappoints the grocers' customer who buys it. It serves to hold confidence in the quality of a grocer's general stock. It establishes permanent family trade. It helps a grocer's credit—it brings him money. It is the "Salt that's all Salt."

Has it ever occurred to you that

RED ROSE TEA

HAS GOT TO BE GOOD ALL THE TIME?

The very fact of it having gained such a high reputation has a tendency to make those who use it more harsh in their criticism if it ever fails to come fully up to their expectations.

No man requires to watch his everyday actions so closely as the man who has achieved a high reputation for honor and ability. A mistake, at once, makes him a target for public criticism. It is just so with Red Rose Tea. Its high standard of quality must be maintained every day. Any mistake would be keenly criticised by those who have learned to have confidence in it.

Therefore I am bound not only to keep the quality higher than other teas, but to keep it absolutely uniform.

Red Rose Tea will help increase your tea business.

Western Retailers Cut Loose from East

At Annual Meeting in Winnipeg Decide to Sever Affiliation Entered Into a Year Ago—General Merchants Separate Also From the Hardwaremen—Large Increase in Membership During the Year, But Many Are Behind With Subscriptions—Organizer Appointed for the Country—Better System of Organization Proposed—W. G. McLaren, Souris, the New President.

(By Canadian Grocer's Special Correspondent.)

An enthusiastic convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada was held in Winnipeg in the association rooms on Thursday, February 14th. Owing to the snow blockades on the railways and the uncertainties and dangers of travel by rail this Winter the gathering was not quite so large as it otherwise would have been. Under the circumstances, however, there was a surprisingly good attendance, and the new president and his executive have every encouragement to prosecute the work of the association vigorously during the coming year.

Unfortunately, too much of the time of the association was taken up with a discussion of the constitution and the relations of the association with the Dominion Association, of which Mr. Trowern of Toronto is secretary. It seems unfortunate that associations and debating societies and clubs must have constitutions, for the constitutions are almost invariably the subject of a great deal of fruitless discussion. However that may be it is undoubtedly unfortunate that the Western Association ever entered into relations with the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, of which Mr. Trowern of Toronto is secretary. The only result obtained was to create a hopeless confusion of ideas as to the standing of the various bodies thereby affected, and at the meeting last week the Gordian knot was cut and the Western Association is once again as free and independent as when it was first organized.

Organizer for the Country.

The report of the secretary showed a gratifying growth of the association in the city of Winnipeg, but not so much progress in the country as might be desired. The work is too big for any one man to do and accordingly it was decided to engage Mr. Wilfrid Ledoux, of Arnaud, Man., as an assistant organizer to prosecute the work in the country districts and assist in the organization of local country sections. The choice is a wise one for Mr. Ledoux has always displayed an enthusiastic interest in association work, and he is moreover an effective speaker and a man of good organizing ability. Having been a retailer himself he can talk from experience to brother merchants in the west and it may confidently be expected that with the assistance of Mr. Ledoux, Secretary Coulson will be able to make great progress in the country districts during the next few months.

The Register.

An examination of the register shows the following names of those in attendance :

J. D. Baine, Boissevain, Man.; J. J. Kehler, Gretna, Man.; J. A. Decosse, Somerset, Man.; R. H. McLeod, Beaver, Man.; R. W. Morrison, The Commercial, Winnipeg ; T. Hill, Russell, Man.; N. Holmes, Macgregor, Man.; G. W. Stockton, Carlyle, Sask.; H. May, Stonewall, Man.; J. S. Ruddell, Frobisher, Sask.; F. R. Munro, The Canadian Grocer, Winnipeg ; A. Friesen, Altona, Man.; J. P. Langill, Giroux, Man.; A. K. Stewart, Rosenfeld, Man.; W. G. McLaren, Souris, Man.; W. A. Paynter, Tantallon, Sask.; J. F. Hunter, Boissevain, Man.; H. Brooks, Indian Head, Sask.; M. Krolick, Grayson, Sask.; E. J. Code, Carievale, Sask.; J. Hiebert, Altona, Man.; H. Halldorson, Sleipner, Sask.; J. V. Smith, Neepawa, Man.; W. Ledoux, Arnaud, Man.

In calling the meeting to order, President J. F. Hunter attributed the small attendance to the tie-up on the railways. There was no doubt that the interest in the country was much greater than one might think from the numbers present.

W. G MacLAREN, SOURIS
President.

President's Address.

After the minutes of the last two meetings had been read by Secretary Coulson and approved by the meeting, Mr. Hunter delivered his annual address. After extending a welcome to the members and dealers present, he spoke in part as follows :

"It is just two years since a number of general merchants met in the trades and labor hall in this city and organized the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada. From a meeting of about twenty merchants held in August 1904 to talk over the desirability of organizing and to take steps to organize we have grown and spread out until our membership extends over the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. In these two years 900 merchants, in the provinces mentioned, have joined our association, which I take as sufficient evidence of the feeling of necessity for some such organization and of the realization of grievances to adjust and obstacles to overcome.

"I am sorry to state that the expectations of many of those who joined the association have not been realized and that because of this or some other cause, be it neglect or what not, many have failed to remit their annual dues, thereby retarding the work of the association to a very large extent. You must all realize that it takes a lot of time for an organizer to go over the territory indicated and secure membership and organize and it costs a very considerable amount of money to carry on this work, and when it is necessary that the secretary and organizer should revisit points organized or partially organized, it retards the work and largely increases the expenses. It seems to me that the members should take it upon themselves and feel it their duty to further their own and the association's interests sufficiently to go on and secure membership and complete organization where a start has been made and thereby save the association the time and money required to revisit their town, in order that it may be used to further the work at other points.

Expected Too Much.

"Some have objected to paying their annual dues on the ground that the association has not been of any benefit to them, some few on other grounds. As I stated before I am sorry the expectations of some have not been realized. In part this is, I think, largely the fault of our membership. In the first place because of the lack of sufficient funds to prosecute the work and revisit points as desired, and in the second place because they expected altogether too much in the way of direct, tangible and immediate results, perhaps not more than they were led to expect. It appears to me two years is a very short trial to give an organization, and still many became disappointed because their expectations were not realized during our first year of existence as an association.

"Unless the annual fee, which is a very small one, is paid it is impossible to carry on the work ; not only is it necessary that it be paid, but it is equally important that it be paid at the commencement of each financial year, which is February, to provide a fund with which to carry on the work. We have made errors, the principal of which I think, is that we have endeavored to accomplish too much and have spread our membership over too much territory so that it has been impossible to thoroughly do the work at all.

Subsidiary Organization.

"The territory is so large that it is difficult, I think impossible, to satisfactorily and successfully carry it on from one centre, I would suggest that we remodel our association somewhat on fraternal association lines. That is to say that we have a central, or grand set of officers and executives who shall have general supervision of the affairs of the association as a whole, that we have subsidiary or district associations, each conducting its own work under its own officers and each contributing a certain per capita tax to the central or grand executive. With these districts having control of their own funds I think more successful and thorough work would be accomplished in a much shorter time and at much less expense than from one central point.

J. D. BAINE, BOISSEVAIN

"That there is need for such an association as we have formed I think is admitted by ninety per cent. of the retail merchants. That there are a very great number of difficulties and grievances to be overcome that can only be successfully grappled with by united action I think is equally evident. Why, then, should some of our merchants stand back and say, 'Oh yes, that is all so, but you have not succeeded in grappling with them, and as you have not helped me, because of this I will not join you, or I will not continue my membership.' Should you not rather stay with the association and endeavor to get your neighbor to join and take an active interest and part in our affairs and help to bring about the improvements you would like to see?

Mutual Fire Insurance.

"A year ago we brought up the matter of the formation ol a mutual fire insurance company. This was referred to the Dominion Board, who stated they were working on it and wished us to co-operate with them. Since that time we have not been able to learn of anything they have done. In view of the fact that the Millers' Mutual, the Farmers' Mutual, the Grain Dealers' and Elevator Mutual and other companies of a similar kind have reduced the costs of insurance by 40 to 50 per cent. I think it our duty to take active steps to organize a mutual fire insurance company.

What have we accomplished? Not as much as we desired and still I think you will agree we have accomplished considerable. We have reached and drawn into the association members at a large expenditure of money, time and energy on the part of those who have taken an active part in the affairs of the association.

We have taken up the matter of an amendment to the County Courts Act so that small accounts can be collected with less expense and delay than formerly, and have been promised relief.

"We have been endeavoring to have an amendment to the Criminal Code passed which will permit us to agree among ourselves on a reasonable profits on goods handled, and while this is a difficult thing to obtain, we have good hopes of accomplishing it and it is only fair that we should be permitted to fix reasonable remuneration for our labor, as our labor organizations, lawyers, doctors, insurance companies, banks, etc., etc., do.

Equitable Assessment.

"We have succeeded in obtaining an amendment to the Assessment Act in Manitoba whereby instead of a merchant's stock being assessed at a valuation, and lawyers, doctors, bankers, telephone companies, and many others who carry no stock but draw as much benefit from municipal and government institutions as we do, getting off without contributing their share, the towns and villages can now assess on a basis of rental values, thereby putting all those mentioned on an equally contributing basis. And while the amendment does not go as far as it should it is a step in advance.

"A year ago a certain bill was up before the Manitoba Legislature in regard to the sale of merchants' stocks which our association considered unfair to the retail trade and which, on account of the vigorous protests of our association, was withdrawn.

"We have established a collection system and department by which many of our members have collected accounts to the amount of many times their annual dues which they had been unable to collect and considered no good. We need a credit bureau.

"We have established a Freight Claims Department to take charge of and collect freight shortage, damage and overcharge claims without the exasperating delays and correspondence formerly necessary in many cases.

"These are a few of the things accomplished and with the retail merchants as a body actively and consistently backing up the association morally and financially, I see no reason why we should not accomplish very much for our mutual benefit. I desire to emphasize the need of active and consistent moral and financial support.

"We are indebted to many of the wholesale houses for their sympathy and willingness to assist us in any way they could.

"You will remember that a year ago we heard a great deal about the contract plan of selling goods. That plan has been declared illegal and we are endeavoring to have the law amended to permit of it.

"We are also endeavoring to remedy the grievance in connection with the inspection of weights and measures. There is no reason why we should be forced to pay a fee to the Government every time our weights and measures are inspected."

Secretary's Report.

The secretary then presented his report for the year ending Feb. 1st, 1907, and in substance he spoke as follows:

"At the first of February, 1906, our membership was 516; now we have nearly 900, showing an increase of nearly 400 during the year just ended. This increase has been practically secured in the city of Winnipeg where one year ago we did not have a single member, while to-day we have grocers, butchers, druggists, furniture and music dealers sections, all in a flourishing condition, and meetings at the association rooms twice each month.

"It will not be necessary for me to state what each of these sections have accomplished to their own benefit. One item in particular which we were successful in securing, and which, of course only affects the city, is having the city remove commercial garbage, which is alone a saving of upwards of $50 per year. I make mention of this to prove to you the strength and power of your association in Winnipeg, and it substantiates my remarks at a previous meeting that the success of the association as a whole makes it necessary to have a good strong organization at its headquarters, and I am also pleased to say that no member of the association in the city would be without it now.

"In regard to work outside the city, I may say that it has been considerably retarded owing to lack of funds, for which reason we could not keep an organizer continually on the road. I may say in this connection that it takes up a good part of my time attending to the city section, looking after matters of legislation for the association as a whole, and attending to the office work."

W. A. COULSON, WINNIPEG.
Secretary.

"Among the members in the Province, a large number have taken advantage of the benefits of our reporting and collecting department, and I regret to say that some of the most heavy users of this medium are among those who have not paid their dues. Apart from this there as several benefits which every merchant has received, viz., the defeating of the C.O.D. Post Parcel Bill, the particulars of which you have heard about; our committee on the amendment of the criminal code have reported that they are morally certain that our amendment, as suggested at our last convention, will become law, and this will give the retail merchants throughout the Dominion the same rights and privileges as enjoyed by the working class. Before the bill comes up for its final reading you will be written to asking you to use your influence to induce your local parliamentary representative to help it through. Then again in the matter of the scale inspection tax, the association has given that considerable attention. We have one case prepared and ready to lay before the Minister of Inland Revenue according to appointment to endeavor to have the fees removed as at present charged for inspecting scales. Still another by-law which will come before the Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta Governments at the next sesion, similar to that which was passed in Ontario through association efforts there at the last session of the legislature of that Province, is the act respecting the issue of licenses governing pedlars, hawkers, and transient traders, the principle feature of this act calls for licenses in citizen towns not to exceed $250, and in other municipalities $100, the penalty for infraction thereof a sum not exceeding $50 for each offence exclusive of costs. Another bill which is a Dominion Governmet matter and will cover all Canada is one respecting and co-operative societies, a copy of which is on the table for your inspection.

J. N. LINDSAY, WINNIPEG
Member of Executive.

"I have only enumerated a small part of what the association has on hand and are working on for the benefit of the retail merchants.

Financial Report.

Mr. Coulson, continuing, gave a statement of the financial affairs of the association. The liabilities amounted to $985.75, and the assets total $1,-992.63, showing a surplus of $1,006.88 as follows:

Cash Account.

Correspondence Read.

After the secretary's report had been received, briefly discussed, and adopted, correspondence was read with a number of the Winnipeg wholesale houses relating to various matters. It was encouraging to note from this correspondence the active assistance which the Winnipeg wholesale houses are giving the association in discouraging reckless price-cutting by a few country merchants.

Bettering Transportation.

At the afternoon session G. E. Carpenter, secretary of the Winnipeg Jobbers' and Freight Association was in attendance and on the invitation of the convention he outlined brifly the aims and objects of his association. The betterment of transportation conditions was the object in view and the association were therefore working in conjunction with the Board of Trade. in Winnipeg and the city council in gathering data of actual cases of loss in Western Canada due to the delay in the delivery of freight and the shipment of grain. They were co-operating with all the Boards of Trade in Western Canada and would like the co-operation and assistance of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada.

W. C. Paynter (Tantallon) said that he was in hearty accord with the programme and policy outlined by Mr. Carpenter. The losses from the delay in wheat shipments alone were, in his opinion, more than enough to pay all the store bills in the country.

J. Hiebert (Altona) referred to the losses from delays in the payment of claims, but thought that the delay in freight delivery was a more serious matter.

On motion of Messrs. Paynter and Hiebert a strong resolution was passed endorsing the action of the Jobbers' Association, assuring them of the co-operation of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada and thanking Mr. Carpenter for his attendance.

Association's Work in the Country.

After the retirement of Mr. Carpenter a general discussion followed as to the state of the association work in the country. It was felt that the association work in the country required more attention, but it was recognized that Mr. Coulson had too much to do. The work in the city and the general supervision of the affairs of the association demanded all of Mr. Coulson's time. Accordingly his suggestion that W. Ledoux, of Arnaud, Man., be engaged as assistant organizer was favorably received.

Dominion Association.

Q. D. Baine(Boissevain) urged a reconsideration of the relations of the association with the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, whose headquarters are in Toronto, and whose secretary is Mr. Trowern. He stated that the affiliation agreed upon a year ago had brought no results and had merely hampered the association in its work.

Secretary Coulson reported that at a meeting of the Western Board held that morning it had been decided to break off all connection with Mr. Trowern's association and the following report of the meeting had been handed out for publication:

R. F. MOORE, CARTWRIGHT
Member of Executive.

"A meeting of the Western Board of the association was held in the association rooms Thursday morning, Feb. 14th, at 9 o'clock.

"Alter considerable discussion of our connection with the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada (headquarters, Toronto, E. M. Trowern, secretary) it was moved by Mr. Coulson, and seconded by Mr. McRobie, that we sever our connection with the above body and that the secretary be instructed to advise the secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada (E. M. Trowern, Toronto) to this effect. Carried.

"G. K. Smith, Moose Jaw, occupied the chair in the absence of W. G. McLaren, who had written that he was unable to attend owing to sickness in his family.

"It was felt by the members present that our connection with the association in the East had hampered us considerably in handling western trade evils and the feeling was general that we should be willing to work in conjunction with the eastern association on any matters of legislation pertaining to the trade as a whole.

Moved by Mr. McRobie and seconded by Mr. Coulson, that this Western Board be dissolved. Carried.

Part From Hardware Men.

This report of the Western Board was unanimously adopted and the meeting then turned to the consideration of the relations existing between the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada and the Western Retail Hardware Association It was felt that while there are many objects which the two associations have in common, yet their interests conflict in some important points and it would therefore be advisable for all connection between the two to be at an end. On motion of J. D. Baine and J. Hiebert, the affiliation between the two associations was declared to be at an end and the dissolution of the Western Board was approved of.

Mutual Insurance.

That hardy annual, the Mutual Insurance scheme, came up for discussion again. J. Miebert, (Altona) outlined at length and in very interesting fashion, the system of mutual insurance in force among the Mennonites, of which church he is a member. A number of other members took part in the discussion and finally a committee was appointed to investigate and report at the July meeting. This committee consists of W. C. Paynter (Tantallion), J. Hiebert (Altona), R. F. Moore (Cartwright), and W. A. Coulson (Winnipeg.)

Election of Officers.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—W. G. McLaren, Souris, Man.

First vice-president—J. D. Baine, Boissevain, Man.

Second vice-presedent—W. C. Paynter, Tantallion, Sask.

Secretary—W. A. Coulson, Winnipeg.

Treasurer—J. F. Hunter, Boissevain, Man.

Executive—G. W. Stockton, Carlyle, Sask.; R. F. Moore, Cartwright, Man.; H. A. Mannering, Birtle, Man.; T. T. Pearson, Carman, Man.; F. W. Clingan, Virden, Man.; E. J. Code, Carrevale, Sask; E. B. Nixon, Winnipeg, Man.; C. L. Charrest, Winnipeg, Man.; J. N. Lindsay, Winnipeg, Man.; C. W. Campbell, Winnipeg, Man.

The convention then adjourned to meet next July at the call of the president.

FOODSTUFF INTERESTS IN NEW BRUNSWICK

(Special correspondence of The Canadian Grocer.)

St. John, N.B., Feb. 16, 1907.

Business continues rather quiet, but that is to be expected at this time of year. Flour advanced slightly this week; oatmeal is firmer; fish of all kinds are reported scarce; pork shows signs of advancing, and sugar holds firm. New molasses is commencing to arrive and stocks of old molasses are fairly heavy.

FISH—In fish there is a rather active market, frozen fish of all kinds being scarce and high. Frozen herring, which are generally the heaviest selling line, have been a short supply all winter. The catch in the Bay of Fundy has been almost a failure.

MOLASSES—The dealers are already getting some small shipments of new crop Barbadoes. Stocks of old goods are fairly heavy, both in Porto Rico and Barbadoes.

PORK—The value of all hog products, pork, smoked meats and lard, continue firmer, and indications are that prices will be continually marked up as the season advances.

SUGAR—All grades are slightly firmer, though there is no present indication of any change.

FLOUR—The tendency is firmer prices. Ontario grades advanced 10 cents a barrel early in the week. Oatmeal is decidedly firmer. Mill feed is very scarce and high in price.

EGGS AND BUTTER—Eggs continue scarce, though there has been a slight decline from last reports. The scarcity will probably continue during the Lenten season. Butter remains firm. Creamery, in prints, holds at about the same figure as last reported, while tubs show a slight decline. There seems little likelihood of much change for a few weeks to come.

In the death of Thomas A. Rankine, which occurred very suddenly on Friday afternoon about one o'clock, St. John loses one of her most prominent sons. Palpitation of the heart was the cause of death. For some time Mr. Rankine had been under treatment for heart trouble, but was at his place of business as usual on Thursday. Friday morning he took a weak spell, and about noon he was again stricken and passed away shortly after.

Mr. Rankine's death came as a severe shock not only to his family, but to the community in general, who mourn the loss of so venerated a citizen. He was the senior member of the firm of T. Rankine & Sons, who conduct one of the largest baking establishments in the Maritime Provinces, and was born in this city August 1, 1825, and was therefore in his eighty-second year.

Mr. Rankine's father came to Canada from Kincardine, Scotland, in 1822, and after two years as a journeyman baker began business for himself. The plant was twice destroyed by fire, first in 1844 and again in the great conflagration of 1877. Both times it rose bigger and better than before. In 1900 a four-storey brick building, 70 by 30 feet, was erected. Deceased was admitted to partnership with his father and brother in 1871.

The children surviving are: Henry C., Walter, Hester, wife of Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance,; Oscar, Frank, Allan, Zillah and William C., of Toronto.

Mr. Rankine was a member of St. Andrew's Society, and formerly president of the Mechanic's Institute. He was also connected with the Protestant Orphans' Home, and the St. John Horticultural society.

Mr. Rankine was never very active in civic or other politics, although he was once prevailed to be a candidate for the Legislature. His ticket, however, was not successful. He was content to be the head of an important industrial concern, and a good citizen, interested in all that made for the welfare of the city. In politics he was a Liberal, and in religion a Presbyterian.

The winterport steamship business continues to boom. Up to the present time sixty-seven steamships, with a net tonnage of 262,827 tons, have arrived, against fifty-nine steamers last year, with a net tonnage of 199,279 tons.

The steamer Alenda, of the Pickford & Black line, which sailed from Halifax on Thursday, for Bermuda, took a party of delegates of the Canadian Boards of Trade as passengers. H. B. Schofield, represents the St. John board; A. E. Jones, Halifax, and Mr. Allen, Toronto. They will visit the Boards of Trade and business men of several West India islands. Mr. Schofield was accompanied by Mrs. Schofield and Miss Alice Schofield.

A delegation of fourteen members from the St. John common council and Board of Trade left for Ottawa to-day to interview the Dominion Government regarding harbor dredging, the question of nationalizing the port, and other matters of interest to St. John. Among the delegates were: Alderman J. W. Vanwart, grocer and meat dealer; Alderman T. H. Bullock, manager of the Imperial Oil Co., Ltd.; John Sealy, fish merchant, and T. H. Estabrooks, tea merchant. Other members were: Mayor Sears, Aldermen Rowan, Pickett, Lantalum and Baxter Messrs. McRobbie, president of the Board of Trade; W. H. Thorne, R. O'Brien, A. O. Skinner and W. E. Foster.

John A. Chesley, of this city, who has been appointed Canada's commercial agent for South Africa, left Wednesday for Ottawa, where he is receiving instructions from the Department of Trade and Commerce. Mr. Chesley will succeed Mr. Kittson, who has resigned. W. T. R. Preston is temporarily filling the position on his way to China and Japan. Mr. Chesley represented St. John city in the Dominion House in the Conservative interest between 1891 and 1896, when he was defeated by Mr. Ellis. Shortly after he left the Con-

WINDOW TRIM IN THE ROCKIES

Third Prize Winner in Canadian Grocer's Christmas Competition—A Good Thing From the Backbone of the Continent.

The accompanying illustration shows the window that was awarded third prize in the Canadian Grocer's Christmas window competition. Like the first prize winner, it is a British Columbia window and is that of Robert M. Hood, of Nelson. The display was designed and carried out by D. C. Wilson, of Hood & Co.'s staff. Without at all challenging the finding of the judges we believe that had the photographer been more successful the awards might have been differently arranged. Certainly Mr. Wilson has attained results of distinctive merit in window dressing and it is interesting to know that the window executed a markedly appreciative effect upon the firm's Christmas trade. The cherry reflection in the right pain of glass is that of the mountains. That is suggestive of Nelson's situation and acme advantages.

The following description of the window is interesting:

The base of the window was covered with purple crepe paper liberally sprinkled with diamond dust, the latter showing up well against the purple.

Round the inside casing of the entire window was an evergreen trimming covering all visible woodwork and giving the window a seasonable frame.

Front row—Peak, Frean's biscuits in long, narrow fancy ½lb. boxes placed in zigzag form, the spaces in front being filled in with a complete assortment of nuts.

Second row—Open 1lb. box of Dehesa cluster raisins alternately with open ½lb. boxes of mixed chocolates, the centre of each half row showing fancy boxes of chocolates.

Third row—Bulk chocolates in 5lb. boxes at either end, next a display of peels and between two long hand-painted Japanese wickerwork boxes of chocolates were displayed two handsome bronze vases, the bowl loaded with Malaga grapes, cluster raisins and mixed nuts, the vase holding chrysanthemums in proper table style.

Behind the vases were pyramids of oranges, a pyramid of Heinz's apple butter and also boxes of natural pulled figs and piles of Viennia figs in 1lb. baskets.

Fourth row—Pyramids of canned fruits with 10lb. and 20lb. boxes of Smyrna figs set in between and forming part of the background. The tops of the fig boxes were set off with miniature pots of holly, 2 pyramids topped with acacia palms.

Centre—Built in circular style, in front fancy chocolates, Tonee figs in bottles, behind a circle of package raisins, with pots of holly on top, the inner circle filled with Valencias, a fancy bottle of sauce set on top of pyramid. Open 5lb. boxes of 9 crown clusters, hand-painted boxes of chocolates, open boxes of Fard dates, boxes of crackers; these interspersed by bottles of champagne cider completed the outer circle.

Behind and forming part of the background a mirror with Xmas greeting The wall on the right hand was covered by a tall pyramid of tomatoes, a stuffed owl sitting on top, around and above it a dressing of evergreens. All the evergreens were sprinkled with diamond dust.

From the chandeliers was suspended a dove grasping trails of art, flowers which were carried to the four corners and drooped to the bottom, to the chandeliers and behind to the mirror encircling frame of same, sprays of finest ferns drooped over mirror, Xmas bells hung from centres of chandeliers.

All the figs and dates displayed were encased with decorations, no bare box showing; art trails fell from the tops of the pyramids.

The window was not overcrowded. Every article in it was seen to advantage and during the Xmas business it proved its attractiveness by being a great trade winner.

Prices on all the goods were advertised daily. Owing to the reflections of the mountains on the opposite side it was almost impossible to get a good photo of the window unless at considerable expense.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION AMONG CLERKS.

Nervous prostration comes from letting the work chase you. When you chase the work, you eat, sleep and laugh, and the man who can do these three things is immune from everything from jiggers to paresis.

W. H. Barrow, of Boyd, Barrow & Co., Glasgow, Scotland, was re-elected president of the Glasgow Wholesale Fruit Trade Association at the annual meeting, Feb. 4th.

A. Irwin, formerly a traveler for Salada tea, and later representative of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., in New York, has purchased the grocery business of Cook Bros., Bathurst street, Toronto. Mr. Irwin had to give over his strenuous work in the States on account of ill health.

Canners of America in Convention

Great Gathering at Buffalo of Allied Canning Interests—National Association Formed to Care for Coast to Coast Matters—Splendid Exhibition of Machinery—Lavish Entertainm ent—Dr. Wiley and other Food Experts Deliver Addresses — Canadians There.

The time-worn song of "Put Me off at Buffalo" had a resurrection last week. Something like two thousand five hundred delegates from all parts of the United States and a goodly portion of Canada, were put off at Buffalo to attend the canners' annual convention held February 11th to 16th. Men mighty in the great canning industries of the United States were present—from the shores of Chesapeake Bay and the oyster city of Baltimore, from the sunny valleys of California, the rock-bound coast of Maine, and the foggy banks of Cape Cod, from the fertile valleys of Ohio and Illinois, the blue grass region of Kentucky, the beautiful garden section of northern New York, and Ohio, from the Wolverine state, from the Badger land, from the home of the Hoosier, from Denver, San Francisco, the far-off slopes of the Rockies, from the banks of the rushing Columbia and Fraser they came. There came also from Canada, "the land of the 20th century," a host of enterprising, keen business men on knowledge bent. From St. Eustache, St. Dorothee and Montreal in the east, from lonely Prince Edward county, fertile central Ontario, and the great fruit garden of the Niagara peninsula to the confines of Georgian Bay and the St. Clair river. The Canadian Grocer was also put off at Buffalo, and, representing the canning industry of Canada, was accorded a welcome reception and many inquiries were made for it by exhibitors. Canada was a subject many delegates wanted information on, and the thoughts of many of the keen United States manufacturers of canning machinery are being turned towards the Canadian field. When it is considered that nearly 100 delegates from Canada were present, the proportion speaks well for the interest shown by Canadian canners.

The convention was the largest in the history of the canned goods trade. Four great associations were represented, the Atlantic States Packers, the Western Canned Goods Packers, the Machinery and Supplies Association, and the National Canned Goods and Dried Fruit Brokers' Association, the respective presidents being, Geo. G. Bailey, Atlantic States Packers Association; L. A. Sears, Western Packers' Canned Goods Association; C. A. Suydam, Machinery and Supplies Association; Walter A. Frost, National Canned Goods, and Dried Fruit Brokers' Association. The attendance of delegates exceeded that of any previous convention, some 2,700 being present, according to the statement of Treasurer Phinney, of the local reception committee.

The allied associations met separately and got together regularly in general convention. The executive of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association was on hand to take up with the canners and brokers the question of contract and guarantee. They also sent to Washington by telegram a resolution calling for a sufficient appropriation by Congress for the efficient enforcement of the pure food law. The resolution stated they represented an invested capital of two hundred millions and yearly business of a billion dollars.

After two days' conference an agreement was entered into by representatives of wholesalers, brokers and canners, and approved in convention, to adopt the form of contract suggested in the Government's pure food bulletin and the agreement provides for both packers' and buyers' labels.

Two outstanding features characterize this great convention of the canning interests of America, the formation of a national organization, and the discussions arising out of the new national pure food law of the United States.

NATIONAL ORGANIZATION AND ITS OBJECTS.

The president of each of the allied associations, in his opening address, advocated a national organization, and on the third day of the convention the National Canners' Association was launched, with these officers:

DR. H. W. RILEY
Leader of Uncle Sam's Pure Food Experts.

President, George G. Bailey, of Rome, N.Y.

Vice-President, C. S. Crary, of Illinois.

Secretary and Treasurer, F. E. Gorrell, of Maryland.

Executive Committee, the above and W. R. Roach, of Michigan; J. S. Hughes, of Minnesota, and R. I. Bentley, of California.

The new association is not intended to displace the other organizations, most of which have interests peculiarly their own, but to have a definite organization of national scope and authority, to handle national questions of the cannery trade. Directly it will absorb the Atlantic States and Western packers' associations as members, but it is thought that most of the other food organizations allied will contribute many members.

The constitution states: "The objects of this association shall be to protect the manufacturer of hermetically sealed fruits and vegetables against unlawful and unjust exactions to reform abuses; and to aid and assist in promoting amongst themselves that good-fellowship and friendly intercourse so essential to the successful prosecution of business."

Only persons or firms engaged in the manufacture of canned fruits and vegetables are eligible for membership, and present members of the other existing organizations are automatically members of the new and exempt from dues. Members not in the existing organizations must pay dues of $10 annually. Provision is made for temporary "convention members." Each firm represented may have several members, but only one vote.

U. S. PURE FOOD LAW AND ITS INTERPRETER.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, of Washington, who might be termed official interpreter of the pure food law, in the course of an address, came out flat-footed against preservatives as unnecessary. Dr. Wiley is head of the Governmental forces charged with the enforcement of the national pure food law, and the talk he gave marked the high-water mark of interest and effectiveness of the whole convention. For almost two hours Dr. Wiley discussed the pure food law in all its phases with directness and conviction. At the end the convention expressed its admiration for Dr. Wiley and his ideals and its loyalty to the pure food law by passing a resolution of thanks and congratulation.

The doctor's talk was in the nature of a heart-to-heart discussion of the law as a measure of common sense, a measure not to complicate machinery or to embarrass any one, but to reassure everyone, to render goods honest and to promote a general confidence in food products such as they cannot enjoy with certain unprincipled men competing with and grinding down reputable manufacturers. He explained the necessity for treating all food products alike in the enforcement of purity and assured the audience that care was being exercised to make the law reasonable in its interpretation. He said, as an evidence of the magnitude of the work that the department has examined not less than 25,000 labels and that the Secretary of Agriculture had consulted with fully 500 experts personally in order to get full instruction on the problems involved. In brief, he said, the whole intent of the label requirement is that labels shall tell the absolute truth and nothing less. Just as the enforcement of meat inspection has created a widespread public confidence so it is hoped to give the public a sense of absolute faith in the other food products.

In view of the fact that Parliament is now trying to provide for the protection of the consumer and the honest canner in Canada something of what he said will be instructive to readers of The Grocer. He said in part :

"Sometimes I should judge from what the newspapers say and what people write to me that all I had to do was just to express a wish and that was all that was necessary in regard to the execution of the law. Now, personally, I would be very glad if that was the case, but in point of fact I am only one of a great many people who have to come to an agreement before anything can be done in connection with this law at all. The Secretary of Agriculture is by act of Congress made the chief police officer in respect to the execution of this law, but the act associates with him two other Cabinet officers with whom he must agree before he can take any action. Then after that is done the whole matter is turned over to another cabinet officer, the Attorney General of the United States, and he is really the one who executes the law. The Department of Agriculture simply secures evidence. The decision as to whether the law has been infracted or not is based on regulations formulated by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. The facts of the case are certified under those regulations and the law to the Attorney General of the United States, and it is only then that the actual enforcement of the law can begin. So that you see that no one person—that any one person has practically very little to do with the enforcement of this law. It is only by consensus of opinion of a great many people that these provisions can be carried into effect, and there was some opposition in the Congress of the United States to this feature. Some of the most earnest advocates of the law thought the power of its execution should be centered in a single individual and should not be spread over a great many as it is. Personally I think it is wise to have a good deal of advice in matters of this kind and that the law is perhaps a stronger law and will do more good as it is at the present time than if it had been more drastic and placed more particularly in the hands of a single individual.

Courts Decide Finally.

"Now, in the next place, you gentlemen know perhaps better than I how many questions have been asked concerning the meaning of this law. You know, too, that the only persons who can interpret the law under our form of government are the judges of the courts. Any final decision respecting the meaning of the law, the extent of its application and everything connected with its enforcement must finally be before the judges of the Federal courts. So that what we can say—any of us, must always be considered to be only an opinion or suggestion and to have no more force than that. Now a great many people have written, with the supposition that the Secretary of Agriculture or some one connected with his Department could answer definitely those points relative to the meaning and application of the law. All that they can do is to offer suggestions as to what they think the law means, and advise as to how they think the law may be obeyed. We can go no further than that. I was urged to come here particularly because there were so many questions to be asked relating to the meaning of the law, relating to what would be considered an infraction of the law, and relating to how the law will be operated. Now, all we can do in those cases is simply to say what any of you could do, to express a personal opinion. It is true that I have carefully studied this law, but not as a lawyer, but rather as one who had to come to certain decisions respecting the composition of food products or the labels which they bore, and not with a view of deciding any legal questions connected with its application at all. And yet we do not seek to evade any responsibility in this line. We are anxious to help, we are anxious to suggest, because we think by conferring with business men as we have been doing ever since this law went into effect, of having hearings, of having them come before us, by getting their views, we had a better idea of what the law really meant, and how it should be executed. All I can do is to make a few general statements in the line of suggestions, which I have made, which, perhaps, will answer almost every question which any gentleman here would like to ask.

Only One Food Product Named.

"The law in general does not apply to any particular product. There is only one food product mentioned in the law and I think it was unfortunate that was mentioned—and that was confectionery. What is true, then, of any one class of food products is true of every class. That makes the first great difficulty in answering questions relating to a specific industry because the answer to the question must apply to every other industry.

"Under this law there can be no exception made in favor of one product as against another. You cannot say that you can prepare one product in one way and that the man who prepares another product would be doing an illegal action if he prepared it in the same way, and this makes the answer to a specific question an answer to a general question, and, therefore, the answer must be given with all the more care, and this is true all along the line.

Preservatives Not Needed.

"In our interpretations we aim to bring the manufacturer into conformity along the one great line that what is in the can shall be honestly what is represented, that it shall be pure and that it shall not be misbranded. We do not desire to tear down and leave chaos, but to point out the way for a reconstruction of our ideals. Many are the instances where scientific treatment of problems has shown manufacturers that they have been treading wrong paths. This is especially true of the matter of preservatives. It is not necessary to add preservatives to products. If foods are prepared honestly, carefully sterilized and carefully sealed, preservatives are entirely unnecessary. We have scores of instances to prove that. It costs a little more, perhaps, but the pure food law aims to make food pure and genuine, not cheap. If manufacturers will only aim to make the best they can, even at slightly greater cost, I am sure they will never find the law a burden, and that instead of regarding it as a burden they will find the Department its best ally."

SELLERS' GUARANTY AND HONEST WORK.

Samuel F. Haserot, of Cleveland, argued strongly for direct and unswerving honesty, as well as practicability in the sellers' guaranty. In part he said :

"If the sellers' guaranty is going to be of service in bringing about a higher standard for food products—and it will—all kinds of people must line up with you to make your guaranty effective, therefore I shall discuss the subject under three heads :

"(1.) The responsibility of the buyer in connection with the sellers' guaranty.

"(2.) The obligation of the seller in connection with the sellers' guaranty.

"(3.) The underlying principle of the sellers' guaranty.

"In a keenly competitive business where brains and ability are matched against ability and brains, of course, you must buy goods right. You have had it dinged into you enough, 'goods well bought are half sold,' but let us get away, just as far as we can from the blind alley of impure, falsely branded and vicious food stuffs, 'not how good, but how cheap,' and turn our faces and our thoughts and our ambitions into the open highway that leads to the goal of 'not how cheap but how good.'

"Not a packer that does not recognize the obligation. He appreciates it. It means much to him. The only question is, does he appreciate it to the fullest extent ? In about ninety-nine cases out of one hundred I believe yes. In that one hundredth case perhaps no. Why ? Because of that same vicious competition that makes him forget his conscience."

The packer presented a form of guaranty and continued :

"A year ago in convention assembled at Atlantic City you voted unanimously in favor of the passage of a National Pure Food Act. Back up your records of a year ago by coming squarely out in the open with your hand outstretched and presenting, not only to the buyer, but to the people of this nation, your sellers' guaranty, written in broad, readable, unequivocal terms so that there can be no question of your platform.

"Then go home and remember the obligation.

"Next to touch upon the third phase of the subject :

The Underlying Principle.

"It can all be summed up in one word, 'honesty.' What was the cause for the demand for a sellers' guaranty ? The passage of the National Pure Food Act. What will the National Pure Food Act do for you ? It will permit the searchlight of public opinion to be cast upon you without the discovery of a flaw. It will open wide the door for a marvelous increase in your business. It will stop the tirade of abuse that has been levelled indiscriminately against you.

A Word to the Press.

"A word here to the press of the country : The question of the desirability of a National Pure Food Act is a dead issue. It is here and we, the producers of canned goods products, believe in it. Don't charge all the crimes in the category of vice against the producer of food products because it makes good head lines. It does not deserve such wholesale condemnation. Is it fair to the packer—the man whose brain is working overtime in order to present to you the delicacies of the garden and orchard every day in the year as naturally as they come to you in the height of the season—to condemn his methods wholly, unreservedly, because of the one hundredth man who needs to be regulated for lack of conscience ?

"Am I right, brother packer ?

"Don't embrace everything in one sweeping arraignment of dishonesty and false dealing. It is not right. It is not true. Rather assist us in teaching the consumer the one needful thing, that canned products, if not used at once, after the can is opened, should not be allowed to remain in the can, but placed in a porcelain, glass, earthen or similar receptacle, away from the chemical changes that produce more instances of difficulty in one day than all the improperly prepared products produced in a year. This business of ours is not as old as grinding wheat in a stone pestle.

"If a can contains Illinois corn, do not label it fancy Maine—tell the truth. If a can contains Alaska red salmon, packed in Alaska, do not label it sockeyes—tell the truth ! If a can of salmon is packed on the Columbia river do not label it Puget Sound—tell the truth ! If a can of peaches is packed in Baltimore do not label it California extra—tell the truth ! If a can of meat, fish or vegetables contains second quality, do not label it prime, choice, extra or fancy—tell the truth ! Do not use the name of a fictitious packer on any label —tell the truth !

Read the Law and Be Good.

"Read the law, be good—tell the truth —and you will not only save the recording angel many an entry, but there will be no danger of fine, imprisonment, sleepless nights or an accumulation of tainted money.

"That's the kind of sellers' guaranty worth while.

"Would you deliberately pull up and throw to the winds the plant that gives you sustenance, life, position, a competency ?

"If not make your sellers' guaranty worth while.

"On the other hand, would you build up and broaden your industry ?

"Then take the eighty-four million people of this country into your confidence. Make them feel that every can that is handed down from the hundreds of thousands of retail shelves carries with it the safeguard of honest intention.

"There is no limit to the extension of your business, no limit to the structure that may be builded upon the foundation of the right kind of a sellers' guaranty, and besides 'putting money in thy purse.' "

Campbell, Acme Can Works, Montreal; J. Clark, of Wm. Clark, Montreal; W. H. Breckenridge, J. Breckenridge, Norton Manufacturing Co., Hamilton.

The Canadian canning industry was well represented as the above list will indicate. No doubht there were many more there, but owing to the manner in which they arrived and were located at the different hotels, it was difficult for The Grocer to obtain complete and accurate list.

Mr Jas. B. Campbell, of the Acme Can Works, was a popular and well-to-the-front favorite among not only the Canadian, but also the American canners and machinery supply men. The Acme can buttons were in evidence all over the armouries, hotels, and every delegate was tagged with them

One of the leading manufacturers of canning machinery informed The Grocer that they had proportionately done a larger business with Canadian packers than with United States visitors.

D. A. Skuse, of the Stecher Lithographing Co., Rochester was in evidence and decidedly popular with Canadian canners. Dan, as his good friends call him, is a frequent visitor to Canada ad that he gets business indicates the good work by his house and energy and knowledge on his part.

The booth of the Stecher Lithographic Co. in the main centre aisle of the armouries was an artistic conception of high merit, and in keeping with the taste displayed in their work. Of delicate trellis work with flowers and leaves entwined the blending of the colors was perfect. The arrangement of the labels, poster cards, calendars and other specimens of their work was well carired out and the large card at the entrance was a beacon light by day and night and visitors rarely passed without complimentary remarks. In booth four representatives of the company were in attendance and "you're welcome" was their greeting. Chas. A. Boller and D. A. Skuse, Rochester; Edgar P. Dagget, Chicago; Mr. Kinzie, Chicago, and Mr. Loeffler, Rochester, looked after the trade.

The Sprague Canning Machinery Co., Daniel G. Trench Co., Chicago, had a display of machinery that was the talk of the exhibition. Nearly one-half of the right side of the armouries was occupied by this company's exhibits and no feature was overlooked. Besides Mr. Trench, a staff of twenty-three assistants and demonstrators was required to show the workings of the exhibits. The large yellow and black badge of the company was conspicuous and every wearer active, attentive and willing to demonstrate. Busy wasn't a name for Mr. Trench and his staff.

The J. M. Paver Company, Indianapolis, Chicago and St. Louis, brokers in canned goods exclusively, occupied a prominent booth in the main centre aisle near the entrance. This company is one of the best known and pushing concerns in the United States and their reputation is built upon the lines of supplying the best of everything in the canning line, on a brokerage basis. John M. Paver, jr., with whom The Grocer had the pleasure of a number of interviews, seemed to be known by everybody in the trade and that he was busy is putting it mildly. Canadian canners were much interested in getting close to their representatives and the future of the Canadian canning industry should hold out prospects for good trade for the J. N. Paver Company.

The entertainments provided by the American Can Co. were on a large and magnificant scale. Their booth at the extreme end of the main aisle was conspicuous by the electric illuminations employed. On Wednesday evening, 13th inst., the delegates to the convention to the number of nearly 2,500 were entertained to a sumptuous banquet at the armouries. This spread was on a scale that must have taxed the caterer to the limit. A novel feature in connection with the affair was the arrangement of the fine large officers' mess rooms into national rooms, decorated respectively in United States, German, French and Turkish colors and styles. Refreshments were served by an army of attendants and the good things, both substantial and liquid, were done ample justice to by all.

On Thursday, St. Valentine's Day, the American Can Co. entertained the delegates to a theatre party, having bought up the Lyric Theatre for the night Camille D'Arville, in "The Belle of London Town," was presented. Souvenirs in the shape of a handsomely decorated can with a thermometer on the side, were passed to the guests. During the entire acts complimentary speeches and thanks were tendered the hosts by the presidents of the different associations connected with the convention. Barring the placing of delegates in the gods, a feature mildly censured, the American Can Co. did the thing up "brown."

The names of Thomas and Mrs. Owens, Bloomfield, were omitted from the list of Canadians present.

DEATH OF ROBERT GOUINLOCK.

Traveler for Perkins, Ince & Co., Toronto, Thirty-three Years.

Robert Gouinlock, of Perkins, Ince & Co., Toronto, one of the oldest travelers in Canada, died on Monday, after an extended illness. The late Robert W. Gouinlock, or as everybody on the road and his numerous customers in Canada knew him, "Bob" Gouinlock, was one of the oldest grocery travelers in the country, at any rate, the oldest out of Toronto, was born in Paris, Ont., March 3rd, 1848, and would have been fifty-nine years old next month. Coming to Toronto he worked a short time for Charles Moore & Co., founder of the present firm of Warren Bros. & Co., later Geo. Michie & Co., finally joining the traveling staff of Perkins, Ince & Co. Toronto, in 1873. For thirty-three years he carried the samples of that firm, a period of time that represents strongly his value to his firm and the confidence of his customers, and until his death last Monday he was heart and soul with his people. Jas. Ince, speaking to The Grocer, said: "Bob Gouinlock was more to us than atraveler, he was our intimate friend. His name was synonomous with honor. He was one of the most honorable of men, charitable and kind-hearted. To say that we feel the loss of a traveler is saying little, we lose a life-long friend."

The late Mr. Gouinlock was an active member from 1870 until recent years of the Toronto Rowing Club, and took considerable interest in yachting, but shooting was his favorable pastime, and over the dogs in the fall his expeditions extended to many parts of Ontario and into Manitoba. He was one of the pioneer sportsmen in the Georgian Bay district, being among the very first to appreciate the summer beauties of that wonderful land. At the time of the Fenian raid he was a member of the 38th Batt. at Paris, and while he did not go to the front he did night sentry duty at the bridge near Paris.

He was the second of a large family, including Messrs. John, James and George, the last the architect of the exhibition, the Temple and other buildings —and five sisters, namely, Mrs. Galloway, Gladstone, Man.; Mrs. J. R. Muir, of this city; Mrs. James Monteith, of Brandon, Man.; Mrs. Watson, of this city, and Miss Lily Gouinlock. The funeral took place on Wednesday from Mrs. Muir's residence, 9 Barton avenue, Toronto, to the Union Station, thence by noon train for Paris, Ont., to the family burying ground. The deceased was never married.

BROKERS ARE CHAMPIONS.

Head the Toronto Grocery Hockey League and Get the Wilson Trophy.

The Brokers are again champions of the Toronto Wholesale Grocers' Hockey League.

Last friday night at Varsity Rink, the Brokers defeated Davidson & Hay 4 goals to 1, giving them a good lead for the Tillson trophy. The game was a poor exhibition of the winter sport.. The teams lined up as follows:

Brokers Win Championship.

Monday evening, Feb. 18th, at Varsity Rink, before a large crowd the

THE LATE ROBERT W. GOUINLOCK.

Brokers defeated T. Kinnear & Co., their old rivals by 6 goals to 8, giving them the championship of the Wholesale Grocers' Hockey League, and winning the handsome Tillson trophy, which was presented by the Tillson's Pan Dried Oats Company.

This is the third year the Brokers have landed this championship. They are a steady bunch of players and play well together, their forward line having played together for three winters. They are Tom Webber, Ade Millman and Billy May. Charlie Morrow and Percy Millman are two of the best defence men in the league, having lots of weight and speed, the former also plays point for the senior Argonauts, Ferguson in goal and Thompson at river have also played good hockey all winter.

The game started at 8.30 with a rush and fast hockey was played all through, ten minutes was played before the first goal was scored. Charlie Morrow taking the puck from mid ice and passing Kinnear's heavy defence. Brokers scored two more before half time, Tom Webber scoring one and Ade Millman the other. Shortly after the second half started Gordon Humphrey made a pretty rush, passing to Tom Kinnear, who scored the first for his team. Both these men played brilliant hockey and are without doubt two of the best players in the league. Brokers then added three more goals which were scored by Billy May. This ended their scoring, and just before time was up Kinnear & Co. netted one more, making the score at full time 6 to 2. Teams lined up as follows:

Brokers—H. Ferguson, goal; C. Morrow, point; P. Millman, cover point; Thompson, rover; W. May, right forward; T. Webber, centre; A. Millman, left forward.

T. Kinnear & Co.—Legge, goal; G. Humphrey, point; T. Kinnear, cover point; W. Ford, rover; C. Rennie, right forward; Jefferies, centre; Hocker, left forward.

Referee, S. W. Wyllie.

HAMILTON.

(From Our Special Correspondent)

Some of our wholesale grocers have taken quite an interest in providing amusements for the suffering public. H. C. Beckett, it is said, is very largely interested in a new roller skating rink, where the money just rolls in.

Another show that makes James St. look more like New York is the Red Mill, a new variety entertainment under the able management of Alex. Fraser, the genial city traveler for Balfour & Co.

James Price and J. J. Hill (not the railway magnates) of Reny St., both good grocery men, have just returned from a hunting trip. Tall stories about shooting are now on top.

Hamilton grocers all report business booming nearly every day. Some new manufacturing industry is announced and very large ones at that.

RETAILERS' BANQUET.

Grocer F. C. Higgins Presides and is Re-elected President.

The Toronto Retail Merchants' Association held its annual banquet on Tuesday night. F. C. Higgins, one of Toronto's tip-top grocers, presided, and advocated cheap power and light for the city. Secretary E. M. Trowern assailed the Dominion Government for not establishing a retail merchants' bureau and blamed the departmental stores for the street car overcrowding.

These officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, F. C. Higgins; vice-presidents, R. W. Dockery, Walter Main; treasurer, Wm. Dineen; secretary, E. M. Trowern.

WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

Radical and far-reaching changes were made last week by the retail conventions which met in Winnipeg. It will be remembered that a year ago the Retail Hardware Association of the west and the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada decided to affiliate for the accomplishment of certain common objects and for that reason elected in joint session a common executive to be known as the Western Board. This Western Board in turn affiliated with the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, an organization whose headquarters are in Toronto.

The conventions held in Winnipeg last week swept all these affiliations out of existence. In the first place the Western Board met and repudiated the affiliation with the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada. It also decided to disband. In the second place the conventions approved of the action of the Western Board and it was decided that the affiliation between the two western associations should be at an end. The two western associations are therefore absolutely independent from this time on. Their relations are friendly and no doubt they will often act together to attain common objects, the fact that their head offices are in the same building making this easy and convenient. But in some important matters their interests conflict and for this reason absolute independence has been decided upon.

CANADA'S NATIONAL PORT.

Montreal's advantages as a port for ocean vessels ; the general prosperity of the country and the progress of the Board of Trade are subjects dealt with in the 64th annual report of the council of the Montreal Board of Trade. Admitting that 1905 was a prosperous year for the country, the report continues that 1906 surpassed even that year of bounty, and Canada's prosperity was never at a higher point. The report reads in part :

"In dairy produce, Canada has, during the year, excelled any previous record, the cheese and butter exported to Great Britain during the past season being valued at upwards of twenty-six million dollars, and, as prices for these products have ranged high throughout the year, the profit to the farmer has been very satisfactory.

"The value of cattle exported during the year amounted to eight million dollars.

"The advantages of the port of Montreal are now, it is satisfactory to note, much more widely recognized and its total tonnage shows a satisfactory increase over that of the preceding season of navigation, the value of the exports for the year ending 31st December, 1906, being $89,616,459, against $73,786,548 for 1905, while the imports were $89,376,259, against $80,345,420 the preceding year, each being about double the amount of the figures for 1906. The returns for the Dominion being for the fiscal year ending 30th June, exact comparison with the Montreal figures is not possible, but taking the Dominion returns for the year ended 30th June, 1906, which give the total exports as $256,586,630, and the imports as $294,286,015, and comparing these with the Montreal figures for the calendar year 1906, above quoted, it will be seen that about one-third of the export and import trade of the country passed through the port of Montreal, which clearly demonstrates the fact that Montreal is the national as well as the natural Atlantic port of the Dominion."

NORMAL CONDITIONS IN WEST.

Once again normal conditions prevail in the west. It would be idle to deny that up to the first week in February the winter was exceptionally severe—it was in fact the worst in twenty years—and the resulting losses to the ranches in the Far West and to all classes through the tie-up of the railways have been heavy. At the same time people in the east and south should take with much more than the proverbial pinch of salt the stories which have been telegraphed from Winipeg by a few unscrupulous correspondents anxious to offer saleable "copy"; and they should know that during the month of February mild weather has prevailed and the railways are now grappling successfully with the tie-up in transportation. They were caught unprepared by the worst winter in a generation and the disasters which followed will surely result in provision for adequate equipment in future.

With a return to mild weather the branch lines have been opened up and trains on the main lines are running almost on schedule time. The fuel scarcity is rapidly being relieved in all parts of the west and merchants are getting delivery of their goods from the wholesale houses. A great amount of money is necessarily tied up in the country through the inability of the railways to move more than a small proportion of the 1906 wheat crop. It is evident that the railways will be busy with the 1906 crop almost up to the date when the 1907 crop commences to move; but with the opening of the lake and rail routes heavy shipments of grain will commence and money will again be plentiful from the Great Lakes to the Rockies. Eastern wholesalers and manufacturers should not permit themselves to be alarmed by foolish newspaper stories for they who know the conditions in the west best are the men who have most confidence in its immediate future. There is no reason for alarm. Normal conditions again prevail.

Canada's fish harvest in 1905, according to the figures contained in the Government report just issued, was the most profitable in the history of the Dominion by about three and three-quarters million dollars, nearly six millions larger than in 1904. The greatest previous year was 1901. Last year is not likely to look nearly so plump when it is drawn in figures to decorate another Blue Book, chiefly because of the small salmon run.

Despite the advances in tea which have taken place, the brands put up by E. D. Marceau Company, are selling at old prices. Some special offers are also made.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Fish—Revised.
Evaporated apples—Advanced.
Beans—Advanced.
Honey—Decline.

Montreal, Feb. 21, 1907.

A fairly good sorting business is being done at present. Stocks in the hands of retailers are becoming depleted and renewal orders comprise the bulk of trade being transacted. Spring buying has hardly yet commenced, although some inquiry for Easter goods is reported. The end of the Lenten season comes earlier than usual this year. Now that Lent is in full swing there is a stronger demand for fish, syrups and such lines.

Sugar this week is quiet and steady. No change in prices is expected at the moment. Syrups, as stated, are in excellent demand, manufacturers being particularly busy. Teas are firm, but there is no great movement. Coffees and spices are selling as well as ever they do at this season. Fair trade is reported in dried fruits. Currants are in good demand and prunes are selling. Evaporated apples are higher, 11c now being asked, with indications pointing to still higher figures. Beans are selling at $1.50 now, an advance of 5c. Peels are firm, while honey is easier. Collections in the city are reported good, but only average fair in the country.

SUGAR—Sugar this week is featureless, the market being very quiet. Jobbers report a few small sales.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Reports on molasses from the Barbadoes state that choice is selling at 17c and fancy at 16c. Offerings are light, these being nominal values. Syrups are selling very freely. Manufacturers report stronger demand than ever before experienced.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—Little change is noticeable in the situation in dried fruits. Some houses are doing more business than their competitors, but on the whole trade is but fair. In raisins good demand is reported for Valencias at figures quoted. Sultanas are out of reach almost, and quality of the stock offering is none too good. Prunes are selling more freely, while demand for currants is satisfactory. Stocks of nuts in France and Spain are reported as being just about cleaned up.

EVAPORATED APPLES—A very strong feeling is noticeable in the market for evaporated apples. As prophesied in The Grocer prices are climbing higher and higher. Nothing less than 11c will be taken for anything like good stock to-day. Even at this figure wholesalers are not anxious to sell as stocks are limited and once cleaned out it is hard to renew at decent prices.

BEANS—Beans continue strong. Advices from bean growing districts show that holdings are light and that prices are gradually climbing.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—A sorting business is being done in canned goods. Jobbers have every confidence in the situation at present, feeling that things will work out satisfactorily. All houses are short of every line with the exception of corn, peas and pears. For these three lines they anticipate a good demand. Strawberries there are none. Peaches, plums, cherries and gooseberries are very short. Something is being done in tomatoes at $1.17½ and $1.20.

TORONTO.—The week has brought to the surface no change in the canned goods situation. All lines are regarded as firm, and the canners' new prices are gradually prevailing. With regard to tomatoes the view that prevails among the jobbers is that the market will remain firm, but a considerable advance is not looked for. At the canners' convention in Buffalo last week President Geo. G. Bailey of the Atlantic States Packers' Association, reviewing the past year, said :

"About the time of our last year's session tomatoes were largely in the hands of speculators, the market was feverish, transactions confirmed, so far as distributors were concerned, to immediate requirements, and a disposition on the part of such packers as still had stock to sell at a few cents per dozen under speculators' prices. There was just enough held by packers and others outside the breastworks to supply the market long enough to bring disaster to the large holders ; the price fell to almost, if not quite, a normal one, and tomatoes went again into consumption. A fair volume of business during the balance of the year left considerable of a carry-over, which, on account of something less than a normal pack in 1906, was practically taken from first hands with the 1906 pack before the first of the year, leaving the market to-day in as healthy a condition as it has been in many years."

This does not gibe well with the statement of a Chicago paper that the 1906 U. S. pack was over 50 per cent. larger than that of 1905 and the Canadian pack 35 per cent. larger.

Salmon are in good demand for the Lenten trade. An advance for the best brands is talked of and some jobbers are quite out of them and have been unable to get more, otherwise prices are unchanged.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:

Evaporated apples—Still higher.
Sugar—Steady.
All teas—Very firm.
Canned Salmon—In demand.
Butter—A little firmer.

Toronto, Feb. 21, 1907.

Business is still on a sorting basis and collections are nothing to boast of, though there is not much complaining. While no lines are in special demand some report a steady output of canned goods and especially of salmon, which, it is said, is entering more largely than ever before into the Lenten trade. It is a noticeable fact in the city that canned salmon is now prominent in nearly every grocery window. Some jobbers here are quite out of the leading line and there is a tendency on the part of some to advance prices to $1.85 and even $1.90.

Sugar is steady, though far from strong. The ability of the Canadian refiners to hold on has inspired the belief in some quarters that prices will not further decline. Evaporated apples continue to harden and some jobbers are not bothering about them. Fair demand is reported for Valencia raisins. All teas continue very fine and there is a brisk demand.

TEA—Values, especially of low grade and moderate grades, continue to advance. The London market is said to be feverish. Demand locally is exceptionally brisk, induced by higher prices.

COFFEE—Demand is fair and prices are unchanging. In view of the large crops higher prices are not expected. The average of quality demanded in Canada is much higher than in the States, and is improving. In the States the common price is 25c., and in Canada the ordinary coffee user expects to pay about 40c. The very highest grade of coffee now comes from Jamaica, and almost the lowest grade also.

SUGAR—The unusual situation of a firm, and even hardening, European beet market and a declining market for cane raws in New York was continued to the end of last week and the situation is little altered this. Refiners are offering 2c. c.o.f. for Cuban centrifugals 96 degrees test and sellers are asking 2 1-16 but it is believed would take 2 1-32. 2 1-16 for Cuban centrifugals is equal to 3. 42 duty paid New York, and beet at 8s. 10d. f.o.b. Hamburg is equal to 3.84 duty paid New York, showing a disparity of .42. This is a short week in New York on account of Washingtons birthday and changes are not expected.

The Cuba crop receipts continue to rise, being 65,000 for last week against 61,000 tons the week before and 50,000 tons for the corresponding week last year. The visible Cuba crop to date is 458,836 tons against 212,907 tons at same time last year.

Locally, sugars have not declined, and the refiners' ability to resist the market pressure thus far induces some to think that sugars are at low prices for this season.

DRIED FRUITS—The feature of the market is evaporated apples, and jobbers are now getting from 10c. to 10½c. They are a scare article. Valencia raisins are in fair demand. Sultanas are practically cleaned up in Turkey; a fortnight ago only 400 tons remained.

SEEDS—The crop is now pretty well out of farmers hands. Canada will probably be importing red clover this year instead of exporting as usual. England and Germany both had large crops, and England is this year an exporter. Prices are unchanged.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 19.

Business is quite brisk at present, and the volume of trade passing is most satisfactory. The country roads are in fairly good condition and access to the business centres is now quite easy. During a mild spell early this week there was quite a large movement in apples, the growers rushing in their stock to the commission. One of the latter received a consignment of 200 barrels of northern spys. The stock was nearly all No. 1, but the high price of four dollars per barrel prevents rapid sales. In canned goods prices are steady and the sales are quite large, more particularly of fruit and vegetables. Cranberries are very scarce and none are offering at wholesale. The retailers who have small stocks on hand are asking 15 cents per quart for them. Potatoes are now fairly steady at 80 to 85 cents per bushel. There is a good stock of oranges and lemons on the market, and the demand is pretty good. Valencia oranges are unusually low in price, some retailers offering them at five cents per dozen on bargain days to catch passing trade.

FISH—With the Lenten season now on the fish markets are exceedingly firm and it is expected that they will continue so. There is a good demand for fish in the American markets and it is thought that much of the fish shipped from provincial ports finds its way back to Canada, for distribution in the west. The following will give an idea of the quantity of fish sent to the American market, this shipment being on one steamer from Yarmouth last week.

Live lobsters, 273 crates; fresh smelts, 189 boxes; boneless codfish, 611 boxes; canned lobsters, 100 cases; salt herring, 132 barrels salt codfish, 114 cases; clams, 13 barrels; French salmon, 2 boxes; live eels, 7 barrels. Fifty cases of canned lobsters for Hamburg via Boston.

Live lobsters are seling in Boston at $32 per crate.

The local market is well stocked with fish, but the fresh article is nearly all cold storage. The recent cold weather on the banks has made it bad for the fishermen and in consequence the catches are very limited so far.

Speculators are buying up all the potatoes available in Annapolis county, and are paying the farmers 75 cents per bushel at his door for the stock. It is thought that the potatoes are being bought up for export.

Eggs are coming down in price and some good fresh stock can now be purchased for 30 cents per dozen. There is a slight increase in the receipts and it is expected that they wil continue to show an improvement from now on.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 21, 1907.)

Normal weather conditions once again prevail in the west and the branch lines of railway are open again for traffic. Retailers are getting delivery of their goods and are now receiving shipments which have been weeks on the way. Except for a revision of the prices of canned fruits and vegetables, there have been no important changes in the local market.

CANNED GOODS—Prices of fruit and vegetables have been revised. We quote:

Moss Brothers & Co., have succeeded Ernest J. Moss as general merchants at Shanghai, with branches at Hankow and Santuao. E. J. Moss will be manager of the new company.

A. T. Crockford, Brantford, has sold his grocery business to Greenshields Bros, of Atwood. Mr. Crockford will probably go west, where he has a good business opportunity awaiting him.

William Clark, Montreal, is mailing to the retail trade a handsome catalogue of his canned meats. It is printed in red and black on fine paper and is illustrated with cuts of many lines. A post card to William Clark, Montreal, will bring one.

John C. Black, manager of the Canadian business of H. J. Heinz, spent some time in Montreal with Hudon, Hebert & Co., agents for Canada. Mr. Black reports business booming as far as "the 57" are concerned. He is pushing in Canada the company's dill pickle, which is meeting with great favor.

PACIFIC COAST TRADE AND FOOD STUFF NEWS

(By Canadian Grocer Special Correspondent.)

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 14, '07.

Much satisfaction was felt in the wholesale trade this week when the announcement was made that Mr. Hardwell, freight rate expert on the Railway Commission, had decided that Vancouver to Nelson rates should be 62 per cent. of the prevailing rates, Winipeg to Nelson, this, in the rough being about a reversal of heretofore prevailing rates.

But some of the wholesale grocer's freight experts have been doing a little figuring on the basis of the new tariff, and they find that in some lines the rates have actually increased. This will work in serious difficulty in many ways, unless adjusted. The anomalies have arisen by the abolition of all special rates which have been in force formerly, on certain commodities. For instance, condensed cream,l.c.l., was rated 4th class, now everything in that line is fixed at third-class, and 62 per cent. of 3rd class rate from Winnipeg to Nelson, is more than the 4th class from Vancouver to Nelson under the old tariff. However, with the exceptions noted, the wholesale trade is on the whole well satisfied with the change, which will be a benefit to local trade.

Continued suspension of regular transportation is working havoc with trade. Not only are all goods shipped out liable to be indefinitely held up, because of the many interruptions to rail traffic eastward, but all goods in transit to replenish stocks have been delayed and their arrival is a matter of uncertainty.

At the present time there is no coal oil in stock in the city, while condensed milk has practically all been absorbed as well. In other lines similar shortages have occurred. Conditions later on will be much worse, for up-to-date the stocks in hand have been in most cases running low, and nothing coming in, the demoralization of the regular run of trade will be complete in a few weeks, for the congestion of freight caused by the snow and cold weather, will be in its turn sufficient to disorganize the transportation facilities even after the railways get running properly.

In local grocery markets stocks of canned goods have been well up to all demands, the dealers having been well stocked up early in the season. Prices are now firmly on basis of eastern association quotations, no cutting being done in any lines. Ruling quotations for tomatoes are $1.50; corn and beans, $1.15; peas, $1.05 and $1.10.

In dried fruits, stocks are readily replenished from California. Prices are very high, and higher quotations are looked for in prunes, because of the extreme high prices of other lines, and scarcity of stocks in larger sizes of prunes. The market on evaporated apples is hardly up to outside supplies, for sales are now made at 9 and 10c, while it would cost that to replace stocks. Apricots are 23c, as against 15c a year ago,—and peaches 15c as against 10 and 11c a year ago. Prunes rule from 4¼ to 8¼c, with a jump of 2c per lb. on the larger sizes of 50 to 60's because of their scarcity, Smaller sizes are plentiful. Raisins are in big supply, and merchants are well stocked up. Present prices for 1lb. cartons are 11½c to 12c.

Rice is slightly lower, selling now at $78 per ton, with plentiful stocks in hand.

Produce markets are in more difficult position than any other. The market is of course, practically bare of eastern creamery butter. Australian selling at 32½c, and local creamery, the latter in very limited compass, selling at 35c to the trade, is all the fresh stock. Some small quantities of local dairy, fresh-made are in hand to sell at 31c.

Eggs have continued scarce, because some shipments from the south have not arrived. The price on these has been about 40c, though some lower quotations are now expected. Local fresh eggs are becoming quite plentiful, owing to fine mild weather. The price is still 40 to 45c, though to-morrow's market at New Westminster may bring the figure down considerably. There are no eastern eggs to be had, and on one dares bring them forward.

Bacon and hams, U.S. packers, which is the only stock, are away up to 19 and 20c, with prospects of even higher prices. The present quotation on pure leaf lard, in 3's, 5's, and 10's is 14½c. There is some eastern Canadian lard being brought forward, but price is not yet quoted.

Flour prices remain firm, the quotation being 5.30 to $5.60 per barrel. The fact that American mills have advanced their prices has not yet affected the market here.

In fruits and vegetables the market shows but little variation. Oranges are coming in freely from California, the price being $3.25 and $3.50. Apples are in very small compass, and much of the stock, especially in fancy lines, comes from Oregon and Washington. Prices have gone up considerably, with the advancing season. To the trade, quotations are now from 75c to $2.50 per box.

Fresh California vegetables, radishes, peas, beans, etc., are coming in, and the supply of fresh lettuce from Victoria green-houses is very liberal.

Ashcroft potatoes are scarce, and still quoted at $25, with every likelihood of going higher. Local potatoes are also going to be higher for the rest of the season, the cold weather having done serious damage to the stocks as noted previously.

Dupries, Sweet & Co., general merchants, at North Bay, are offering to compromise at 45c. on the dollar.

PERSONALS

Jas. MacKie, grocer, Oshawa, is ill at his daughter's home in Toronto. Arrangements are being made to dispose of his business.

Frank Sayer is the new manager of the grocery department of the White Packing Co., Stratford, in succession to Geo. Callum.

C. L. Marshall, manager of the brokerage department of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., was in New York several days this week.

C. M. McCallum, Brampton, is a young man, but the travelers, so they say, are coming to regard him as one of Ontario's best grocers.

W. J. Redstone, buyer for Marshall Bros.' big store in St. Johns, Newfoundland, is in Montreal this week placing orders for his firm.

Christie, Brown & Co., Toronto, were granted a permit this week to erect a five-storey factory immediately south of their present premises.

John Gilbert, grocer, Kingston, has been kept in the house a couple of weeks with a sore toe. He had to get a doctor to it before it would let up.

Mrs. T. B. Greening, wife of Mr. Greening, of the Pure Gold Co., Toronto, died suddenly Wednesday morning at her home, 142 St. George St., Toronto.

Jno. T. Logan, of W. H. Dunn & Co., Montreal, is in Toronto, giving a fortnight to agitating in favor of Cailler's chocolate. It is a mighty palatable confection.

Geo. Callum, manager of the grocery department of the White Packing Co., Stratford, has taken a position with Lind, Kerrigan & Co., London, to represent them west of London.

H. A. Howey, Stratford, one of T. H. Estabrook's Red Rose tea excelsiors in western Ontario, was in Toronto last week paying his monthly respects to the local manager, Geo. H. Campbell.

H. Gilbert Nobbs, Canadian manager of Holbrooks Ltd., was in Winnipeg last week interviewing the wholesale trade. Mr. Nobbs called at the Winnipeg office of The Canadian Grocer.

"J. S. Ireland, Mount Forest, is a genial fellow," said a grocery traveler to The Grocer this week. "All travelers who call on him leave with a cheerful, satisfied air, whether they take away an order or not. They can't help it; his smile is contagious,"

The father of Mrs. Jos. Ryder, grocer, Kingston, died at Watertown, N.Y., recently, and the remains were brought to his daughter's home for burial. On the way to the cemetery the hearse horses ran away. The hearse was demolished and the casket thrown to the roadside.

C. H. Meredith, manager of the Stewart Co., manufacturing confectioners, Toronto, has been in Winnipeg a couple of weeks looking after the firm's business there. He will be back this week. During his absence, O. D. Hodgins, the firm's representative in eastern Ontario and Quebec, has been directing things at the factory.
